River Floods Bladensburg; Guard Called In Road Jam

All Traffic Halted on Highways; Cellars Are Filled.

Rescue Squad Boat PatrolsDangerArea

Water Grows Deeper as Nearly 5 Feet Covers Streets.

Swollen by unusually heavy rainfall and thaw, the Eastern Branch of the Anacostia River overflowed its banks at Bladensburg yesterday, and by dusk had crept to a depth of 4½ feet over the lower streets of the town.

Traffic was completely blocked over the main highways, and last night the American Automobile Association reported that the nearest available thoroughfare through which automobiles could be rerouted was the Largo road, through Seat Pleasant into Capitol Heights, thence to the District.

As the flood waters poured into Bladensburg basements, Defense highway was closed to all traffic at the Peace Cross, and volunteer firemen stood guard, ready to face any possible emergency.

The Bladensburg Rescue Squad patrolled the flood area in a boat as the water grew deeper last night.

There is no immediate danger of floods of any sort in Washington, the Weather Bureau stated last night. The rise in the Potomac and the Anacostia here is normal, in keeping with the precipitation and melting snow, officials pointed out.

Rainfall here was unusual for this time of year, officials at the Weather Bureau stated. It was measured at 2½ inches from 8:30 a. m. Thursday until 9:30 a. m. yesterday.

47 Is High Mark.

Washington saw the sun for the first time in more than 24 hours yesterday as mounting temperatures melted what was left of the heavy holiday snowfall, reducing the Capital's white carpeting to slush.

Yesterday's highest temperature was 47 degrees at 2 p. m., and predictions for today were for cloudy weather and declining mercury this afternoon and night.

The District Sewer Department kept crews busy supervising drainage in various sections of the city, but yesterday only one complaint of a flooded basement was received.

A lone casualty from the remnants of the ice early yesterday morning was Mrs. George Levin, 29, of the 2800 block of Thirty-second street southeast, who slipped on the pavement near her home.

She was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians treated her for a possible fracture of her wrist.

Marshy Hope Rising.

Flood dangers arose in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and in a section of Philadelphia, it was reported by the Associated Press.

At Federalsburg, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, it was reported that Marshy Hope Creek was rising at the rate of an inch every 15 minutes and that a flood, similar to the disastrous inundation of last September appeared imminent.

Mrs. Margaret Lewis, who directed Red Cross work in Federalsburg in September, was ordered to "stand by." She contacted units in towns near Federalsburg and directed workers to be in readiness for instant call.

A threat also appeared in Cecil County, Md., where Big Elk Creek was high. Some highways were covered with water while ice piled up against bridges. Traffic west of Elkton was being diverted by way of Rising Sun and Conowingo.

Monocacy Up 7 Feet.

The Potomac River was above normal in western Maryland. The Monocacy was up 7 feet north of Frederick.

A mass of ice floes crashed seaward on flood waters of the James River, the Associated Press reported. It was believed the river would rise 15 feet above normal. Shipping in Richmond harbor was paralyzed.

A dozen homes in the Eastwick section of southwest Philadelphia were isolated. Residents were forced to take to rowboats in several instances. Dikes built along Darby Creek with WPA funds failed as protection. Water was reported to be 11 feet deep in surrounding fields.

While the East confronted rain and sleet storms, the Middle West faced the prospect of a bitterly cold week-end. Zero and sub-zero weather was in store for the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin and most of Iowa and slightly higher temperatures were forecast elsewhere in the Midwest.

President's 'Wise Man' Was Harvard Teacher

The unnamed "wise philosopher," whose words President Roosevelt chose to conclude his message to a joint session of Congress last night, was Josiah Royce, Harvard professor from 1882 until his death in 1916.

Royce was born in California in 1855 and studied at California University, Goettingen, Leipzig and Johns Hopkins. He was an intimate of William James, the author, and was a man of broad scholarship. He is said to have been highly stimulating to undergraduates.

He taught the President philosophy.

Italy, Ethiopia Reported Torn By Civil Strife

Fascist Mutineers Kill 1, Report Says; Revolt of Tribes Hinted.

By the Associated Press.

Internal discord in both Italy and Ethiopia was reported unofficially yesterday.

The French newspaper L'Oeuvre said in an Italian dispatch that soldiers about to be sent to Africa mutinied and killed a Fascist militiaman. This report met an official and emphatic denial in Rome.

Ethiopia was worried over what appeared to be an imminent revolt in northwest Gojjam Province and dispatched 5,000 troops there. Italians were said by officials in Addis Ababa to have stirred up the trouble.

Mussolini Speech Read.

Rome, Jan. 3 (AP).—Premier Mussolini showed his iron hand at home today by having Fascist chiefs throughout the nation read his 1925 speech saying, in effect, "I am boss."

In this address a decade ago to parliament, Il Duce asserted, "when two elements conflict and are irreconcilable, the solution is force."

Fascist officials vigorously denied a dispatch published by the Paris anti-Fascist newspaper L'Oeuvre that Italian soldiers, prepared to depart for Africa, had mutinied at Lugo di Romagna.

The l'Oeuvre report said a Fascist militiaman was killed and that many arrests were made when civilians joined soldiers in the demonstration against war.

Fascists said Mussolini's choice today of his "force" speech was without significance, but was merely a periodical "mental bracer" for the people. Public enthusiasm, they asserted, is proof against misgivings for the future or doubts of success in the war and economic siege.

Authoritative sources disclosed the Italian armies are going to use "stronger action" against Ethiopians.

Shocked at Beheading.

There was shock and indignation against the alleged beheading of an Italian pilot captured by the Ethiopians, but these sources did not say whether they meant gas and chemicals would be employed.

Continuing the fight against sanctions, Il Duce called four powerful Fascist bodies into session. War plans also will be mapped.

The defense council will meet February 4, the cabinet January 30 and both the central corporation committee and the Fascist grand council January 18.

The busy dictator also received Bernardo D. Attolico, his ambassador to Berlin, presumably to get a first-hand account of Germany's likely attitude if new sanctions are adopted.

Revolt Imminent.

Addis Ababa, Jan. 3 (AP).—A threatened revolt in Gojjam Province added to the difficulties today of the Ethiopian government, already fighting Italian invasion on two borders.

Five thousand warriors were dispatched from Addis Ababa to attempt to put down the insurgents. There have already been numerous clashes in the rich northwest province.

Ethiopian officials charged Italians were attempting to incite the natives to revolt, urging them not to pay imperial taxes. The situation was described as decidedly more serious.

This development found the government already worried over reports of setbacks to Ras Mulugheta, minister of war, who is leading an army in the north, and the failure to hear from Ras Kassa, another northern leader.

Informed sources said because of the unrest in Gojjam, Emperor Haile Selassie has indefinitely postponed a visit to the northern front from his field headquarters at Dessye.

An international Red Cross representative and the Swedish consul left by airplane for Dolo to investigate the Italian bombardment Monday of a Swedish ambulance unit.

Bills to Tighten Neutrality Sent To Both Houses

Measures Set Mandatory Embargo Upon Arms to All Belligerents.

By Felix Bruner.

Almost identical bills introduced in the Senate and the House yesterday would make it mandatory upon the President to prohibit shipment of arms to all belligerent countries. In addition, they would give the President wide powers to limit shipment of other materials, financial transactions and travel on vessels of belligerents and to make other drastic restrictions to keep this country out of war.

Intended to establish a permanent neutrality policy for the United States, the measures embody provisions agreed upon by President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and Chairmen Pittman and McReynolds of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee, respectively. The bills were introduced by the committee chairmen.

The bills would repeal the present temporary neutrality law, which will expire February 29.

The outstanding provision of the bills makes it mandatory for the President upon the outbreak of war to proclaim the existence of the war "and it thereafter shall be unlawful to export, or attempt to export, arms, ammunition, or implements of war from any place in the United States to any belligerent country, named in the proclamation, or to any neutral country for transshipment to or for the use of any such belligerent country."

Further strengthening the neutrality policy, the measures require that the President must extend such embargoes to other countries as or when they become involved in war. This requirement that equal treatment must be given all belligerents was one of the points at issue agreed upon after the State Department abandoned its insistence that the President should be given discretionary powers relative to inclusion of belligerents who may be-

Colorful Crowd Sees President, But Tails and Toppers Are Few

Even the Women Packed in Galleries Forgot Formal Dress; Some Wear Frock Coats; Roper in Baggy Gray Pants.

No President ever had a better stage than Franklin D. Roosevelt graced last night as he stood at the Speaker's dais in the great chamber of the House of Representatives. And no audience ever followed an orator more closely than did that one.

From the standpoint of a European visitor, accustomed to pomp and formality, the audience must have seemed a strange one.

President Roosevelt wore a frock coat and so did the other principals in the drama—Vice President Garner and Speaker Joe Byrns. But the 500 odd Senators and Representatives were in their working clothes. A tuxedo broke the monotony of mufti in the chamber, but it was worn by a retired Representative—John Miller, of South Dakota.

A newspaperwoman, making the rounds yesterday to learn how the cabinet and congressional wives planned to dress for last night's big show, was eagerly asked:

"What is Mrs. Roosevelt wearing?"

Told that she would wear a dark afternoon gown and a dark hat, they chorused:

"So will we."

And that explains, in part, the somber effect of the galleries during the President's momentous speech last night. Mrs. Roosevelt unknowingly had struck the sartorial note of the evening. The only color, so far as the wives of officials were concerned, was to be found in the olive green gown of Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and the burgundy red costume of Mrs. Byrns, wife of the Speaker of the House.

A tremendous crowd was gath-

Partisan Tinge Colors Views On '36 Message

'Magnificent,' Says Byrns, but Snell Describes It as 'Political.'

The Capitol buzzed with comment on the President's message last night, with Democrats lavish in praise of his neutrality stand and New Deal defense, but with Republicans more vehement in their charge of "politics."

Democratic applause in the course of the President's speech was reflected in what they had to say about it later, while Republican laughter at his references to budget-balancing hopes, and "the state of the Union," found voice in their verbal reaction.

This is what they said, after it was over:

Speaker Byrns: It was a magnificent message. It presented the issues of the next campaign in a forceful maner that will be difficult, if not impossible, to answer.

House Minority Leader Snell: What he said tonight proves 100 per cent my prediction earlier in the day that it would be a political speech. But since hearing the speech, I am sorry I objected to his making it.

Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson: The message is confined to a discussion of the "state of the Union," and leaves for future occasion specific suggestions touching legislation. There is an emphatic declaration for continuing the policy of neutrality respecting present and threatened wars between foreign countries. The President also strongly defends the New Deal and challenges its opponents in words that ring with confidence and defiance.

Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary: A dramatic speech, but it did not discuss the pressing problems of the day.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, of the Republican National Committee: Aside from the neutrality feature of the address, the speech was what we expected it to be. It did not "give to the Congress information of the State of the Union" nor "recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge neces-

Italians Resent Roosevelt Slap At 'Expansion'

President Shows Lack of Knowledge of Situation, Says Spokesman.

By the United Press.

Rome (Saturday), Jan. 4.—Leaders today frankly were irritated at passage in President Roosevelt's message to Congress bearing on "nations seeking expansion."

The paragraph in the message urging nations "seeking outlets for trade, for population, or even for their own peaceful contributions to the progress of civilization," to be patient, was taken as directed at Italy.

"It is to be regretted that President Roosevelt shows insufficient knowledge of Italy's case and her true situation," a spokesman said. "Italy was patient with Ethiopia for more than 40 years, but patience proved useless because of Ethiopia's continuous provocations and her methodical breach of agreements.

"Italy tried a policy of 'peaceful negotiation' with Ethiopia for years, as is proved by our treaty of friendship with that country.

"We also have treaties of friendship with France and Britain, but they have not resulted in any reward or satisfaction for our admittedly honest aspirations and legitimate needs."

"Italy has no alternative but to help herself with her own hands," the spokesman concluded.

Battle in House Gives Congress A Lively Start

Snell Assails President's Night Speech; Bonus Bill Offered.

By Robert C. Albright.

With a fanfare of politics and a flurry of legislative proposals, the Seventy-fourth Congress ushered in its second session yesterday to accompaniment of the colorful hubbub and bustle bespeaking a campaign year.

When rough and tumble House preliminaries were over and the Senate had emerged without damage to its dignity, a stage had been set for the business of the session and the dramatic climax of the day—the night appearance of the President before both Houses.

Despite sharp minority criticism of night session plans and a long denunciation of Democratic tactics by House Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell, the House unanimously agreed to hear the President, and the Senate scorned to raise the issue.

"Is there going to be anything in that message which will not stand the usual light of the midday sun?" asked Snell, reserving the right to object.

House Majority Leader William B. Bankhead asked if Snell intended to object. Representative John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, asked if Republicans were taking time out for broadcasting in advance of the President's message, and the battle was on.

"Let me say that we have no objection to the President of the Officer Who Arrested Djalal Is 'Refired' by Elkton Board

Constable Clayton L. Ellison, of Elkton, Md., who clamped a pair of handcuffs on the diplomatic wrists of Persian Minister Ghaffer Khan Djalal several weks ago, has had his ins and outs since that famous, international faux pas—and now he is out again.

It took a formal complaint from Djalal, regrets from Secretary of State Cordell Hull and an apology from Gov. Harry Nice of Maryland to remove Constable Ellison from his job. And then, the Elkton Town Council reappointed him.

But hardly had Ellison pinned on his badge again when the council rescinded the reappointment.

It developed, although spokesmen for the council declined to divulge their names, that Ellison's position could not be filled from the Third District. So they put him back on the job, feeling that he had been "punished enough."

Djalal said yesterday that he had received no official notice of the reappointment and regarded the incident as "closed." He could not be reached for comment, however, after Ellison was again "fired."

Ellison, together with Town Officer Jacob Biddle, stopped Djalal's automobile as it allegedly sped through Elkton on Thanksgiving Eve. The Minister was reported to have resisted arrest, standing on his diplomatic immunity.

Foreign Affairs Stand Overshadows Domestic Issues as President Calls for Neutrality Law.

PROGRAM COMPLETE, HE SAYS, INDICATING NO NEW TAXATION

Views of Chamber, Liberty League, Manufacturers Assailed in Attack on Legion of 'Entrenched Greed.'

Text of the President's Message to Congress—Page 4.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt in his annual message to Congress last night coupled a sharply worded condemnation of nations disturbing the peace of the world with a vitriolic castigation of the business and industrial critics of his Administration.

Although the words of the President on the world situation, in which he plainly indicated his sympathy for those countries seeking to preserve peace through collective action, were by far the most important and significant of his address, they attracted much less attention in Congress, and probably throughout the country, than his assault on the New Deal critics.

Speaking to Congress and also to the country in perhaps the largest American radio audience ever reached, the President branded his foes as legionnaires of "entrenched greed" and as groups who "steal the livery of great National Constitutional ideals to serve discredited special interests." He pummeled these critics as "autocrats," as dangerous to the economic liberties of the American people as were the foreign "autocrats" who are bringing the world again to the threshold of universal conflict.

Although the President mentioned no names, the context of his speech made it clear his caustic sallies were aimed at the American Liberty League, the United States Chamber of Commerce, and the National Association of Manufacturers, and, expressedly, at those who "wrongfully seek to carry the property and the interests entrusted to them into the arena of partisan politics."

He challenged these critics to cease hiding "their dissent in a cowardly cloak of generality" and make thee issue against him definite, just as he had made it specific against them. Let these critics come to Congress and ask for the repeal of all New Deal measures if they believed his program had hindered recovery rather than helped it, the President taunted.

But he did not think the foes of the New Deal wished to wipe it out completely. He pointed out that in building up "a people's government" he had added new instruments of public power to it. Control of that power, through "political puppets," was what these "economic autocrats" desired, he said, in order to attain "power for themselves, enslavement for the public."

Whatever might be said of the President's address, it did not conform to any previous message to Congress "on the state of the Union." It was virtually barren of recommendations. The President advocated a new neutrality law, introduced earlier in the day. He urged Congress to "advance; not retreat."

One Remark In Doubt.

He made a little-understood proposal that Congress should find means to protect its prerogatives and its laws until final adjudication by the highest tribunal of the land. Whether it was intended as a shot at the Supreme Court or a proposal for Congress to restrict the power of lower courts to enjoin the enforcement of Congressional acts was not clear.

Mr. Roosevelt said that on the basis of "existing laws" additional taxes were not necessary. This was taken as possibly an indirect frown on cash payment of the bonus. He said employment was increasing and that therefore "we can anticipate a reduction in our appropriations for relief." He said "we approach a balanced budget" but withheld all other financial details until Monday's budget message.

As the essentials of a message on the "State of the Union" this was all the address contained. He made no effort to cite figures to show the economic improvement of the country nor did he take cognizance of the sharp attacks that have been made in the courts on virtually all New Deal measures passed by the last Congress.

Belligerent, Oratorical.

Instead, when the President finished with what was regarded as a statesmanlike discussion of the world situation, received gravely and respectfully by Democrats and Republicans alike, he became a political orator, throwing force and appeal into his voice and resorting to histrionics to make his points. His tone was belligerent and fighting.

This part of his address was received as a political speech. The Democrats applauded, yelled, shouted and stamped their feet to show their enthusiasm for the President's slashing attack on their critics. The House chamber resembled a fashionable political meeting more than it did a joint session of Congress, as Kleig lights beat down on the throng and motion picture cameras clicked.

Republicans Applaud Once.

The Republicans sat in silence, some in apparently sullen silence, until Mr. Roosevelt said the country was approaching a balanced budget and then they broke into applause. The President glanced in their direction, paused and smilingly shook his head at them.

But a few minutes later the Republicans, who were now getting the spirit of the meeting, broke into raucous laughter when the President referred to his address as "this Message on the State of the Union." Their laughter at the President's expense was unusual if not unprecedented. Mr. Roosevelt's face was grim and a number of persons frowned.

Mr. Roosevelt, in cutaway and striped trousers, arrived at the Capitol a few minutes before 9 o'clock with the members of the Cabinet similarly attired, except for Postmaster General James A. Farley, who wore a sack blue suit, blue shirt and tie to match. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins was 10 minutes late and did not take part in the Cabinet procession. Mrs. Roosevelt, with her daughter, Mrs. John Boettiger, and a party of friends, already was in the Executive gallery.

On the arrival of the Senate, marching slowly in pairs, Vice President John N. Garner took his seat beside Speaker Joseph W. Byrns and named the usual committee of leaders to escort the President to the chamber. Mr. Roosevelt entered, leaning on the arm of his son, James. He was given a noisy ovation, which the Vice President permitted to continue for several minutes, as the President arranged his pince nez, laid a wrist watch before him and drank half a glass of water.

Speaks Slowly, Clearly.

The President commenced speaking in a low but clear voice. He observed that another year of responsibility lay ahead. He recalled the occasion of his inaugural and commented that at that time "the world picture was an image of substantial peace."

Mr. Roosevelt recalled his "good neighbor" utterance when he was inducted into office, the only reference, which, he said, he found necessary to make in respect to world affairs at the time. In the

U. S. Calls on China to Rescue Missionaries Besieged by Reds

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, Jan. 3.—The United States Ambassador asked Chinese officials tonight to speed troops to the Communist-besieged city of Chihkiang, western Hunan province, where the lives of 30 missionaries are endangered.

Red armies have completely cut off the city, said reports to the embassy. The situation of the missionaries was described as desperate.

Nelson T. Johnson, the American ambassador, wired authorities of Hunan province urging them to send troops at once to relieve the city.

Most of the surrounded missionaries were believed to be Americans and Germans, including Catholic missionaries and members of the China Inland Mission, whose American headquarters is in Philadelphia.

Chunan is in south central China. Communist armies have been operating for more than a year in southern and western China. They were recently reported active in Szechwan, Kwelchow, and Yunnan provinces and some apparently have moved eastward into Hunan.

Pinchot Visits Borah; 2 Agree On 1936 'Aims'

Idahoan Expected to Enter Pennsylvania Primary in New Strategy.

By the Associated Press.

Obscured by the fanfare last night over the Presidential message to Congress, personalities at odds over the Republican nomination for President and tactics to be followed worked quietly toward their objectives.

Indications were that Pennsylvania had been added, at least tentatively, to the States in which the name of Senator Borah will be put forward. After conferring with the Idahoan, former Gov. Pinchot of that State set out to survey the situation.

Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, took occasion again to praise Gov. Landon of his State, and to express the "hope and belief" he will be nominated and elected. He had good words, too, for Borah, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago.

Vandenberg Gives Warning.

Vandenberg, mentioned more frequently as a potential compromise nominee but keeping his own counsel, warned:

"If we make the old deal the issue, we will lose; but if we make the New Deal an issue we will win."

This contrasted with the asserting of some, after Vandenberg survived the Roosevelt landslide in the 1934 elections, that he had stood by the New Deal in part. It also brought to the mind of some at the Capitol that former President Hoover, in his latest speches, had not only castigated the New Deal, but offered the "fundamentals" exemplified by his Administration as a preferred alternative.

The Townsend old-age pension plan loomed more impressively as a cleaver of party lines. An illustration occurred in the House, when the newly-elected Townsendite—Republican Representative Main of Michigan — was introduced to the Democratic sponsor there of the $200-a-month pension proposal, McGroarty, of California.

Unless major party leaders come to see his way, Dr F. E. Townsend at Long Beach, Calif., said he was "prepared to launch a new party on a week's notice. We find everywhere that people are entirely fed up on the old party idea."

Dr. Irving T. Fisher, professor emeritus of economics at Yale University, appealed to one member of Congress yesterday to oppose the Townsend old-age pension plan.

In a letter to Representative Buckler (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, who voted for the McGroarty bill embodying the pension plan last session, Fisher said he believed the plan "would do the country very great harm indeed should Congress enact it."

"Economically," he said, "the plan is certainly, I think, unsound."

The American Liberty League, through a radio address by Dr. Walter E. Spahr, of New York University, last night attacked "the fallacies and dangers of the Townsend plan."

"It would wreck the country," he said.

The economist estimated the cost at over $25,000,000,000 a year, concluding:

"The spread of this fantastic scheme shows very clearly it is high time the people of this country wake up and get a grip on themselves. It shows how easily people can be imposed upon. It shows how some of the notions spread over this country by the New Dealers can look in concrete form when applied by a man like Dr. Townsend."

Borah Plans Statement.

Friends of Senator Borah took notice of reports he favored Townsend's idea. He was said to believe it basically sound but "unworkable," in that $200 a month is too much and 80 per cent of the required taxes would fall on persons getting less than $2,000 a year.

He promised a detailed statement of his position soon.

The Senator sought to minimize his conference with Pinchot. But he clearly considered Pennsylvania important, citing to reporters the leadership its delegation has exercised in past conventions as well as the 75 votes involved. Only New York, with 90, has more. Anti-organization leaders already are supporting Borah there.

Other States he will enter include Wisconsin, with 24 delegates, Illinois with 57 and Ohio with 52. Should the Pennsylvania hopes materialize, that would make a total of 298 delegates Borah is avowedly after in contested States, of a conventional total of 997. His Far-Western plans remain to be disclosed.

His enigmatic comment regarding Pinchot was:

"We are working together toward the same ultimate objective." Pinchot met with reporters but would add nothing.

N. Y. Speaking Plans Made.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 3.— Organization was completed today for the speaking engagement here January 28 of Senator William E. Borah, in whose interest New York Republican liberals are waging a fight to capture national convention delegates.

William Ziegler, jr., chairman of the Progressive Republican State committee, announced the appointment of Representative Hamilton Fish, strong Borah supporter, as first vice chairman of the meeting. Former United States Attorney Howard W. Ameli, of Brooklyn, was selected as the presiding officer.

Fish announced, through the National Republican Club here, he would "answer" President Roosevelt tomorrow in a scheduled address before the club. His address will be broadcast on a radio network for a half hour.

Year-out Is Year-in At Emporia, Kansas

By the Associated Press.

Postoffice records showed yesterday that William W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General, celebrated New Year's Eve in his own quiet way by appointing a Mr. Yearout as acting postmaster in Emporia, Kansas.

Order No. 8193, dated December 31, named William P. Yearout to that office.

On the Hustings

Making 'Whipping Boy' of Business Is Cited as Good Tactics by President.

As was generally expected, President Roosevelt's message to Congress, aside from his observations on the world situation, was a political speech, and Congress treated it as such.

The Democrats yelled and shouted over every blow struck by Mr. Roosevelt, and the Republican minority finally came out of a deep silence, first to applaud sarcastically, and then actually to laugh raucously at the President's reference to his speech as a "message on the state of the Union."

But whatever the Republicans might think of the speech, Mr. Roosevelt's political managers regard it as excellent campaign material, definitely throwing his business foes on the defensive. This view finds substantiation in the comments of several taxicab drivers and others with only a general interest in politics. They thought it was "swell and grand."

The wisdom of the President in lashing so hard at his critics in business and industry might be questioned. But the President has become convinced that he can expect nothing from those groups. So he has put them to a practical use by making a whipping-boy out of them. By flaying them as selfish autocrats, he endears himself to the extreme left wing, which has been blowing cold recently on the President.

Hard-boiled observers for business, on hearing the President's speech, were reminded of the juvenile jingle, "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but names wil lnot hurt me." They were impressed by the fact that Mr. Roosevelt recommended nothing new to Congress except a tighter neutrality law, promised no increases in taxes, indicated we were approaching a balanced budget, and that his New Deal had become a "fairly rounded whole."

To them that meant a continuation of the "breathing spell."

The President scored politically in his handling of neutrality and the international situation. He took the neutrality ball completely away from the Nye-Clark--Maverick team and the other isolationists. On that question he has become as "isolationist" as any of them. Those disappointed by the President's surrender on that question, however, found solace in his inferred condemnation of Italy, Japan and Germany. The internationalists will like that part of the President's address.

* * *

The funniest phrase uttered on Capitol Hill yesterday came from House Republican Leader Bertram Snell when, in an otherwise effective speech, he contended that the President was impairing the dignity of the House by addressing it at night. Who would seriously contend the House had any dignity? Certainly that term could never be applied to the raucous babel of voices which in past years greeted the reading of messages of Presidents who did not choose to make personal appearances.

* * *

Senator Vic Donahey, of Ohio, idol of the farmers and the plain people of his State, showed up at the opening session of the Senate wearing, for the first time in his life, a frock coat. Ohio correspondents were quick to telegraph to their newspapers descriptions of Vic's sartorial splendor, which included a wing collar. That was real news in the Buckeye State, ranking in importance right along with the President's message.

"Honest Vic" has been running for office—successfully—for years. He always has made much of the fact that he was just one of the people and that he needed the salary to care for his ten children. He first achieved the stature of national prominence when, as State auditor, he refused to approve an expense account because the State employe who had turned it in had paid 40 cents for a baked potato.

Senator Donahey's term doesn't expire until 1941. Perhaps by that time the frock coat will have been forgotten.

* * *

Other sartorial notes on the opening of Congress: James Hamilton Lewis, whiskers carefully combed, resplendent in frock coat with a green handkerchief peeping from the pocket, gray striped trousers, fawn-colored waistcoat and spats, a gates-ajar collar with Ascot tie . . . rotund Sergeant at Arms Chesley W. Jurney, a bright blue handkerchief in the pocket of his cutaway . . . Royal Copeland with the usual red carnation . . . Democratic Leader Joe Robinson, in sack suit, chewing a cigar . . . Rush Holt, the Senate's baby, in a light gray, belted suit . . . Jack Garner, immaculate in a formal cutaway but more intent on rushing through the resolution for a night meeting before the Republicans could object . . . William E. Borah, perhaps as a gesture of his liberalism, wearing a red tie . . . Farmer-Laborite Elmer Benson, Minnesota's new Senator, sticking to a sack suit, even though he was marched to the rostrum to take the oath of office.

* * *

Senator Benson added to the perplexities of Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate, when he requested a seat on the already overcrowded Democratic side of the chamber. His colleague, the Farmer-Laborite Henrik Shipstead, sits on the edge of the Republican side. The new Senator was assigned a seat with the minority, where Progressive Robert M. La Follette also sits. But the Minnesotan would not have it, and since all seats on the Democratic side were filled, he sat on a sofa in the rear of the Chamber.

A titter of laughter swept the Senate chamber when Senator George L. Radcliffe, of Maryland, announced that his colleague, the recently married Millard E. Tydings, now on a honeymoon, was "unavoidably detained." Senators William Gibbs McAdoo and Lewis B. Schwellenbach, who brought back brides with them, smiled understandingly.

Mothers and Teachers Will Hear Sociologist

An address by Dr. Theodore B. Manny, head of the department of sociology, of the University of Maryland, will be a highlight of the meeting of the Mothers' and Teachers' Club of the Hyattsville elementary school Tuesday at 8 p. m. at the Olive street school.

The talk will follow a business session, with Mrs. Harry A. Boswell, president of the club, presiding.

Prior to joining the staff of the university, Dr. Manny was senior agricultural economist in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

10 Sought in AAA Cattle-Sale Fraud

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 3.—Federal officers sought ten men today on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government in the AAA cattle-buying program during the 1934 drought. Richard K. Phelps, assistant United States attorney, said the men named in a secret indictment returned in Kansas City, December 5 were:

Two Government inspectors, Dr. George F. Lucky, former State veterinarian, and Dow Clayton, and eight Texas County stockmen—James Roberts, Arthur Wells, James Ice, James Martin, Lem Wilson, Clark Wilson, L. R. Noel and P. L. Mitchell.

Phelps said the indictment alleged the inspectors and stockmen conspired to resell the same cattle repeatedly to the Government. Sixteen overt acts were cited in the indictment.

Angina Pectoris Remedy Not Cure, Scientist Says

St. Louis, Jan. 3 (AP).—Dr. John C. Krantz, jr., of the University of Maryland, who was reported as claiming a cure for angina pectoris at this week's meeting here of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said today he did not claim a cure but a remedy which relieves pain in most cases.

The mistake in reporting him was due to misunderstanding of an advance summary of his talk to the scientists.

Roosevelt Asks Appropriations Cut 42 Millions

Deficiency Bill for Offices, if Passed, to Carry 60 Million Sum.

By the Associated Press.

Reductions in deficiency appropriations totaling $42,954,787 were recommended yesterday by President Roosevelt and Daniel C. Bell, acting director of the budget, to Speaker Byrns.

If the recommendations are carried out the new deficiency items for independent offices and executive establishments, designed to replace items which died in a filibuster conducted against the third deficiency bill by the late Senator Huey P. Long in the closing days of the last Congress will carry appropriations amounting to $60,317,918 compared with $103,272,705 in the filibustered measure.

The original third deficiency bill proposed $62,125,000 for carrying out provisions of the social security act. Under recommendations made to the Speaker this amount would be reduced to $34,910,000. This item apparently was not figured into the total new estimates.

Other Reductions.

A reduction of $27,916,000 was recommended for the independent offices appropriation from the original of $67,158,000 to $39,942,000.

Other recommendations included: Agriculture Department reduced from $18,060,000 to $10,567,000; Labor Department from $6,881,804 to $3,815,554; Treasury from $7,308,818 to $4,066,878.

As fast as they could drop them in, members of the House filled up their legislative hopper yesterday with bills ranging from proposals to pay the soldier bonus to conservation of herring in Alaskan waters.

On the Senate side it was different. There rules provide that no bills may be introduced until Monday. However, by special consent the measure proposing a new, permanent American neutrality law was accepted.

Soon after the bars were down a bill was presented by Representative Beiter (Democrat), New York, authorizing a $700,000,000 appropriation for Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works.

Missouri Bridge Asked.

It was quickly followed by a measure to extend the time for commencing and completing construction of a bridge across the Missouri River near Weldon Springs, Mo.

A Congressman from Michigan wanted to establish a Coast Guard station at Menominee, Mich. The delegate from Alaska proposed preliminary surveys made of Unga harbor and Elfin Grove.

Besides the bonus bill another veterans' measure was introduced prescribing a minimum pension of $72 a month for blind World War veterans. A third would provide that all officers and soldiers of the volunteer service during the Spanish War who were held in the Philippines until April 11, 1899, should be entitled to travel pay and allowance for subsistence.

A bill "to protect the health of travelers at sea" also was introduced. It would make it necessary for medical officers and ship's physicians to be licensed by the surgeon general.

Food Prices Gain 10 Per Cent in Year

Small rises and drops in retail food costs offset each other early in December, the division of labor statistics announced yesterday.

Food prices were 10 per cent higher than in 1934, 22.5 per cent lower than in 1929 and 30 per cent higher than in 1913, according to Commissioner Lubin. Only minor price fluctuations occurred in the mid-December period.

Cereals and bakery products, including white bread, advanced 0.1 per cent. Meat cost the housewife 0.3 per cent less, largely due to reductions in pork chops and loin roasts.

Slight increases in food costs for 26 of 51 cities were balanced by decreases in 21 others. Atlanta showed the largest increase—1.5 per cent—due to increases in butter, fruits and vegetables.

N.Y. Experts Advise Scrapping of ERA

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The Governor's relief commission proposed in a report to the Governor today to scrap the temporary emergency relief administration and put the State's share of unemployment relief in the hands of a permanent and highly centralized authority within the department of social welfare.

This would be carried out by transferring gradually all home relief from the TERA, to the State department of social welfare and drastically reorganizing the department to shoulder the new burden.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman has estimated that home relief represents about 25 or 30 per cent of the entire relief load, the rest of which is being borne by the Federal Government through the WPA and other Federal administrations.

The Senators Parade in to Hear the President

Glib Tongue, Quick Wit Needed To 'Crash' Capitol for Big Night

By Howard Wentworth.

A touch of diplomacy, an actor's education, a bit of Houdini's famous art, and grim determination were needed last night to "crash" the House of Representatives without a stack of "special" passes and a written pedigree.

It was hard to enter the Capitol. And it was even harder to reach the House floor. Elaborate guard precautions extended from top to bottom of Capitol Hill. To finally gain admittance to the Congressional chamber, one was forced to impersonate everyone from a Senator's secretary to the Vice President himself.

You leave your taxi at Peace Monument. Police lines stop further progress. It is a long walk up Capitol Hill. During the journey, you are stopped at least 20 times. A uniformed policeman asks you:

"Whereya think yer goin'?"

To the Hill, of Course.

You tell him you are en route to hear President Roosevelt speak to Congress. Then you mumble something about "the Senator is waiting, I'm late."

The officer gives you a "tough" glance and reluctantly passes you on.

Similar explanations are necessary before you finally reach an outer door of the Capitol. There a cordon of guards greets you—and when no one is looking, in you slip.

Outside were barricades and police lines. Inside it is even worse. The place is almost alive with detectives and Secret Service men. They eye you as you walk hurriedly down a corridor.

Pockets Are "Patted."

Again you are stopped. This time by a burly man who starts to pat your trouser pockets. He looks inside your overcoat and then lets you go—believing that if you have come this far, you are entitled to continue. (But even dignitaries' pockets were patted.)

The next job is to enter the House chamber. At the entrance to the Speaker's lobby, a uniformed officer raises his hand to halt.

By this time you are feverishly removing your coat and hat, trying to look important.

"They've got that cloakroom door locked. I can't get in—pardon me while I go through here," you say.

The officer scratches his head, stares for a moment and then says:

"Yes sir, go right ahead, sir."

Once on the House floor, your trouble is over—unless someone decides you don't belong and politely, but firmly, requests you to leave.

This time it takes more than diplomacy.

"I used to work here," you say. (And you did).

The polite but firm gentleman is busy with other things, and that is that.

It is just before the President's arrival. In the Democratic cloakroom, Representatives are lounging in big, leather chairs. Some are reading. Others are talking and still others (or at least one other) is sound asleep on a couch.

There is no talk of the impending address. Page boys bustle around. Then one member, a doughnut in one hand and a bottle of milk in the other, shouts to a colleague

"Are they going to send you back here next year?"

Sure, It's a Habit.

"Sure," replies the other, "I'm a tradition around here."

More members begin to drift in. They all had trouble gaining admittance. Says one:

"Some little whipper-snapper in a uniform out there tried to stop me. Can you imagine—he didn't even know me."

And so it went. Even those Representatives and employes who have served in Congress for many years were stopped and searched before they were allowed to enter—and they didn't like it.

But they weren't alone. One Secret Service man was almost taken bodily from the floor before he could identify himself.

And a few moments after the President finished talking, things returned to normal. The hungry Representative returned for another bottle of milk, a few commented on the "swell" speech and then everybody left.

It was much easier to get out.

Inebriate 'High-Class' Drunk Called 'Plain'

Boston, Jan. 3 (AP).—Superintendent James E. Warren, of the Massachusetts State Farm, today explained the difference between a "plain drunk" and an "inebriate." Testifying before the executive council at a parole hearing, Warren told how the farm had some 900 drunks and six inebriates. When asked to explain the difference, he said. "An inebriate is a high-class drunk."

Dr. Haydn Brown Dies; English Neurologist

London, Jan. 3 (AP).—Dr. Haydn Brown, 70, a neurological specialist and author, died today.

Dr. Brown twice was struck from the register by the General Medical Council because he wrote in lay publications about child birth and other subjects of which the council disapproved.

Dr. Brown was a fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine and of the Obstetrical Society of London. Among his works were "Advice to Single Women," "Spiritualism, the Lie of Illusion," and "Sex Problems."

736 More Get U. S. Jobs Here During Month

Total Soars to 110,745; 79,433 Are Employed in Regular Agencies.

Another slight increase in the number of Federal employes in Washington was registered when the total soared to 110,745 on November 30, the Civil Service Commission reported yesterday.

There were exactly 736 more Government workers here on November 30 than there were on October 31 last.

The November statistics showed Washington employes included 79,433 in the regular agencies, 14,877 in emergency offices such as Agricultural Adjustment Administration and 16,435 in bureaus financed by works funds.

An increase of 3,782 persons in the same period was shown for the country as a whole, with the total November 30 standing at 800,079. Employes in the legislative and judicial branches of the Government were not included in any of the statistics.

Among the regular departments the Interior led in new employes here with 187. The Treasury Department, with 144, reported the largest number of separations from the service.

The Resettlement Administration led works fund agencies in new employes with 421.

Among emergency agencies the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, with 176, had the largest number of new employes.

Liner's Fuel Gives Out.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, Jan. 3 (AP).—The Dollar liner President Polk, bound for New York on the last leg of a round-the-world cruise, made an unscheduled call at Halifax today to replenish her fuel oil supply. Heavy weather on the Atlantic crossing from Marseille depleted the big ship's fuel tanks.

Fisher Predicts Court Reprieve Of Hauptmann

Lawyer Holds New Evidence Will Force Action by Pardons Unit.

By the United Press.

Trenton, Jan. 3.—New evidence has been found in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, and it is so startling that the New Jersey Court of Pardons will be forced to reprieve Bruno Richard Hauptmann, Lloyd Fisher, the condemned man's lawyer, said tonight.

Refusing to divulge the nature of the new evidence, Fisher said the pardons court—virtually Hauptmann's court of last resort—would want to call witnesses and reopen the case.

With only ten days left until the week of January 13, when Hauptmann is sentenced to die, Principal Keeper Mark O. Kimberling, of Trenton State Prison, said he was going to make frequent trips to the death house to give Hauptmann ample opportunity to confess. So far Hauptmann has met every suggestion that he confess by saying: "There is nothing to confess."

Confers With Prisoner.

Fisher conferred with Hauptmann for more than an hour today, preparing the strategy for arguing for clemency before the pardons court. The pardons court, consisting of eight members, including Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, probably will set a date for hearing Hauptmann's plea within the next three days.

Fisher was asked concerning the procedure to be followed before the pardons court.

"We will present our new evidence to the pardons court and they can use their own judgment," he replied.

"Will you ask witnesses be heard?" Fisher was asked.

"Well, after they hear our evidence I am confident they will adjourn to decide whether or not to hear witnesses. I am confident a reprieve will be granted."

Possible New Clews.

Out of a mass of rumor and conjecture, it was learned that possible new evidence centers around one of two things:

1. The ladder that was found under the nursery window on the night of the kidnaping. Arthur Koehler, Department of Agriculture wood expert, testified one rail of the ladder came from the flooring in Hauptmann's home in the Bronx, N. Y. The defense contended police framed Hauptmann by taking the ladder to pieces under the guise of examining it, and then building the piece of wood from Hauptmann's attic back into it.

2. The ransom notes. The defense contends that the handwriting in the notes bears a much closer resemblance to that of Isidor Fisch than it does to Hauptmann's. Fisch, former partner of Hauptmann in the fur business, died in Germany too soon to testify at the trial. Hauptmann maintains Fisch gave him the Lindbergh ransom money found in his possession.

At State prison plans proceeded for Hauptmann's electrocution in the week of January 13. Unless a long-established custom is violated, Hauptmann will be electrocuted around 8 p. m., Tuesday, January 14.

New Attempt Made To Separate FAA

Special Dispatch to The Post.

A new effort to cut the Federal Alcohol Administration free from Treasury Department supervision was opened yesterday with the annual report of the FAA to Congress.

Administration sources said no successor to Franklin C. Hoyt, who resigned this week as alcohol administrator, will be appointed until Congress decides whether it will accept Hoyt's recommendation that the FAA be made an independent branch of the Government. Meanwhile, Harris E. Willingham, Hoyt's right-hand man, has been appointed acting administrator.

In resigning, Hoyt told the President he had accepted the office last spring believing that the FAA would be made an independent unit of the Government, headed by a three-man board. Hoyt said in his report that he believed that "as time goes on it will be found that the most effective results can be achieved by an independent commission responsible only to Congress and to the President, rather than by a division of one of the established departments."

Jury Indicts Warden In N. J. Jail Break

New Brunswick, N. J., Jan. 3 (AP).—Alfred H. Puerschner, who was suspended as warden of the Middlesex County Jail shortly after the escape of two prisoners, was indicted today for malfeasance in office.

The grand jury, completing its inquiry into the escape of Edward Metelski, accused of slaying a State trooper, and Paul Semenkewicz on December 14, returned the indictment against Puerschner. The jury recommended the rule giving the warden full power over the jail be abrogated. Semenkewicz and Metelski were recaptured in Newark December 18.

The grand jury presentment termed the management of the jail prior to the escape "woefully inefficient."

Roper to Act as Judge In Trade Medal Award

Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper will serve on a jury which will award a bronze achievement medal to that trade association which during the past three years has performed the most distinguished service to its industry, the Commerce Department announced yesterday.

The award was founded in 1929 by the American Trade Association Executives, and presentation will be made at its semiannual meeting in Washington next April. Assisting Secretary Roper in the judging are Thomas J. Watson, International Business Machines Corporation; Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business; Arthur D. Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet, and Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University.

Nerve Study Machine Reveals Electrical Responses of Body

Science Association Hears Evidence of 5th Fundamental Particle of Matter Called 'Neutrino,' Shown by Spectograph Experiments.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 3.—A new nerve-study machine which holds possibility of extending greatly man's knowledge of how the electrical circuit of his body operates was demonstrated today to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Developed by Dr. Otto H. A. Schmitt, of Washington University, St. Louis, the compact and flexible electrical device shows on a fluorescent screen exactly how a nerve responds when it is stimulated by an electrical shock.

By putting small units of negative electricity knowns as electrons to work instead of using the mechanical methods formerly employed in nerve studies, Dr. Schmitt measures the time it takes a nerve to react to a stimulus down to one one-millionth of a second and can apply shocks to it as rapidly as 300 per second. This is far beyond the range of older devices, he said.

Using a nerve taken from a frog, he stimulates it at one end and measures from the other end how far it steps up its own electrical potential and how long that energy is maintained. The nerve writes a record of its own activity on the fluorescent screen to make detailed studies possible.

To illustrate what untiring servants the nerves are, Dr. Schmitt declared that he had kept one making continuous records without noticeable fatigue for ten days.

Possible immediate applications of the device, he declared, are studies on the reactions of nerves under the influence of alcohol, narcotics and drugs, the effects of which are not adequately known.

Experimental evidence that a fifth fundamental particle of matter, heretofore suspected but not proved, actually exists was presented today by Kenneth T. Bainbridge, of Harvard University.

Dr. Bainbridge uncovered the new evidence with a mass spectrograph, an extremely delicate instrument which shows the almost infinitesimal difference in weight between atomic particles. He found one which has no electric charge and appears to have about the same weight as an electron or a positron.

Electrons and positrons are electrically charged particles, one negative and the other positive, of the same weight. They are by far the smallest known building blocks of matter.

The neutrino differs because it has no electrical charge. It might be created by the joining together of a positron and an electron.

Heretofore, physicists declared, the neutrino has been only a theoretical mathematical entity, suspected of existing because certain radiations of matter was present which could not be accounted for by the actions of the four known particles.

O'Brien Exonerated In Suit for Slander

Robert L. O'Brien, chairman of the Federal Tariff Commission, was freed of a charge of slandering Edwin Bobo Smith, formerly a clerk to one of the commissioners of the Tariff Commission, yesterday in the District Supreme Court when Justice James M. Proctor directed the dismissal of a $25,000 damage suit brought by Smith.

Smith, it was shown, applied for reinstatement to the commission four years after the commisioner he served had left the service. Certain statements in regard to his services were alleged to have been made by O'Brien and Smith brought suit.

In dismissing the action, Justice Proctor held that O'Brien's remarks were privileged since they were made by a Government official in the normal course of his official duties. Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson represented Mr. O'Brien.

Poland Frees 20,000 In Amnesty Gesture

Warsaw, Jan. 3 (AP).—Prison doors swung open today for 20,000 persons in Poland under an amnesty law passed by parliament last month. All released prisoners were registered as unemployed and authorities started a program to supply them with work.

They were given cash, food and railroad tickets to their homes. Included in the list of freed were prisoners convicted of both political and criminal offenses.

Mechanic Shot in Arm.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 3.—Theodore Burton, an automobile mechanic, was in the Mary Washington Hospital today suffering from a bullet wound in the right arm, the result of what police believe was an attempt to commit suicide early last night. Although his life is not endangered, Burton's arm was shattered by the bullet.

Police Are Cleared In Stinger Hanging

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 3.—Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine today dismissed departmental charges against four members who had custody of Anthony "The Stinger" Cugino on September 8, 1935, when he hanged himself in a basement cell at police headquarters.

Cugino, who was wanted for murder of a New York City detective and at least eight other killings in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Illinois, used a necktie and strips torn from his shirt to hang himself after arrest the previous day in a subway station.

Acting Inspector James F. McGrath, Lieut. Francis T. Collins, and Patrolmen Hugh O'Connell and Andrew F. Keil were tried on charges of "failure to properly safeguard a prisoner," with the verdict held in abeyance until today.

Feet Are Amputated After 'Freeze' in Bed

Traverse City, Mich., Jan. 3 (AP).—Ned Doe, elderly resident of Omena, was brought to a hospital here today, where surgeons amputated both feet, frozen several days ago.

Doe told hospital officials his feet were frozen, when he accidentally pulled his blankets about his body and left them exposed during a cold night. County officers who brought him to the hospital said Doe lived in a poorly constructed shack.

Girl Hurt Under Train Has Good Chance to Live

Bertha Orme, 17, of Boyds, Md., whose life was sustained yesterday by a blood transfusion after the amputation of her leg, crushed beneath a train near her home Thursday, has a good chance of recovery, hospital authorities at Georgetown Hospital said.

The girl slipped and fell on the tracks.

Bride Set Free As She Admits Kidnap Hoax

Unhappy and Left Home, Says Mrs. Starbuck; Agents Aroused.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 3.—Mrs. Ruth Starbuck, 23, bride of six months, was released by special agents of the U. S. Department of Justice today after they had checked, they said, on her admission that her story of being kidnaped from near her home at Colerain, Ohio, was a hoax.

She immediately joined her husband, Clinton Starbuck, radio shop proprietor, who arrived today at Louisville city detective headquarters. O. C. Dewey, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Investigation field office here, said his agents had checked every detail of what he said was Mrs. Starbuck's admission that her story of being abducted, drugged with a candy bar and ejected from an automobile in Louisville was fiction.

Dewey said the woman was being released by Federal agents on recommendation of District Attorney Bunk Gardner. He added he was recommending to peace officers they bring any prosecution they lawfully may to discourage hoaxes.

Dewey said Mrs. Starbuck told Federal men she was unhappy and left home December 31, going by bus to Wheeling, W. Va., where she attended a movie; thence to Parkersburg and Huntington, W. Va., and Lexington, Ky. He said agents verified that she arrived here January 1 and stopped at a hotel.

PWA Power Loan Hits Court Obstacle

District Supreme Court Justice Jennings Bailey yesterday signed an order requiring the Public Works Administration to show cause by January 13 why it should not be placed under court order prohibiting it from lending $1,000,000 and making a gift of $400,000 additional to the city of Sandusky, Ohio, for the erection of a municipal electrical plant.

Attorneys for the power company rushed their petition when they learned the Treasury Department was on the verge of transmitting funds for the plant. The petitioner, the Ohio Public Service Co., stated it had a perpetual franchise which it valued at more than $1,000,000. The franchise entitled the company to serve Sandusky and its suburbs with electrical energy.

The company claimed its entire investment would be imperiled if the "unconstitutional loan" to Sandusky were actually consummated.

Second Fugitive Caught in Killing

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Jan. 3.—Edward Guarnelli, under indictment for killing a State prison guard, was captured tonight in Malden, the Boston police announced. His capture followed by 24 hours the capture of Antonio Repucci, another convict also indicted for the murder, in Providence, R. I.

The police announcement said Guarnelli had a pistol in his possession and was wearing a stolen suit of clothes.

He and Repucci were indicted yesterday for slaying Walter Doucette as he was taking them back to the prison, in which they were serving long terms for burglary, after they had received additional sentences in Norfolk County court.

Doucette was shot with his own pistol, two days before Christmas.

Justices Forfeit Posts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 3.—Apparently the residents of North River district in Augusta County are such law-abiding folk that the office of justice of the peace has no attraction. R. A. Skelton, W. A. Obaugh and D. F. Rimel, elected justices in November, failed to qualify within the time prescribed by law, and therefore the offices are declared vacant. January 1 was the limit for taking oath and posting bond. If North River is to have its allotted three magistrates, Judge Joseph A. Glasgow, of circuit court, will have to fill the posts by appointment.

Child Specialist Is Found Dead Of Bullet in Car

Chicago Physician Left Home on Professional Call, Wife Says.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Summerdale police announced tonight that Dr. Silber C. Peacock, prominent pediatrician who disappeared last night in answer to a telephone call, was found shot to death in an automobile on the North Side.

Sergt. Frank Tlamsa said a cruising police squad found the body in Dr. Peacock's own sedan, in which he left his office at 10 p. m. yesterday in response, his wife said, to a call asking him to "treat a sick child."

The name of the caller was given by Dr. Peacock's secretary as "Z. Smale," but such a man could not be found by police today, and at the address given by the caller police were unable to trace the call.

Various Theories.

Sergt. Tlamsa said the squad which found the body was unable to determine immediately how many shots had been fired into it. Police had begun their investigation on theories Dr. Peacock might have been kidnaped by a gunman to treat a wounded companion, or that a narcotics addict might have lured him away in hopes of obtaining narcotics from the bag the physician habitually carried.

Because of the nature of his work, however, his associates said, the pediatrician rarely carried narcotics. His wife, Ruth, said the physician was a man of regular habits, that he did not use liquor and that he normally kept early hours.

Dr. Peacock was 40 years old and a graduate of Rush Medical College here.

Secretary Quoted.

Miss Kathryne Maloney, the pediatrician's secretary, said he gathered up his bag and departed in his sedan for the address, but officers expressed their conviction tonight he had never reached the house.

He usually carried no more than $30 in his pockets, Mrs. Peacock said, and little credence was placed at first in robbery as a possible motive.

Police said a citizen reported the car had been parked where the squad found it since last night. First reports said no gun was found in or near the sedan.

U. S. Dealers Win Champagne Label

American wine makers won the right yesterday to use the word "champagne"—qualified by a geographical name.

Under regulations announced by the Federal Alcohol Administration, the single word "champagne" is reserved to the producers of the Champagne district of France, but American vintners who follow the French process may call their product "American champagne," "New York champagne," or "California champagne."

Sparkling wine made without using the French process of secondary fermentation in the bottle must be labeled with some title like "sparkling wine—champagne type" or "sparkling wine — American champagne—bulk process."

Horace Acclaimed Still an Influence

When Horace, the great poet of classical antiquity, said, "I shall never wholly die" he was uttering a truth, Dr. Lester K. Born, of George Washington University, said in a radio address last night in commemoration of the poet's bimillennium.

Dr. Born, head of the department of classical languages and literatures at George Washington, said that Horace more than any other poet has influenced subsequent thought and life. The first edition of Horace's work was published in Italy 450 years ago, he said, and since then more than 2,000 separate editions have appeared.

"He has inspired countless passages in the poetry of England, America, France, Germany, Italy and Spain, from the time of the Renaissance to the present day," Dr. Born said. "Because of the universality of his appeal, he has always found readers in the original, enthusiastic interpreters and adapters."

5 Nursery Schools Reopen Monday

Three white and two colored nursery schools will be reopened Monday as a WPA project, officials announced.

The schools for white children were the Corcoran at Twenty-eighth and M streets northwest; the Fairbrother, at Tenth and E streets southwest, and the Peabody at Fifth and C streets northeast.

The colored nursery schools are located in the Bell School at Second and D streets southwest and in the Anthony J. Bowen School at Delaware avenue and M street southwest.

Five other schools are to be reopened as soon as efficient and qualified help to man them can be found, William C. Cleary, assistant deputy works administrator, announced.

Reopening of the schools was demanded several weeks ago by a group of white and colored mothers who called on Commissioner George E. Allen, works and relief administrator, and on Federal works and relief officials.

Simplified Practice In Patent Law Urged

St. Louis, Jan. 3 (AP).—The council of the American Association for the Advancement of Science today adopted a resolution urging simplification of American patent law practices.

The council asked patent litigation processes be simplified "in order that expense and delay may be reduced by prompt enlightened decisions of a single court of patent appeals."

Mrs. Vanderbilt Is Awarded Custody of Young Catherine

Judge Holds It Is a 'Flagrant Mistake' to Deprive Child of 4 of a Mother's Care; Father's Visits Upheld.

By the Associated Press.

Troy, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Custody of 4-year-old Catherine Hegeman Vanderbilt was awarded to her mother, Mrs. Catherine Farmer Vanderbilt, of Greenville, in a decision filed in Supreme Court here today by Justice Pierce H. Russell. The child's father, George V. Vanderbilt, had sought custody of his daughter in a habeas corpus proceeding.

Justice Russell held it would be a "flagrant error of judgment to strip a child of only 4 years of age of the care and attention which a mother can give." He ruled the father may see little Catherine as provided in the original habeas corpus order.

Last month Justice Ellis J. Staley in a decision filed in Albany dismissed a $100,000 action brought by Mrs. Vanderbilt against her husband's half-sister, Mrs. Lizzie Vanderbilt Hegeman, of New York. Mrs. Vanderbilt had sought damages for an alleged conspiracy by Mrs. Hegeman to deprive herself and her daughter of Vanderbilt's support. The case was dismissed on the ground it came under the heading of "heart-balm" actions outlawed by the 1935 Legislature.

Still another case involving Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Hegeman is pending. Mrs. Hegeman has brought suit to dispossess her sister-in-law and niece from Prevost Manor House in Greenville, which she says she owns. The suit alleges they are occupying the premises as tenants-at-will without lease. Mrs. Vanderbilt asserts the house was a wedding gift to herself and husband from Mrs. Hegeman. The case will be argued in Supreme Court at Catskill February 3.

Little Catherine Vanderbilt, who was 4 years old last May 10, is a distant relative of Gloria Vanderbilt, 12, central figure in another child custody case.

Justice Russell in his decision observed that the papers filed in the case "bristle with denunciation of the parties, but nowhere do I find any salient facts which show that the mother is an unfit and improper person to have the custody and control of the child."

Cut Threatens Nurse Service; Cash Dwindling

14 to Be Dismissed Unless Funds Are Raised to Augment Chest.

Limited funds of the Community Chest brought the first of the 65 Chest agencies face to face yesterday with the necessity for cutting down on its service.

Unless some public funds are made available to the Instructive Visiting Nurses, 14 nurses, who have been caring for about 10 patients a day each, will have to be dismissed.

This report was made to the Chest trustees, meeting in the United States Chamber of Commerce, by Mrs. Whitman Cross.

The trustees met to approve tentative budgets for the member agencies, and approved a budget approximately the same as last year's for the nurses' group. Mrs. Cross pointed out that last year certain services rendered by the nurses were paid for by Federal emergency relief funds, amounting to $25,000.

Louis Ottenberg, chairman of the Chest budget committee, finally proposed that a committee call on the District Commissioners in an effort to continue payment of the $25,000 from public funds. His motion carried unanimously.

Meanwhile, member agencies were advised that they could appeal to the Chest executive committee for revision of the budgets approved by the trustees.

A report by President Clarence Phelps Dodge told the trustees that New York and Cincinnati meetings and general opinion throughout the country agreed that continuing abnormal relief needs must be met from public funds. Dodge repeated his previous statement that the Chest could not assume the burden of extra District relief, thrown upon the city by withdrawal of Federal emergency relief funds.

Chest Director Herbert L. Willett, jr., reported that $497,421.51, or 28.30 per cent, of the 1936 pledges had been collected thus far, with $1,455,343.77, or 88.51 per cent, of the 1935 pledges.

At the request of H. L. Rust, jr., new Chest treasurer, the trustees named H. L. Buckingham, auditor of H. L. Rust Co., as assistant treasurer.

Workers for Chest Start Study Monday

The failure of the Community Chest here to reach its goal in the last campaign, and the consequent slash in the budgets of 65 agencies dependent upon it, has made it necessary to plan for more volunteer workers in future campaigns.

The training of such workers will start Monday at 11 a. m. in the building of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, when Dr. Frank Bohn, writer and lecturer, will speak on "America's Response to the Social Challenge." His will be the first in a course of lectures under the auspices of committee on volunteer workers of the Council of Social Agencies.

The lectures are designed to equip volunteer workers for service with the Community Chest and other social organizations. Sanford Bates, president of the Council of Social Agencies, will preside at the lectures.

Grounded Freighter Refloated by Cutter

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 3 (AP).—The Bull Line freighter Evelyn, aground on Rebeccah shoals near Key West since early this morning, was floated at 5:17 p. m., by the Coast Guard cutter Saukee.

The 3,140 ton ship with a crew of 32 aboard was in no immediate danger, but two other Coast Guard craft—the Pandora out of Miami and the McLane out of Tampa—were en route to join the cutters Saukee and Saranac at the scene of the grounding.

The brief messages to Coast Guard headquarters here did not say what caused the Evelyn to go aground.

23 in Prison Revolt Still Hold Canada Jail

Villa Marie, Quebec, Jan. 3 (AP).—Twenty-three prisoners who revolted in the local jail late yesterday still roamed the corridors tonight while prison officers and provincial police conferred outside the building on a plan of action.

Jail Governor Dumont said he would probably make no move tonight to bring the prisoners in the three-story Temiscamingue District Prison to subjection, announcing that he believed the disturbance would end tomorrow with the arrival of more reinforcements.

The jail holds 30 prisoners, but seven women of the number declined to join the revolt against food and disciplinary conditions.

Gold Note Finders To Face Obstacles

Finders of the $10,000 and $20,000 gold notes lost in the recent Postoffice fire must go far before they find anyone to cash them, the Treasury Department announced today.

The bills are printed on regular currency paper, but have one blank side. They were used in the early days of the Federal Reserve System to denote a transfer of funds between member banks and the Treasury in Washington.

To date only one of the bills has turned up. A small boy recently was sent by his father to collect on one of the notes, without success.

With one down and many thousands to go, the Treasury Department is waiting for the next bill to show up. It is a bit apprehensive about the situation, and admits the bills, though not collectable, have a certain "nuisance" value.

New Oil Well Spurts Near Governor's Home

Oklahoma City, Jan. 3 (AP).—A new oil well, within two blocks of the Governor's mansion, poured out oil tonight at the rate of 500 barrels an hour, the sixth producer in the new field near the State capitol.

Officials of the State board of affairs said today that bids will be asked within a few days for oil and gas leases on all State-owned land to prevent drainage therefrom by privately owned producers brought in nearby.

SEC Bill Asks For New Check Over Securities

Data on Unlisted Stocks Is Made an Objective; Hearings Proposed.

The Securities and Exchange Commission recommended to Congress yesterday that it be given power to obtain from corporations whose unlisted securities are traded information comparable to that obtained from concerns with securities listed on the stock exchanges.

The commission, sending to Congress a study of trading in unlisted securities upon exchanges, gave this program as a long-time objective. It admitted that it had not completely solved the problem and suggested public discussion might help.

Two suggestions were made. The first was that over-the-counter concerns, which refused to register, supply increased information, if they wish to seek new money. The second was the publicizing of income tax returns of companies refusing to disclose the facts sought.

The study related particularly to the advisability of continuing on 16 exchanges their unlisted departments, existence of which is a determining factor in the operation of many of them. The suggestion was made that Congress continue the departments, where securities are not registered, in the "status quo."

The commission proposed that securities of an issuer registered on one exchange be admitted to unlisted trading on other exchanges.

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey today upheld the contention of attorneys for the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission that subpenas could not be served upon members of the SEC in suits brought by a group of New York utility companies.

The utilities, including the Consolidated Gas Co. and the United Corporation, are suing to prevent enforcement of registration provisions which John W. Davis, their counsel, said would subject them to a possible $200,000 fine for even putting a stamp on a letter and mailing it while unregistered with the SEC.

John J. Burns, chief SEC counsel, had argued that the subpenas were directed improperly to residents of the District of Columbia. The court reserved decisions on motions to set aside service of subpenas against United States attorneys, marshals and postmasters in the New York area and upon the regional SEC director.

Roosevelt Condemns Nations Threatening War; Assails Own Foes

Night Message Voices Demand For Showdown

Belligerence Marks Challenge That Critics Seek Repeal of All Measures.

years that have followed, he continued, the "policy of a good neighbor among the Americas is no longer a hope—no longer an objective remaining to be accomplished—it is a fact, active, present, pertinent, and effective."

In the Americas, he added, "there is neither war, nor rumor of war, nor desire for war," as the 250,000,000 people of the Western Hemisphere "believe in and propose to follow the policy of the good neighbor" and "wish with all their heart that the rest of the world might do likewise."

But the rest of the world—"ah! there is the rub," the President exclaimed and from that point he launched into a discussion of the European and Asiatic situations, which reverberated throughout the world and today will constitute the chief topic of discussions in every foreign chancellory.

Recalls Lincoln's War Speech.

With his survey of the world situation, President Roosevelt coupled his proposal for a neutrality program, which would make invulnerable American neutrality. Standing on the same spot where Woodrow Wilson, at the only other night session of Congress addressed by a President, almost 19 years ago, asked authority to commit the United States to the World War, President Roosevelt urged all the Americas to stay clear of another European conflict. He would achieve this through the neutrality bill introduced in House and Senate earlier in the day.

This neutrality measure would commit the President to keeping this country strictly aloof from any foreign war and would prevent him from joining in the enforcement of sanctions against any nation regarded as an aggressor or otherwise discriminate against any nation involved in war. Thus, it is highly pleasing to the isolationists.

But whatever might be the future neutrality policy of the Nation, Mr. Roosevelt last night threw the weight of his voice and his moral influence as a world leader against Italy's invasion of Ethiopia, Japan's excursions into China, and Germany's threat to use force to correct the injustices done to her. At the same time he indicated by inference his sympathy for Great Britain and France in their efforts to maintain peace.

"If the Shoe Fits."

Mr. Roosevelt did not single out any nation for his condemnation or sympathy, but he left no doubt by what he termed his "deliberate" choice of words that he had these countries in mind. Indeed he expressed a realization that his caustic criticism would not be popular in any nation that "chooses to fit this shoe to its foot."

"Nations seeking expansion, seeking rectification of injustices springing from former wars, or seeking outlets for trade, for population or even for their own peaceful contributions to the progress of civilization," the President asserted, "fail to demonstrate that patience necessary to attain reasonable and legitimate objectives by peaceful negotiation or by an appeal to the finer instincts of world justice.

"They have, therefore, impatiently reverted to the old belief in the law of the sword, or to the fantastic conception that they, and they alone, are chosen to fulfill a mission and that all the others among the billion and a half of human beings must and shall learn from and be subject to them."

The President said he believed that unpopular as such sentiments might be found in some countries, they will find "sympathy and understanding in those nations where the people themselves are honestly desirous of peace, but must constantly align themselves on one side or the other in the kaleidoscopic jockeying for position characteristic of European and Asiatic relations today."

"For the peace-loving nations, and there are many of them," the President added, "find that their very identity depends on their moving and moving again on the chess board of international politics."

He recalled that in 1933 he had said that 85 or 90 per cent of the people of the world were content with the territorial limits of their respective nations and were willing to reduce their armed forces. This remained true today, he said, adding that "it is even more true today that world peace and world good-will are blocked by only 10 or 15 per cent of the world's population."

"Gravity" Stressed.

This explains the failure to reduce armies and why even efforts to continue past limitations on naval armaments "show such little current success." But this country's "policy has been clear and consistent," he asserted.

The United States, he added, had sought with earnestness to limit world armaments and to attain the peaceful settlement of international disputes; had exerted by every legitimate means its moral influence against repression, discrimination, intolerance and autocracy and in favor of freedom of expression, equality before the law and religious tolerance and popular rule.

The President cited American efforts to stimulate international commerce and contended that in international finance "we have, so far as we are concerned, put an end to dollar diplomacy, money grabbing and speculation for the benefit of the powerful and rich, at the expense of the small and poor."

The American neutrality policy, he contended, was a twofold program directed against "any and all nations which engage in wars not of immediate concern to the Americas." In the first place, this country declined to encourage war by permitting belligerents to obtain arms here and, secondly, "we shall seek to discourage the use by belligerent nations of any and all American products calculated to facilitate the prosecution of a war in quantities over and above our normal exports to them in time of peace."

The President asserted he had emphasized the "gravity of the situation which confronts the people of the world" because "this emphasis is justified because of its importance to civilization and therefore to the United States."

"Peace is jeopardized by the few and not by the many," he asserted. "Peace is threatened by those who seek selfish power."

Mr. Roosevelt compared this situation to the eras when petty kings and feudal barons changed the map of Europe every fortnight or when emperors and great kings scrambled for colonial empire.

"We hope that we are not again at the threshold of such an era," he asserted. "But if face it we must, then the United States and the rest of the Americas can play but one role: through a well-ordered neutrality to do naught to encourage the contest, through adequate defense to save ourselves from embroilment and attack, and through example and all legitimate encouragement and assistance to persuade other nations to return to the ways of peace and good-will."

Autocracy in world affairs endangers peace, Mr. Roosevelt asserted. But at home, as in the world at large, "popular opinion is at war with a power-seeking minority." This battle in domestic affairs has been fought out before, he maintained, and only recently the Nation has witnessed "the domination of government by financial and industrial groups, numerically small, but politically dominant in the 12 years that succeeded the World War."

The group which remains and against whom he directed his castigation, the President explained, "is, indeed, numerically small, and, while it exercises a large influence and has much to say in the world of business, it does not, I am confident, speak the true sentiments of the less articulate but more important elements that constitute real American business."

Lauds New Deal Aims.

Mr. Roosevelt contended that the New Deal established a new relationship between people and government which envisioned an "ideal of public interest" as opposed to "the clamor of many private and selfish interests" and the "clamor of partisan interests." Government, he asserted, became "the representative and trustee of public interest."

"Now, after 34 months of work," he asserted, "we contemplate a fairly rounded whole. We have returned the control of the Federal Government to the City of Washington."

In doing so "we have invited battle" and "we have earned the hatred of entrenched greed," Mr. Roosevelt told Congress. It was necessary to drive "some people from power and strictly to regulate others," he recited, recalling his inaugural promise to drive the money changers from the temple.

But those who in the days of March, 1933, had abdicated, "now with the passing of danger forget their damaging admissions and withdraw their abdication," he asserted. They seek restoration of "their selfish power." It is these groups which he charged had stolen the livery of constitutional ideals to serve "discredited special interests."

In assailing those business executives who use their offices to oppose the New Deal, the President, by citing those who "would 'gang up' against the people's liberties," particularly referred to a recent magazine article assailing the New Deal, written by Edward F. Hutton, then chairman of General Foods Corporation. He subsequently retracted his statement and resigned his position.

If these critics of the New Deal achieved political power, the President warned, they would instill into government the autocratic principles which in business they have displayed in their own affairs toward labor, stockholders and consumers.

It was at this point in his address that the President called on his critics to be consistent and let them propose repeal of the New Deal in its entirety if they believed the Administration's policies have hindered rather than promoted recovery.

Mr. Roosevelt by a series of rhetorical questions undertook to demonstrate the consequences of a repeal of all New Deal measures, running down through the list from the AAA to the social security act and the SEC acts.

But these critics of his policies do not want to go all the way back, the President maintained. Instead, they would prefer to seize the Government as it is in order to use this political power for their own ends, he argued, contending they were using "the weapon of fear—a sympathetic, manufactured, pioisonous fear that is being spread subtly, expensively and cleverly by the same people who cried in those other days—'Save us, save us, else we perish.'"

The President insisted "we are justified in our present confidence," citing continuing gains for the third successive year, which he said "supports the normal and logical policies under which agriculture and industry are returning to full activity." Thus the country is approaching a balanced budget, with increasing revenue without new taxes.

After exhorting Congress to advance, the President concluded his message by quoting a statement of confidence, hope and inspiration from the writings of his old teacher of philosophy at Harvard University, Josiah Royce.

Text of President Roosevelt's Message to Second Session of the Seventy-fourth Congress

Text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress last night follows:

MR. PRESIDENT, MR. SPEAKER, MEMBERS OF THE SENATE AND OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

We are about to enter upon another year of the responsibility which the the electorate of the United States has placed in our hands. Having come so far, it is fitting that we should pause to survey the ground which we have covered and the path which lies ahead.

On the fourth day of March, 1933, on the occasion of taking the oath of office as President of the United States, I addressed the people of our country. Need I recall either the scene or the national circumstances attending the occasion? The crisis of that moment was almost exclusively a national one. In recognition of that fact, so obvious to the millions in the streets and in the homes of America, I devoted by far the greater part of that address to what I called, and the Nation called, critical days within our own borders.

You will remember that on that fourth of March, 1933, the world picture was an image of substantial peace. International consultation and widespread hope for the bettering of relations between the nations gave to all of us a reasonable expectation that the barriers to mutual confidence, to increased trade, and to the peaceful settlement of disputes could be progressively removed. In fact my only reference to the field of world policy in that address was in these words—"I would dedicate this Nation to the policy of the good neighbor—the neighbor who resolutely respects himself and, because he does so, respects the rights of others—a neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors."

World Affairs Troubled.

In the years that have followed, that sentiment has remained the dedication of this Nation. Among the nations of the great Western Hemisphere the policy of the good neighbor has happily prevailed. At no time in the four and a half centuries of modern civilization in the Americas has there existed—in any year, any decade, or any generation in all that time—a greater spirit of mutual understanding, of common helpfulness, and of devotion to the ideals of self-government than exists today in the 21 American republics and their neighbor, the Dominion of Canada. This policy of the good neighbor among the Americas is no longer a hope—no longer an objective remaining to be accomplished—it is a fact, active, present, pertinent and effective. In this achievement, every American Nation takes an understanding part. There is neither war, nor rumor of war, nor desire for war. The inhabitants of this vast area, 250,000,000 strong, spreading more than 8,000 miles from the Arctic to the Antarctic, believe in, and propose to follow, the policy of the good neighbor: They wish with all their heart that the rest of the world might do likewise.

The rest of the world—Ah! there is the rub.

Were I today to deliver an inaugural address to the people of the United States, I could not limit my comments on world affairs to one paragraph. With much regret I should be compelled to devote the greater part to world affairs. Since the summer of that same year of 1933, the temper and the purpose of the rulers of many of the great populations in Europe and in Asia have not pointed the way either to peace or to good will among men. Not only have peace and good will among men grown more remote in those areas of the earth during this period, but a point has been reached where people of the Americas must take cognizance of growing ill will, of marked trends toward aggression, of increasing armaments, of shortening tempers—a situation which has in it many of the elements that lead to the tragedy of general war.

Freedom Is Denied.

On those other continents many nations, principally the smaller ones, if left to themselves, would be content with their boundaries and willing to solve within themselves and in co-operation with their neighbors their individual problems, both economic and social. The rulers of those nations, deep in their hearts, follow these peaceful and reasonable aspirations of their peoples. These rulers must remain ever vigilant against the possibility today or tomorrow of invasion or attack by the rulers of other peoples who fail to subscribe to the principles of bettering the human race by peaceful means.

Within those other nations—those which today must bear the primary, definite responsibility for jeopardizing world peace—what hope lies? To say the least, there are grounds for pessimism. It is idle for us or for others to preach that the masses of the people who constitute these nations which are dominated by the twin spirits of autocracy and aggression, are out of sympathy with their rulers, that they are allowed no opportunity to express themselves, that they would change things if they could.

That, unfortunately, is not so clear. It might be true that the masses of the people in those nations would change the policies of their governments if they could be allowed full freedom and full access to the processes of democratic government as we understand them. But they do not have that access—lacking it they follow blindly and fervently the lead of those who seek autocratic power.

Nations seeking expansion, seeking the rectification of injustices springing from former wars, or seeking outlets for trade, for population or even for their own peaceful contributions to the progress of civilization, fail to demonstrate that patience necessary to attain reasonable and legitimate objectives by peaceful negotiations or by an appeal to the finer instincts of world justice.

They have, therefore, impatiently reverted to the old belief in the law of the sword, or to the fantastic conception that they, and they alone, are chosen to fulfill a mission and that all the others among the billion and a half of human beings in the world must and shall learn from and be subject to them.

I recognize that these words which I have chosen with deliberation will not prove popular in any nation that chooses to fit this shoe to its foot. Such sentiments, however, will find sympathy and understanding in those nations where the people themselves are honestly desirous of peace but must constantly align themselves on one side or the other in the kaleidoscopic jockeying for position that is characteristic of European and Asiatic relations today. For the peace-loving nations, and there are many of them, find that their very identity depends on their moving again on the chessboard of international politics.

U. S. Policy Consistent.

I suggested in the spring of 1933 that 85 or 90 per cent of all the people in the world were content with the territorial limits of their respective nations and were willing further to reduce their armed forces if every other nation in the world would agree to do likewise.

That is equally true today, and it is even more true today that world peace and world good will are blocked by only 10 or 15 per cent of the world's population. That is why efforts to reduce armies have thus far not only failed but have been met by vastly increased armaments on land and in the air. That is why even efforts to continue the existing limits on naval armaments into the years to come show such little current success.

But the policy of the United States has been clear and consistent. We have sought with earnestness in every possible way to limit world armaments and to attain the peaceful solution of disputes among all nations.

We have sought by every legitimate means to exert our moral influence against repression, intolerance and autocracy and in favor of freedom of expression, equality before the law, religious tolerance and popular rule.

In the field of commerce we have undertaken to encourage a more reasonable interchange of the world's goods. In the field of international finance we have, so far as we are concerned, put an end to dollar diplomacy, money grabbing and speculation for the benefit of the powerful and rich, at the expense of the small and the poor.

As a consistent part of a clear policy, the United States is following a twofold neutrality toward any and all nations which engage in wars not of immediate concern to the Americas. First, we decline to encourage the prosecution of war by permitting belligerents to obtain arms, ammunition or implements of war from the United States. Second, we seek to discourage the use by belligerent nations of any and all American products calculated to facilitate the prosecution of a war in quantities over and above our normal exports to them in time of peace.

I trust that these objectives thus unequivocally stated will be carried forward by co-operation between this Congress and the President.

I realize that I have emphasized to you the gravity of the situation which confronts the people of the world. This emphasis is justified because of its importance to civilization and therefore to the United States. Peace is jeopardized by the few and not by the many. Peace is threatened by those who seek selfish power. The world has witnessed similar eras—as in the days when petty kings and feudal barons were changing the map of Europe every fortnight, or when great emperors and great kings were engaged in a mad scramble for colonial empire.

We hope that we are not again at the threshold of such an era. But if face it we must, then the United States and the rest of the Americas can play but one role: through a well-ordered neutrality to do naught to encourage the contest, through adequate defense to save ourselves from embroilment and attack, and through example and all legitimate encouragement and assistance to persuade other nations to return to the ways of peace and good will.

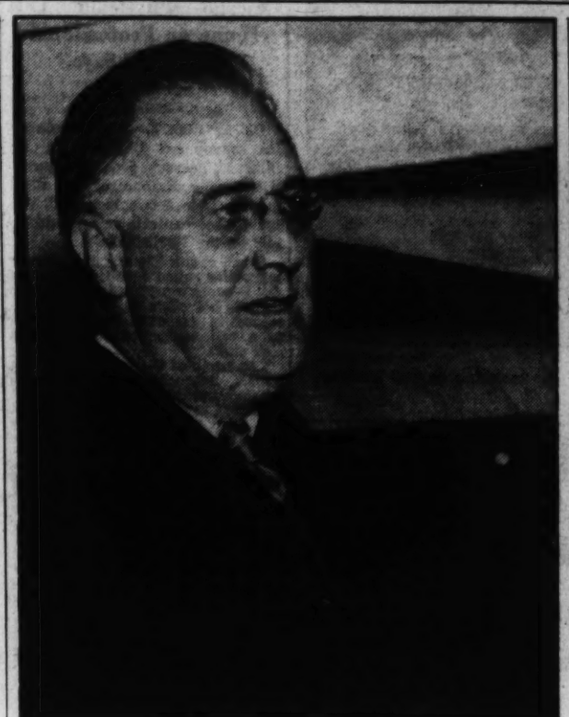
The evidence before us clearly proves that autocracy in world affairs endangers peace and that such threats do not spring from those nations devoted to the democratic ideal. If this be true in world affairs, it should have the greatest weight in the determination of domestic policies.

Power Returned to People.

Within democratic nations the chief concern of the people is to prevent the continuance or the rise of autocratic institutions that beget slavery at home and aggression abroad. Within our borders, as in the world at large, popular opinion is at war with a power-seeking minority.

This is no new thing. It was fought out in the Constitutional Convention of 1787. From time to time since then the battle has been continued, under Jefferson, Jackson, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson.

More recently we have witnessed the domination of government by financial and industrial groups, numerically small but politically dominant in the 12 years that succeeded the World War. The present group of which I speak is indeed numerically small and, while it exercises a large influence and has much to say in the world of business, it does not, I am confident, speak the true sentiments of the less articulate but more important elements that constitute real American business.



President Roosevelt.

In March, 1933, I appealed to the Congress and to the people in a new effort to restore power to those to whom it rightfully belonged. The response to that appeal resulted in the writing of a new chapter in the history of popular government. You, the members of the legislative branch, and I, the executive, contended for and established a new relationship between government and people.

What were the terms of that new relationship? They were an appeal from the clamor of many private and selfish interests, yes, even an appeal from the clamor of partisan interest, to the ideal of the public interest. Government became the representative and the trustee of the public interest. Our aim was to build upon essentially democratic institutions, seeking all the while the adjustment of burdens, the help of the needy, the protection of the weak, the liberation of the exploited and the genuine protection of the people's property.

It goes without saying that to create such an economic constitutional order more than a single legislative enactment was called for. We had to build, you in the Congress and I, as the Executive, upon a broad base. Now, after 34 months of work, we contemplate a fairly rounded whole. We have returned the control of the Federal Government to the City of Washington.

Selfish Hatreds.

To be sure, in so doing, we have invited battle. We have earned the hatred of entrenched greed. The very nature of the problem that we faced made it necessary to drive some people from power and strictly to regulate others. I made that plain when I took the oath of office in March, 1933. I spoke of the practices of the unscrupulous money changers who stood indicted in the court of public opinion. I spoke of the rulers of the exchanges of mankind's goods, who failed through their own stubborness and their own incompetence. I said that they had admitted their failure and had abdicated.

Abdicated? Yes, in 1933; but now, with the passing of danger, they forget their damaging admissions and withdraw their abdication.

They seek the restoration of their selfish power. They offer to lead us back round the same old corner into the same old dreary street.

Yes, there are still determined groups that are intent upon that very thing. Rigorously held up to popular examination their true character presents itself. They steal the livery of great national constitutional ideals to serve discredited special interests. As guardians and trustees for great groups of individual stockholders they wrongfully seek to carry the property and the interests entrusted to them into the arena of partisan politics. They seek—this minority in business and finance—to control and often do control and use for their own purposes legitimate and highly honored business associations; they engage in vast propaganda to spread fear and discord among the people—they would "gang up" against the people's liberties.

The principle that they would instill into government if they succeed in seizing power is well shown by the principles which many of them have instilled into their own affairs: autocracy toward labor, toward stockholders and toward consumers. Autocrats in smaller things, they seek autocracy in bigger things. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Positive Action Needed.

If these gentlemen believe, as they say they believe, that the measures adopted by this Congress and its predecessor, and carried out by this Administration, have hindered rather than promoted recovery, let them be consistent. Let them propose to this Congress the complete repeal of these measures. The way is open to such proposal.

Let action be positive and not negative. The way is open in the Congress of the United States for an expression of opinion by yeas and nays. Shall we say that values are restored and that the Congress will, therefore, repeal the laws under which we have been bringing them back? Shall we say that because national income has grown with rising prosperity, we shall repeal existing taxes and thereby put off the day of approaching a balanced budget and of starting to reduce the national debt? Shall we abandon the reasonable support and regulation of banking? Shall we restore the dollar to its former gold content? Shall we say to the farmer—"the prices for your products are in part restored, now go and hoe your own row?" Shall we say to the home owners and the debtors—"we have reduced your rates of interest—we have no further concern with how you keep your home or what you pay for your money; that is your affair?" Shall we say to the several millions of unemployed citizens who face the very problem of existence — of getting enough to eat—"we will withdraw from giving you work, we will turn you back to the charity of your communities and to those men of selfish power who tell you that perhaps they will employ you if the Government leaves them strictly alone?" Shall we say—"your problem is a local one except that perhaps the Federal Government, as an act of mere generosity, will be willing to pay to your city or to your county a few grudging dollars to help maintain your soup kitchens?" Shall we say to the children who have worked all day—"child labor is a local issue and so are your starvation wages; something to be solved or left unsolved by the jurisdiction of 48 States?" Shall we say to the laborer—"your right to organize, your relations with your employer have nothing to do with the public interest; if your employer will not even meet with you to discuss your problem and his, that is none of our affair?" Shall we say to the unemployed and the aged—"social security lies not within the province of the Federal Government, you must seek relief elsewhere? Shall we say to the men and women who live in conditions of squalor in country and city—"the health and the happiness of you and your children are no concern of ours?" Shall we expose our population once more by the repeal of laws to protect them against the loss of their honest investments and against the manipulations of dishonest speculators? Shall we abandon the splendid efforts of the Federal Government to raise the health standards of the Nation and to give youth a decent opportunity through such means as the Civilian Conservation Corps?

Manufactured Fear.

Let these challenges be met. If this is what these gentlemen want, let them say so to the Congress of the United States. Let them no longer hide their dissent in a cowardly cloak of generality. Let them define the issue. We have been specific in our affirmative action. Let them be specific in their negative attack.

But the challenge faced by this Congress is more menacing than merely a return to the past—bad as that would be. Our resplendent economic autocracy does not want to return to that individualism of which they prate, even though the advantages under that system went to the ruthless and the strong. They realize that in 34 months we have built up new instruments of public power. In the hands of a people's government this power is wholesome and proper. But in the hands of political puppets of an economic autocracy such power would provide shackles for the liberties of the people. Give them their way and they will take the course of every autocracy of the past—power for themselves, enslavement for the public.

Their weapon is the weapon of fear. I have said "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself." That is as true today as it was in 1933. But such fear as they instill today is not a natural fear, a normal fear; it is a synthetic, manufactured, poisonous fear that is being spread subtly, expensively and cleverly by the same people who cried in those other days, "Save us! Save us! Else we perish!"

Confidence Justified.

I am confident that the Congress of the United States well understands the facts and is ready to wage unceasing warfare against those who seek a continuation of the spirit of fear. The carrying out of the laws of the land as enacted by the Congress requires protection until final adjudication by the highest tribunal of the land. The Congress has the right and can find the means to protect its own prerogatives.

We are justified in our present confidence. Restoration of national income, which shows continuing gains for the third successive year, supports the normal and logical policies under which agriculture and industry are returning to full activity. Under these policies we approach a balance of the national budget. National income increases: tax receipts, based on that income, increase without the levying of new taxes. That is why I am able to say to this the second session of the Seventy-Fourth Congress, that based on existing laws it is my belief that no new taxes, over and above the present taxes, are advisable or necessary.

National income increases: employment increases. Therefore we can look forward to a reduction in the number of those citizens who are in need. Therefore, also, we can anticipate a reduction in our appropriations for relief.

In the light of our substantial material progress, in the light of the increasing effectiveness of the restoration of popular rule, I recommend to the Congress that we advance; that we do not retreat. I have confidence that you will not fail the people of the Nation whose mandate you have already so faithfully fulfilled.

I repeat, with the same faith and the same determination, my words of March 4, 1933—"We face the arduous days that lie before us in the warm courage of national unity; with a clear consciousness of seeking old and precious moral values; with a clean satisfaction that comes from the stern performance of duty by old and young alike. We aim at the assurance of a rounded and permanent national life. We do not distrust the future of essential democracy."

I cannot better end this message on the state of the Union than by repeating the words of a wise philosopher at whose feet I sat many years ago:

"What great crises teach all men whom the example and counsel of the brave inspire is this lesson: 'Fear not, view all the tasks of life as sacred, have faith in the triumph of the ideal, give daily all that you have to give, be loyal and rejoice whenever you find yourselves part of a great ideal enterprise. You, at this moment, have the honor to belong to a generation whose lips are touched by fire. You live in a land that now enjoys the blessings of peace. But let nothing human be wholly alien to you. The human race now passes through one of its great crises. New ideas, new issues—a new call for men to carry on the work of righteousness, of charity, of courage, of patience, and of loyalty. . . . However memory brings back this moment to your minds, let it be able to say to you: That was a great moment. It was the beginning of a new era. . . . This world in its crisis called for volunteers, for men of faith in life, of patience in service, of charity and of insight. I responded to the call however I could. I volunteered to give myself to my Master—the cause of humane and brave living. I studied, I loved, I labored, unsparingly and hopefully, to be worthy of my generation.'"

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.
THE WHITE HOUSE,
January 3, 1936.

Address Called 'Stump Speech' By Newspaper

'Political Harangue,' Says Herald Tribune; Words 'Grave' Thinks Times.

Editorial comment of leading newspapers on President Roosevelt's message to Congress follows:

NEW YORK.

HERALD TRIBUNE (Republican): It was a changed President who addressed the American people * * * The neutrality discussion was appropriate * * * The rest of the address made only an occasional pretense of being a report on the state of the Nation * * * It was simply a political harangue * * * He speaks of his program as completed * * * and omits all mention of the collapse of NRA, which he once called the cornerstone of his plan. His major defense of his program is couched in the language of a William Jennings Bryan—we almost said Huey Long—and it holds neither concrete proposals nor definite facts * * * This fantastic analysis of world affairs * * * leaves one without much hope for the manner in which the President will administer whatever neutrality act may be adopted by Congress."

TIMES (Independent Democrat): Much in his message must await comment, and it is certain to provoke debate. But the grave and weighty words which he employs with regard to international affairs give to his address an importance which will be instantly recognized. He uses great plainness of speech, which will not please those who are active in those forms of "arbitrary government" to which he refers.

JOURNAL OF COMMERCE: The discussion of the world situation was a statesman-like utterance. There followed, however, an attack on critics of the Government which does not ring true. The President asks whether his critics want to repeal the whole of the legislation which he sponsored, and, if so, to come out into the open with this suggestion. As a matter of fact, the National Association of Manufacturers has publicly indorsed such a course, although there is no valid reason why business groups cannot favor repeal or modification of a part of the Administration's program while leaving the rest intact.

The President is notably silent about the collapse of the NRA, about unsettlement created by the Administration's practice of urging adoption of measures of very doubtful constitutionality, about the check to normal functioning of the great public utility interests through unwise legislation passed during the past year.

Not a word did he utter about the stupid silver purchase plan, nor about the now-discredited plan for restoring commodity prices to the 1926 level.

SAN FRANCISCO.

CHRONICLE (Independent Republican): Not a message to Congress, but a political harangue addressed to the voters in behalf of his personal re-election.

Not the message of a President, but the stump speech of a candidate definitely placing himself on the left, on the platform of war on business—this is what Mr. Roosevelt misused his constitutional function and the machinery of Congress to do.

Capitol Elevator Falls to Basement

Capitol elevator service started the Congressional year yesterday with a bang that could be heard for three stories.

An elevator on the House side was carrying too many Representatives and friends, just before the House convened. It started up from the first floor, but before it reached the second it dropped.

Mario Pisarra, the operator, said it glided down under control, but landed below the basement level, and passengers had to climb four feet to get out. No one was hurt.

Representatives Caroline O'Day, of New York; Martin Dies, of Texas, and Byron Scott, of California, and Mrs. John J. McSwain, wife of the South Carolina member, were among the passengers.

Soup King's Executors Appeal 16 Million Tax

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 3 (AP).—Executors for the late John T. Dorrance, Camden soup king, appealed to New Jersey's highest court today against this State's assessment of $16,000,000 in inheritance taxes.

Attorneys will argue their contention that Dorrance was a resident of Pennsylvania and not subject to taxation. The State Supreme Court has upheld the tax despite a similar levy collected in Pennsylvania. Federal court refused to take jurisdiction of the appeal, a position upheld by the United States Supreme Court.

U. S. Warships Primed For Fleet Maneuvers

San Pedro, Calif., Jan. 3 (AP).—Scouting force cruisers and destroyers raced through tactical exercises today in a prelude to the year's first maneuvers of the United States fleet.

Monday the bulwark of the Nation's sea defense, 150 ships and 400 aircraft, will move to the drill grounds for a three-day battle problem under simulated conditions of war. The problem will open a year of intensive maneuvers for the fleet, which by 1937 will be augmented by 30 new fighting vessels—25 destroyers, 4 submarines and 1 heavy cruiser.

Age Pension Bill Signed By Illinois Governor

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 3 (AP).—Gov. Henry Horner today signed the State's new old-age assistance bill providing $30 a month maximum pensions to persons 65 years old or more.

Although the new statute is effective January 1, it cannot become operative until administrative machinery is set up in companion bills by the Legislature, which reconvenes Tuesday.

House Battle Opens Session

United States talking to the people as many times as he desires," replied Snell.

"One thing to which we do object is his using the Congress, and this special occasion set apart by the Congress, as a sounding board for a political speech.

"If my objection at this time would stop this foolish procedure, I should make it, but I well know that you are prepared to go ahead, regardless of the situation that exists here or in the country. For that reason I do not intend to object at this time. But the responsibility is on you, the majority, for changing an all-time precedent of a dignified reception of a message from the President, and lowering that into a common poltical speech, charting his campaign for election in November next."

There were other threats of objections — one by Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, of Washington, who wanted a letter from himself to Dr. Francis Townsend, on $200-a-month old-age pensions, to be printed in the record, and another Representative Robert F. Rich (Republican), Pennsylvania, who asked if the speech was "political." Neither pressed his point.

Prayers Open Session.

In striking contrast to the House dispute, the Senate disposed of its business in 20 minutes, running through the usual formalities in an orderly manner. Galleries of both houses were jammed with spectators long before noon, when the opening gavels tapped.

In the Senate, the Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, chaplain, offered a prayer for "new power for the duties that lie ahead," and admonished against the "will to power" overcoming the "will to justice." In the House, the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain, asked guidance "to enable us to distinguish between liberty and justice, purity and impurity and the things that make for good citizenship."

Perfunctory resolutions were adopted calling for the joint night session.

In the Senate the oath was administered to Senator Elmer A. Benson of Minnesota, Farmer-Laborite named to succeed the late Senator Thomas D. Schall. Senator Henrick Shipstead, of Minnesota, escorted his colleague, while Representative Paul Kvale, of Minnesota, helped introduce him around.

The Senate paused long enough to pay tribute to Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, one of its able and most respected Senators, who will be 78 years old today.

Two Deaths Mourned.

Resolutions of "profound sorrow and deep regret" were offered in behalf of the late Senators Schall, of Minnesota, and Huey Long, of Louisiana, by their colleagues, and adopted.

There were four newly elected members of the House to be seated, and their oaths were administered. They are Representatives William B. Barry and Edward W. Curley, of New York, and Edward W. Creal, of Kentucky, Democrats, and Verner W. Main (Republican), of Michigan.

In the House, the usual deluge of new bills were dropped into the hopper, leading off with the Vinson-McCormack bill for payment of the bonus, a bill solidly backed by the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans.

Administration neutrality bills were put forward in the Senate by Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, and in the House by Representative Sam D. McReynolds, of Tennessee.

Received early in the afternoon by the House bill clerk was a resolution by Representative Walter M. Pierce (Democrat), of Oregon, calling for a special House committee investigation of all polls, straw votes and other devices using the mails to test popular opinion on political trends.

Major Bills Listed.

Four bills were introduced in the House aimed at repeal of the Warren potato control law, by Representatives Edmiston, of West Virginia; Lamneck, of Ohio; Hook, of Michigan, and Reed, of New York.

At a late hour, no bill embodying the Townsend plan had reached the House hopper.

Among bills of interest dropped into the House hopper were:

By Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts—Directing the Secretary of the Treasury to report to Congress on operations of the gold-stabilization fund. Data on the amount of gold purchased under the 1934 gold reserve act, and information on policy, prices, storage and reserve ratios also was asked.

Cross (Democrat), Texas—Forbidding inferior Federal courts or the Supreme Court to pass upon constitutionality of acts of Congress.

Jones (Democrat), Texas—Authorizing $40,000,000 for farm loans.

Bland (Democrat), Virginia—Licensing of all ship doctors by public health service.

Reilly (Democrat), Wisconsin—Investigation of the manufacturers of farm machinery.

Dickstein (Democrat), New York—For control of admission of visiting foreign actors.

Split Imperils Plan to Speed New Bonus Bill

Leaders Clash on Move to Put Vinson Measure Before Patman's.

Bonus differences developed in Congressional leadership ranks yesterday as the Vinson-McCormack cash bonus bill, backed by united veterans' groups, was groomed for speedy House passage next week, ahead of the inflationary Patman cash payment measure, and over reiterated opposition of business.

A plan to call the House Ways and Means Committee together, probably Monday, to take rapid action on the new bonus measure was disclosed last night by Chairman Robert L. Doughton, following a conference with Speaker Byrns and co-authors of the united veterans' measure.

The Speaker denied, however, that any definite "decision" was reached by leaders on giving the Vinson-McCormack bill priority over the Patman measure, now due for a vote January 13.

The principal barrier to an agreement in the House, it appeared, however, was the reported refusal of Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, to consent to sidetracking the Patman bill, after 218 signers of a petition last session had claimed the right to a vote on the question.

Difficulty Ahead.

If O'Connor persists in this stand, it was said, it might cause some difficulty in getting a necessary rule for the united veterans' bill, when and if that is reported out of the Ways and Means Committee.

There was some opposition to the Vinson-McCormack bill in the Senate, where supporters of the Byrnes-Steiwer compromise bonus bill for paying the bonus in bonds with a present cash value of 98 per cent, were sounding out sentiment for their plan.

As the Capitol drive for the bonus gained momentum, organized business, speaking through the United States Chamber of Commerce, renewed its opposition to immediate full payment.

In a formal statement, the chamber said cash payment under the plan proposed would require an additional outlay of $1,277,000,000 more than Congress intended for that purpose. It charged current proposals to pay bonus would do away with insurance protection now provided for dependents.

"Payment of the bonus means increased debt, increased taxes, or printing-press money," it said, arguing that payment is not yet due, that it is not compensation for disability, service-incurred or otherwise; that it will neither stimulate business nor provide relief, and that veterans already have been generously treated.

See New Demands.

The chamber further pointed out that with the bonus once approved, "the way will be cleared for the presentation of demands for old-style pensions to veterans of the World War."

The House vote on the new measure may come next week. The reported decision to beat the Patman measure to a vote was reached after the united veterans' bill was introduced in the House by Representatives Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, and John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts (Democrats).

Veteran leaders propose that the Ways and Means Committee report the new bill to the House without further committee hearings.

The bill provides for the immediate payment in full of the veterans' adjusted service certificates; for the refund of interest on loans paid by veterans, and for the cancellation of unpaid interest on veterans' loans.

Sponsors of the measure insist it reduces by one-half the immediate cash outlay of $2,000,000,000 heretofore believed to be required to pay the bonus in full.

In face of the demand by the veterans' organizations that bonus payment not be "confused" with any other issue, Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, held a meeting of House signatories of a petition in behalf of his bill, which would pay the bonus with $2,000,000,000 of expanded currency.

Vinson Bill Supporters.

Although 218 House members signed Patman's petition last session, less than 50 of them attended the meeting. A resolution was adopted demanding a vote first on the Patman bill, but calling for conferences with veterans' leaders before further action is taken.

Organizations supporting the new Vinson-McCormack bill were represented at the Capitol yesterday by Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion; James E. Van Zandt, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Thomas Kirby, legislative representative of the Disabled American Veterans, acting in the absence of the D. A. V. national commander, M. A. Harlan.

The veterans' representatives conferred early in the day with Representative Doughton. In the late afternoon another conference was held by Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, with Representatives Doughton, Vinson and McCormack. It was at this meeting that tentative bonus strategy was mapped, and a tentation decision was said to have been reached to speed the Vinson-Mcormak measure to the House on its own merits, ahed of the Patman bill.

Representative Patman, in a radio address last night, renewed his offensive for his bill.

He stated it will pay the bonus in new money, but in money "based upon an adequate gold reserve, without inflation and issuing bonds or levying taxes * * *."

"This year I predict that any bill that does not levy new taxes will receive more than a two-thirds majority, whether it is our proposal to pay in new money or any other proposal," he said. "The bill that passes Congress will become a law," he added, discounting the possibility of a veto.

Loafers and Criminals Banned From Relief

St. Paul, Jan. 3 (AP).—The State executive council moved today to remove two abuses in the Minnesota relief setup—"relief loafers" and criminals who find haven in transient camps.

For physically fit employables who refuse jobs, the council enunciated a firm policy of "no work, no eat." In an attempt to clear criminals and undesirables from transient camps it laid groundwork for a comprehensive finger-printing system.

'No Strings on Me,' Says Benson, Given Democratic Senate Seat

Senator Elmer Benson, who succeeded Senator Schall; Senator Hattie Caraway, the only woman in the upper house, and Senator Carl Hayden, of Arizona, march down Statuary Hall to hear the President's message.

'Definitely' Is a Member of the Farmer-Labor Party, He Asserts.

Minnesota's new Farmer-Labor Senator, Elmer Benson, appointed to take the place of blind Senator Thomas Schall, yesterday was assigned a seat on the Democratic side of the great law-making chamber—but this, he explained, by no means indicates that he will vote with the Administration or the Democratic Party.

"Neither party has any strings on me," asserted the mild-mannered Senator yesterday, as he reclined in his new office after having taken his oath in the Senate.

"I am definitely and distinctly of the Farmer-Labor Party, and I shall co-operate closely with Senator Shipstead. I will vote for, indorse and favor all legislation that is for the welfare, progress and good of the citizens of the United States in general and the citizens of Minnesota in particular."

Opposes AAA.

Senator Benson, who arrived with his wife from his home in Appleton, Minn., Thursday, vigorously opposes the President's AAA program and other legislation limiting any sort of production, except in temporary emergencies.

Looking from his office window yesterday, Senator Benson recalled the first time he visited Washington, back in 1918, on his way to France as a soldier in the A. E. F.

"I little dreamed in those turbulent days that I ever should come here as a representative of my State in the Senate," said Senator Benson.

As a matter of fact, the Senator, until a few years ago, was never in public life. Most of his career has been that of a banker and businessman in his city of Appleton.

Three years ago he was made securities commissioner for Minnesota, and at the time of his appointment to fill the late Senator Schall's shoes he was commissioner of banks.

Appointment "Strange."

"Perhaps no Senator ever received his appointment in as strange a manner as I did," mused Senator Benson yesterday.

"I had no indication I should be sent to Washington, until Gov. Olson had one of his secretaries call me, and announced my appointment to the press."

Senator Benson, whose parents came to Minnesota from Norway, has two hobbies.

One is the theater, of which he is extremely fond, and the other is gazing at the Lincoln Memorial, which he regards as one of the most beautiful structures in the world.

"I should like to see it each morning before beginning the day's work," declared the Senator. "It is an inspiration—and typifies the ideal of American liberty and freedom."

The Senator, who is the father of a son, 7, and a daughter, 10, will be completely acclimated to the Nation's Capital, he feels, when his children are here.

Todd Home Examined; Jury Divided on Death

Los Angeles, Jan. 3 (AP).—Members of the county grand jury split sharply tonight on the question of how and why Thelma Todd came to her death, after an all-day survey of the place where the blonde screen actress lived and near which she was found dead.

It was learned the majority of the 18 jurors believe the comedienne committed suicide by carbon monoxide poisoning. A few clung to the theory of foul play. Virtually none of the jurors now holds that she lost her life accidentally.

$1,857,000,000 Is U. S. Deficit For Six Months

Federal Debt Reaches 30 Billions; All-Time Peak Record Set.

By the Associated Press.

Treasury figures last night revealed that increased expenditures, far above receipts, added $1,857,000,000 to the gross public debt in the first half of the current fiscal year.

The total spent between June 30 and December 31 was $3,761,000,000, while revenues added up to $1,902,000,000, for a deficit of $1,879,000,000. All three figures were higher than for the equivalent period a year ago.

The Nation's gross debt stands at $30,557,000,000, as compared with $28,700,000,000 when the fiscal year began. The current figure is an all-time high compared with the peak of the war-time debt, $26,596,000,000, and the lowest point of the post-war debt, $16,026,000,000 on December 31, 1930.

Enter Contention.

Both President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau recently entered a contention that the national debt figure should be stated as the total of outstanding obligations minus cash on hand.

On this basis, the debt of December 31 was $28,249,000,000, deducting a cash balance of $2,208,000,000. The half-year's net increase in the debt was $489,000,000 after deducting an increase of $367,000,000 in the cash balance.

Comparing the figures for the six months with those of the same period of 1934 revealed the increased total in expenditures was confined to outlays which the Treasury classifies as "general," that is, for the routine operations of government. Expenditures for recovery and relief dropped.

Ordinary Outlays.

Ordinary outlays totaled $2,106,000,000 this year, and $1,727,000,000 last. Emergency expenditures aggregated $1,674,000,00, against $1,817,000,000 a year ago.

Receipts showed a gain, especially in income and miscellaneous tax collections. This was offset in part, however, by a drop in processing tax collections, due to the fact that many of the latter have been impounded by the courts pending a determination of the constitutionality of the levy.

All revenues totaled $1,902,000,000, as compared with $1,845,000,000 a year ago. Income-tax collections were $554,000,000 this year and $420,000,000 last year. Miscellaneous internal revenue aggregated $974,000,000, against $855,000,000. Processing tax receipts dropped from $262,000,000 to $65,000,000.

Appointments Made By Home Loan Bank

By the Associated Press

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board yesterday announced appointments of chairmen, vice chairmen and directors of the 12 district banks.

The terms of chairmen and vice chairmen will end next December 31, while the directorships are for varying terms.

The appointments included:

Winston-Salem — Chairman, Ivan Allen, Atlanta, Ga.; vice chairman, E. C. Baltz, Washington, D. C.; directors Henry Stockbridge 3d, Baltimore; Word H. Wood, Charlotte; Sam F. Claybaugh, Birmingham, Ala.

Congress Gets Neutrality Bills

come involved after the start of a war.

Other provisions of the bills would give the President more discretionary powers. Relative to other materials useable in the conduct of a war, the President would be given power to determine when their exportation should be prohibited. The measure provides that they must be embargoed when such a step is found by the President to be necessary to preserve the neutrality of the United States, to protect American citizens, or when refraining from such restrictions "would contribute to a prolongation or expansion of the war." The last clause would make such restrictions virtually mandatory.

Plans Amendment.

Restrictions under this section would prohibit shipment of such materials as scrap iron, cotton, ore, copper, and many other commodities in excess of normal peacetime shipments. The President would be authorized to determine the amount of normal shipments. Foodstuffs and medical supplies are exempted. The President would be empowered to determine what commodities should be restricted. The bills also provide that these restrictions shall be extended to all belligerents.

McReynolds announced that he plans to present to his committee an amendment to his bill which would exempt from its provisions any American countries engaged in war with a European nation. Pittman is opposed to this provision. The McReynolds exemption would not apply to American countries engaged in war with each other. He said his proposal was designed to protect the Monroe Doctrine.

Another virtually mandatory section provides that when the President shall have proclaimed that war exists it shall be unlawful for any person within the United States to deal in the securities of any belligerent country. It provides, however, that the President may exempt from this provision ordinary commercial credits and short-time obligations customarily used in current commercial business.

Penalties for violation of this and other provisions would consist of fines up to $10,000 and imprisonment up to five years.

Limits Seas' Freedom.

Making its application to all belligerents doubly certain, the bill contains a special section making this provision and providing that it can be changed only by Congress, with approval of the President.

American vessels would be prohibited from carrying arms to any belligerent country or to any neutral country for trans-shipment. Transportation of other materials also would be prohibited should the President embargo them.

Another discretionary power given to the President would permit him to require Americans to assume the risk of commercial transaction with the governments or nationals of belligerent countries. The President also could provide that persons traveling on ships of belligerent nations do so at their own risk. These two provisions would permit the President to set aside the time-honored doctrine of freedom of the seas.

Other provisions would prohibit the use of American ports as bases of supplies for belligerents and the entry of belligerent submarines in American waters. The National Munitions Control Board would be re-created with provisions for registration of munitions makers, as provided in the present act.

Opposition Expected.

The bills also authorize the President to enter into negotiations with foreign countries for revision of treaties that might be in conflict with the neutrality act. The bills specifically provide that except as the neutrality act may modify them, the United States reaffirms its rights under international law as it existed prior to August 1, 1914.

Some opposition to the terms of the measure is anticipated, however. Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, and Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, expect to introduce a bill Monday. Nye is chairman of the Senate Munitions Committe. Their bill is expected to impose more mandatory provisions on the President, requiring him to prohibit shipment of all war materials to belligerents, above a 10-year average.

After a conference last night Senators Nye and Clark and Representative Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, issued a statement referring to the Pittman bill as "a great advance of historic importance."

"There are a number of provisions," they said, "giving the President wide discretion which we believe should be tightened. We will insist that the arms ambargo apply automatically on the outbreak of war—and not at any time during the duration of war as in the Administration bill. We will also insist that American shipping be kept out of danger zones."

Still another bill, introduced by Representative Ludlow (Democrat), Indiana, would prohibit all American exports or loans of any kind to belligerents. It also would impose restrictions on Americans traveling on foreign vessels.

Controversy over the proposed measures is expected to center only upon how much discretionary power should be given the Executive. Senator Clark said he believed the Pittman measure "is a very great improvement over the existing law." He said he did not anticipate "much of a fight."

Pittman said the broad intent of the Administration neutrality proposal is to keep this country out of war, and not to enable it to help the League of Nations or any other body engaging in a collective peace effort. Should this permanent policy of the United States enable other countries to determine their collective action, this aspect would be merely a by-product, the Senator explained.

The provisions for equal application of embargoes might, he conceded, work unequally in practice, and one belligerent might believe itself less favored than another, but the Administration "is doing everything humanly possible to avoid the entanglements which lead to war," Pittman said.

"I want to emphasize that this country's permanent neutrality policy is being worked out independently of the League or of any foreign countries," he added.

The provisions of his bill which would permit "normal commerce" between this country and belligerents might be interpreted, he conceded, as tending to destroy the efficacy of economic sanctions the League might impose. He felt that this objection might be advanced to any course this country might pursue and that the risk is inherent in charting for the United States a course of completely independent action.

What Makes Dry Cleaning GOOD

Quality . . . Appearance . . . Sanitation . . . Price

A proper balance of these four factors should be the basis on which you judge dry cleaning satisfactory

For your convenience and satisfaction we maintain a large dry cleaning plant, equipped with the most modern cleaning apparatus, and manned by a highly skilled and experienced staff. It is our desire and constant effort to produce the best dry cleaning that can be done.

As for Quality

Latest developments in cleaning fluids and chemicals, careful attention to details in handling your articles, a double inspection—all assure you that, when your wearing apparel or household articles are returned to you, the cleaning we have given them will be fine and odorless.

As for Appearance

If your garments can be cleaned satisfactorily, you may be assured that the result will compare favorably with their original appearance—depending, of course, on their condition and previous length of service. Frequent cleaning adds to the appearance as well as to the wearability of your apparel.

As for Sanitation

Household articles and wearing apparel are constantly in contact, not only with dust and chemical elements in the air, but with more definite soil such as perspiration and food stains. Dry Cleaning, if used at the proper time, removes the soil and lengthens the service.

As for Price

We feel that our prices are commensurate with our service—and we invite comparison on a basis of quality and price.

WE DRY CLEAN

WOMEN'S APPAREL Dresses, gowns, coats, negligees—all garments are carefully examined before cleaning. Ornaments and trimmings are removed—and, after the garment has been cleaned, are replaced. THAT WASN'T ALL STATIC you heard on your radio yesterday as broadcasters attempted to tell all about opening of Congress. Here's Representative Snell, giving his impressions amid difficulties of jammed space, radio technicians, camera men, inquisitive visitors and eager Congressmen awaiting their turn at the "mike" to "tell all."

Parley Seeks Drive for Aid For Wild Life

Conference of 5,000 Here Feature of Program of Conservation.

Activity to unite America's many conservation groups in a definite program to protect wild life was inaugurated here yesterday at a meeting of President Roosevelt's Citizens Committee for the North American Wildlife Conference in the Willard Hotel.

Under the leadership of F. A. Silcox, U. S. chief forester, representatives of more than a score of societies discussed a plan of action.

They planned, first of all, an extensive conference for February 3 to 7, in which as many as 5,000 members of their several organizations will take part. The meeting will be in Washington, with headquarters at the Mayflower Hotel, it was decided yesterday.

To Install Aquarium.

At the conference, leaders of the conservation movement will use every means devisable to bring before the public the crisis that is facing wild life.

There will be speeches, animal exhibits, photographic displays, public motion pictures. There will be even an aquarium installed in one corridor of the hotel. Not only will conservationists of the United States take part but also public and private wild life interests in Mexico and Canada.

It is President Roosevelt's hope, conferees pointed out, yesterday, that definite proposals for concrete action will result from the conference. Previously the many groups, working separately, while trying to achieve a common end, have made little headway because their strength was not united, it was said.

Darling Present.

Among those at the committee meeting yesterday was Jay N. Darling, until recently chief of the United States Bureau of Biological Survey. He was named chairman of the conference committee on organization and planning.

In addition to the several Government bureaus, organizations represented on the citizens' committee are the International Association of Game, Fish and Conservation Commissioners, the American Fisheries Society; the conservation committee, United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, American Wildlife Institute, Migratory Bird Advisory Board, American Forestry Association, Associated Fishing Tackle Manufacturers, General Federation of Women's Clubs, Radio Conservation Council, American Farm Bureau Federation, National Committee on Wildlife Legislation; National Association of Audubon Societies, National Grange, Izaak Walton League.

Several subcommittees appointed yesterday by Chairman Silcox will continue their discussions today.

Farm Groups of Fairfax County Outline Program in Five Areas

Local Districts to Co-ordinate In Wide Agricultural Planning; Discussion Units Will Be Formed.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

A county-wide organization for community discussion and agricultural planning is being completed, H. B. Derr, Fairfax County agricultural agent, announced yesterday.

The purpose of the committee is to study and formulate an agricultural program for the county. Through a series of community committees local discussion groups will be held.

Derr stated that the county has been divided into seven communities for the purpose of selecting leaders and assistant leaders.

Five magisterial districts—Centreville, Falls Church, Lee, Mount Vernon and Providence—will each make up a separate division. The Dranesville district will be divided into two communities, which will consist of the Floris community, including all of the district south of the Alexandria-Leesburg pike, and the Forestville community, which includes the territory lying north and along the Leesburg pike.

Members of the county agent's agricultural committee, with additional members selected from all sections of the county, will compose the central county committee. This committee, in turn, will be divided into seven small committees, one to take charge of the discussion in each of the communities.

A. P. Compton, of Flint Hill, Va., has been selected as principal of the Fairfax elementary school to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Thomas P. Chapman, jr., who became deputy county clerk on January 1. The new principal has taught in West Virginia and in Loudoun and Rappahannock Counties of Virginia.

Funeral services for Mrs. Emma Fulmer, 81, wife of Mayor J. M. Fulmer, of Clifton, Va., will be held today at 2 p. m. in the Clifton Presbyterian Church with the Rev. John M. De Chant officiating.

Mrs. Fulmer was born near Clifton and spent her entire life in that section of Fairfax County. She had been ill for several months.

In addition to her husband she is survived by five children of a former marriage. They are Mrs. Charles M. Green, of Washington; Mrsd Walter Lansche, of Clarendon; Miss Margaret Marshall, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Miss Georgia Marshall, of Clifton, and John T. Marshall, of Clarendon.

Hagerstown Field Project Is Delayed

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 3.—The scarcity of skilled labor on relief here has prevented WPA officials from starting work on a new hangar at the Hagerstown Airport, Harold Seibert, engineer in charge, announced.

An effort is being made to have WPA officials at Washington permit the hiring of several craftsmen who are not on relief in order to expedite the project.

Hagerstown and Washington County has 1,100 relief workers engaged on a score of projects, including street paving work in this city, Williamsport, Funkstown, Sharpsburg and Hancock; six projects at Camp Ritchie, Maryland National Guard Camp in this county; a sewer project here beginning today, and a sewer project and painting at Bellevue, the county home. Work will start Monday on the northwest storm-water drain here. The Seaboard Contractors, Inc., Philadelphia, was awarded the contract at a bid of $114,720. The Federal Government is meeting 45 per cent of the costs.

Bonds for Montgomery, Prince Georges Backed

Baltimore, Jan. 3 (AP).—The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission was authorized by the Public Service Commission today to issue $250,000 in bonds for the construction of water and sewerage lines.

The bonds will bear interest at 4 per cent.

Part of Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties in Maryland are included in the territory in which the sanitary commission operates.

Barretts Offer To Assist Club In Alexandria

Project for Boys Depends on Creation of Permanent Group.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert South Barrett announced yesterday they would finance construction of a new boys' club for Alexandria, provided a permanent organization of civic leaders can be created to run the club.

The project would cost from $15,000 to $20,0000, and would be located on a lot 10,000 feet square, near the old Alexandri. High School.

The Barretts made their announcement while they entertained a group of civic leaders at luncheon. Roger C. Sullivan, city treasurer, was immediately named chairman of a committee to arrange the project.

A plan suggested for financing the operation of the club for the first five years would be to have 200 Alexandria men and women pledge $80 each, to be paid during that period. They would pay $5 when the cornerstone was laid, $7 when the building was completed and $1 a month for 48 months thereafter.

Senator Byron Scott, of California, will be the speaker at the annual Jackson Day dinner of the Alexandria Young Democrats Club next Wednesday at the George Mason Hotel. The dinner will be followed by a dance.

Frank Monroe is chairman for the dinner. Sub-chairmen are Arthur M. King, reception; Ralph Hepburn, tickets; Maurice D. Rosenberg, speakers; John W. Brookfield, publicity. Tickets to the dinner may be secured from any club member, or at the hotel.

James Moriarty, chairman of the membership committee, has announced a large increase in enrollment in the organization since the drive for members started last fall.

Harry F. Kennedy, president of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club, has announced his committee appointments for the year 1936:

Jerome Kaufmann, sheriff; John S. Dunn, deputy sheriff; Walter E. Pierpont, chairman of a reception committee, with J. Frank Myers and John S. Dunn; Walter E. Pierpont, chairman of the finance committee, with Charles E. Dare and David C. Book; Dr. W. Clyde West, chairman of attendance committee, with Henry C. Stephenson, jr., and William J. Ilich.

Elliott F. Hoffman is chairman for the summer camp committee, and will be assisted by Otis H. Hullings, Roger C. Sullivan, Howard C. Richards, John S. Dunn, Thomas J. Scott 4th, Cephas Burchell, Charles Seablom, Harry Hammond, J. Owen Lynch and William J. Ilich.

Irvin Diener is music chairman, with Wilmer H. Scott and David C. Book.

Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, at a meeting last night in Gadsby's Tavern, featured the showing of motion pictures of the national convention in St. Louis last September. Harry N. Jones, commander, presided.

The Very Rev. Thomas A. Rankin, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, fell on the icy streets Thursday and fractured his right kneecap. He is a patient in Georgetown University Hospital.

James Washington, 24, and Robert Washington, 39, both colored, were held for action of the grand jury in police court on a charge of burglary and grand larceny.

Samuel Bowman, 29, also colored, arrested in connection with the same thefts, will get a hearing today.

First-aid classes at Engine Company No. 2, under LeDrue P. Stroble, will start January 19. All members of the squad will be required to attend and pass the course, in order to remain active members. Classes will also be held January 15, 17, 22 and 29.

Boats, Crew of 9 Cast Adrift by Ice

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 3.—Nine men aboard a dredge and barge were imperiled for four hours today when the boats were swept from their mooring in the Rappahannock River here by swift-flowing ice. The falling of the tide four hours later grounded the vessels.

The dredge, which tore away several pilings and carried with it numerous pontoons, was damaged to the extent of $3,000. The barge, loaded with ties, was undamaged.

Struck by the heaviest flow of ice in the Rappahannock since 1917, the two vessels moved down the river and for a time it was feared the boats might be swept as far as the James Madison Memorial Bridge at Port Royal and imperil that structure. The barge went aground three miles from its wharf and the dredge about a mile farther down.

On the Air Today

THE folks who pay the way on Harry Reser and his Eskimos, brought back to the air via C. B. S. stations last month, announce that effective January 12 the Eskimos will be heard from WEAF and associated stations (WRC locally). The program will be heard for the last time from WJSV at 8 tonight. The new hour is 8:30 p. m. Sundays.

From time to time changes in programs have been announced in this space, particularly reference to those programs leaving the air. Some question has arisen as to whether Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, in coming to an N. B. A. net later in the month, will leave C. B. S. entirely. The answer is no. The Warings will continue at WJSV—but for half an hour instead of the present full hour.

Al Jolson returns to the Chateau tonight (WRC, at 9:30), following a long absence in which Wallace Beery filled in. For his first program, Jolson presents Bette Davis, the Yacht Club Boys, Walter Hagen and Midge Williams, songstress. Victor Young's Orchestra and Jack Stanton and Peggy Gardiner, as usual.

Harriet Hilliard—Mrs. Ozzie Nelson in private life—returns to radio tomorrow, rejoining the Nelson orchestra at 7:30 (WMAL) for the Bakers' broadcast. She's been on the West Coast makng pictures since last October.

Also scheduled for tomorrow: Men whose exploits and work in 1935 made front page news all over the world will be heard in the "Magic Key" (WMAL, at 2), including J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Criminal Investigation Division of the Department of Justice; Lawson Little, golf champion; Joe Louis, heavyweight contender; Edgar Ansel Mowrer, foreign, correspondent; Max Gordon, theatrical producer; Capt. Albert W. Stevens, of the stratosphere crew, and Capt. Edgar C. Musick, of the China Clipper.

The radio industry was inclined to chuckle a bit about the furore raised over the broadcasting by both nets of the President's night message to the Congress. The general impression was that more publicity had been given to the radio talk, hence more of an audience assured, than ever had been the case before.

• • • •

C. B. S. is one ahead of the "Magic Key" in presenting the men (and women) who made and reported news in 1935. Today at 3:30 (WJSV) a full hour of "Forecasting 1936" will be presented from New York, "news center of the world." Those to be heard include Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth, David Walsh, Ted Husing, H. V. Kaltenborn, Senator Key Pittman, Louella Parsons, Burns and Allen and Lois Long.

• • • •

The afternoon "shall be filled with music" for opera lovers. Direct from New York's Metropolitan comes Thomas' "Mignon," with Lucrezia Bori and—for the first time—Josephine Antoine. Richard Crooks sings the role of Wilhelm Meister, and Helen Oelheim that of Frederic. Both N. B. C. stations.

An Elder Statesman.

The career of Carter Glass, who celebrates his seventy-eighth birthday today, is of the greatest significance in these precarious times, especially to those young people who consider themselves ill used by an unjust fate. For Senator Glass grew up in post-war days which were marked for all Southern States by a poverty which makes present conditions look like affluence, the more so because this poverty was embittered by a rankling sense of injustice and defeat.

The Senator's family did not escape the general hardship. In speaking of those days he has observed that: "Many were the nights when we children went to bed with a biscuit and a glass of water for supper." At 13 Senator Glass gave up school to become a printer's devil and from that time on one of the most cultured and truly educated of our contemporary statesmen was obliged to do his studying when the customary 10 or 12 hour workday was done.

No one would maintain that these early adversities, so bravely overcome, produced the sterling character, the high principles, the unfailing good humor and the rapier-like mind of the senior Senator of Virginia. But surely much of the gentle wisdom and the unbending integrity which make Senator Glass stand out among all the public men of his time can be attributed to the fact that he, too, like so many of our unfortunate young people today, knew what it was to rest his head upon "the half of a broken hope for a pillow at night."

No doubt it is also due to his experience of those more perilous days that Senator Glass is now able to meet a new period of stress with a fortitude and poise that are lacking in many of his fellow-Senators. Certain it is that the country looks to Carter Glass as to no one else for unselfish leadership and wise counsel. The Post rejoices that this elder statesman at 78 is as vigorous as ever, and wishes him, as well as Virginia and the Nation, many happy returns of the day.

The Problem Still Remains.

No one is likely to dispute the Capital Transit Company's assertion that its service is operated under handicaps. The management of a mass transportation system is an extremely complicated task under any conditions. When buses must operate on crowded streets lined on both sides by parked automobiles it is not easy to keep them running on schedule. That difficulty is multiplied in stormy weather, especially when extensive new bus service has been inaugurated.

When full explanations have been made, however, and all excuses have been offered, the fact remains that on some lines the company is not rendering the type of service which the public has a right to expect. The District Commissioners are investigating the possibility of facilitating traffic by the construction of storage garages accompanied by gradual elimination of street parking. Some improvements along this line may be anticipated. But that does not minimize the responsibility of the Transit Company. There is every reason to believe that the irregularities of its bus service can be corrected, or at least greatly minimized, in spite of existing handicaps.

A vigorous effort in this direction on the part of the company would be a happy sequence to the hearings before the Public Utilities Commission. If notable improvements are not forthcoming, however, the commission will be forced to use coercive methods. There is a considerable number of arrows in its quiver.

A Case Of The Jitters.

Those Republicans who have tried to make a partisan issue out of President Roosevelt's request that Congress assemble in the evening to hear his opening address have only succeeded in making themselves look rather ridiculous. Whatever dark suspicions they may harbor concerning the motives which induced this break with precedent, they cannot effectively argue that it is unseemly for the Chief Executive to try to reach the largest possible audience when he appears before Congress to discuss the state of the Nation and outline his legislative program. If this be "playing politics," then every attempt on the part of any President to reach the public directly is more or less suspect.

To complain because the President has utilized modern means of communicating with the people in an efficient way betrays a nervousness about the strength of his popular appeal which casts doubt upon the persuasive powers of critics. Furthermore, it suggests a deep-seated distrust of the ability of the electorate to weigh the merits of arguments presented by a Chief Executive with an ingratiating voice and a pleasing personality.

No President should be expected to forego opportunities to explain his policies and answer attacks merely because his position gives him a strategic advantage which may enable him to win votes for himself and his party in a coming electoral contest. Instead of objecting to a full and free exposition of his plans by the President, his Republican opponents should welcome every opportunity afforded them to discuss and criticize his proposals and explain wherein their own policies are superior.

The Insured Should Pay.

During the next two years attention is likely to be centered upon the burdens as distinct from the advantages of the social security act. For in that period taxes will be collected from employers throughout the country and no insurance benefits will be paid. The result will be a severe test of public confidence in the new unemployment insurance system.

The immediate effect of the statute may even encourage unemployment. In the District, for example, the 1 per cent pay-roll tax is applicable to every individual, partnership or company employing one or more persons. Employers will be reluctant to take on new workers because that will mean an increase, however slight, in their taxes. When the tax rate is automatically stepped up to 3 per cent in 1938 the cost of employing a workman will be correspondingly increased. Employes whose jobs are made temporarily precarious, as well as employers, are likely to complain.

Especially will this be true where the entire burden of this insurance system falls upon employers. The tax which became effective Wednesday bears no relationship to income or profits. It becomes simply a flat addition to overhead expenses. As such it may force some companies out of business, even though the tax is universally applied in every State. This danger pointedly emphasizes the desirability of dividing the insurance contributions among employers, local governments and employes.

As the strains incident to the social security act are becoming more apparent, State Legislatures will be in a position to act more judiciously than they could have done last year. From this viewpoint it is fortunate that only eight States and the District have unemployment insurance laws as yet. A realistic view of the problem arising from actual experience with the pay-roll tax before local measures are passed may relieve many States of the task of revising their laws in the next few years.

If this attempt to minimize the insecurity of the individual in a modern industrial system is to be successful, it must adhere to the insurance principle. Employes should not be led to expect something for nothing. Such illusions may well be reserved for nostrums like the Townsend plan. If they should be allowed to permeate the unemployment insurance system, quick degeneration into a dole will result. Certainly fair-minded employes would prefer sharing the cost of insurance to the curtailment of employment opportunities likely to follow a concentration of burdens upon those who have jobs to offer.

The League's Business.

The Nazi reply to charges of mass persecution and spoliation contained in the report of the League's commissioner for German refugees is a sweeping denial of the right of Geneva to concern itself with Germany's internal affairs, coupled with an injunction to member states to reform their own practices with regard to minorities before criticizing their neighbors.

It happens, however, that the Nazi policies which have already driven more than 80,000 persons into exile and which threaten to make life in Germany intolerable for many more thousands of former citizens cannot be regarded as a matter of domestic concern by the rest of the world. Wholesale forced emigration of this sort creates serious problems for countries faced by the alternative evils of admitting penniless refugees into labor markets already overcrowded or else ruthlessly excluding the unfortunate victims of a hideous persecution.

The mere fact that for more than two years a League commissioner has been seeking through "international collaboration" to direct the movement of German refugees toward lands where they could find harborage and make a living, is proof that Germany's so-called "internal reconstruction of her people" is likewise an international problem. It concerns all those countries in contact with Germany much as warfare between two nations today affects all non-belligerents.

Moreover, even if the League had failed in the past to take action against nations guilty of mistreatment of minorities in violation of treaty obligations, that would be no excuse for passivity at Geneva in this instance. On the contrary, all available evidence emphasizes the importance of League vigilance to bring the force of world opinion to bear upon nations guilty of oppressing helpless minorities.

While Germany may have violated no specific treaty obligations in the present instance, the preamble of the League's Covenant provides ample justification for joint efforts to secure a modification of Nazi policies. It is the purpose of the League to "promote international co-operation and to achieve international peace and security." Hence it is clearly fitting for the League as an organization to concern itself with practices which, as Commissioner McDonald says in his final report, constitute a "source of unrest and perplexity in the world, a challenge to the conscience of mankind, and a menace to the legitimate interests of the states affected by the immigration of German refugees."

From Baton To Laboratory.

Although it may not seem so at this regretful moment, the retirement of Leopold Stokowski as conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra will probably result in a greater benefit to the general cause of music than his indefinite retention of the post would have accomplished. Brilliant director that he is, he has doubtless realized the ephemeral influence exercised by any individual who occupies a podium. What imprint has been left upon musical history by Hans Richter and Artur Nikisch other than the legends of their fame? Mr. Stokowski's preoccupation with problems of acoustics has long been an open secret, and the announcement that he intends to devote his time to research in this field is an augury of important discoveries in the transmission of music.

Radio has in the last few years only begun its social service in bringing the concerts of our great orchestras into the homes of the people, and it is destined to be of inestimable cultural value. But there are many technical obstacles to be removed before the listener at the receiving set will hear music over the air waves with the perfection of dynamic balance and tonal nuance which the concert hall affords. It is to these matters that Mr. Stokowski will apply himself, and one awaits the outcome with confidence.

Music is a science as well as an art, and any musical composition can be reduced to mathematical formulae. It is not without reason that many scientists, particularly mathematicians, are musicians by avocation. Before he became an astronomer and discovered the planet Uranus, Sir William Herschel was a professional organist, and today Albert Einstein plays his violin. That a musician of Mr. Stokowski's extraordinary interpretative gifts should willingly put aside personal glory, for the sake of scientific investigation to enhance the humblest auditor's enjoyment of music, is a gratifying revelation of his artistic integrity.

Eugene Ormandy is to be congratulated on his selection as Mr. Stokowski's successor. His will not be an easy task, for he must undergo the inevitable ordeal of comparison. But Mr. Ormandy has, during his rapid rise to a position of authority, displayed such sterling qualities of musicianship as to leave little apprehension about his ability to meet the test.

The Copyright Bill.

The Duffy copyright bill, which the Senate adopted shortly before adjournment last August, presents to the House of Representatives a piece of unfinished business to which it ought to give immediate attention. Though seldom appearing in the headlines, this measure is of fundamental importance. It ought to be perfected and made law without more delay.

One of the most gratifying developments of recent decades is the large and increasing demand all over the world for the artistic creations of American authors, composers and song writers, not to mention American dramatic and cinematographic producers. It is only just that the creators of these works should be safeguarded in their copyright. Under present conditions they are constantly losing deserved royalties through inadequate protection. And their messages, carried on the waves of ether, are open to piracy.

In most other countries literary and artistic works are protected through the convention upon which the copyright union is founded. While the House is completing action upon the Duffy bill, the Senate would do well to repeat its action of last spring, when this convention was adopted without a dissenting vote. This international agreement, to which most of the countries of the world are parties, furnishes the best available means for the security of copyright.

Adoption by the United States is not less to be desired because, reciprocally, copyrights possessed by the people of other countries would, under the convention, be more adequately protected here. No interest could obtain any net benefit from a law which requires works in English, in order to enjoy copyright in the United States, to be manufactured in this country. No interest is likely in the long run to receive any net benefit from failure of this country to accord to others the treatment which its creative artists desire from others. As a point of honor, the pending copyright program of treaty and corroborating statute should now be pushed to completion.

The Price Of Unity.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: A group of ritualistic Episcopalians want to join the church of Rome and, in so doing, will hasten the realization of the words of Christ "that there may be but one flock and one Shepherd."

There are many flocks and shepherds today. If unity should become a reality, only one would survive and reasons for the abolition of the others should be given. The answer of the above-mentioned group is that Protestantism has proved unsuccessful in its attempt to further prohibition, whereas Catholicism has never failed in any fundamental reform it has undertaken: therefore Protestantism should give place to Catholicism.

It seems to me this Protestant group is perfectly consistent. They are not content with divisionism, they crave unity. In order to get unity they must discard the things that, in their mind, make their religion a failure.

More Reactions From Readers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just seen the announcement of the policy of The Post in the matter of Col. Lindbergh's desire for privacy. This may be the beginning of a new era for dignity, serenity and happiness in private life! The Post is leading and as one of the many who rejoice in the fine newspaper you are giving the Nation's Capital, I applaud and congratulate you.

NEWTON D. BAKER.
Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My New Year's resolution is to write to anyone who deserves a compliment or kind word. A radio message just decided me that you should be first, because of what you have said about Col. Lindbergh.

Newspapers and the radio could do a lot for the human race, but they are so much like old maid aunties—they give what the child wants, not what he ought to have.

MRS. LAURENCE REPPARD.
Middlebourne, W. Va., Jan. 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I congratulate you and think The Post a perfect trump.

CONSTANCE LODGE WILLIAMS.
South Hamilton, Mass., Jan. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a subscriber to and a reader of The Post for at least 15 years, I want to express my appreciation of the stand you have taken in re the Lindberghs. May your announced policy be an example to the press of the country.

ELIABETH F. REED.
Washington, Jan. 2.

To the Editor of The Post (by telegraph)—The Whittier Lions Club, of Whittier, Calif., believing that freedom of the press and speech is not a cloak to persecution, desires heartily to commend The Post for its attitude in relation to the personal affairs of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his family published in your paper. Signed by authority of Whittier Lions Club.

H. L. PERRY, president.
Whittier, Calif., Jan. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read your announcement in re the policy adopted concerning the Lindberghs and I wish to congratulate you upon the honest and decent stand you have taken in this matter. If all the papers of the country would cease to pander to the lower tastes of our countrymen, there would probably have been no reason for us to lose one of our premier citizens.

GEORGE B. KINKEAD.
Washington, Jan. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to congratulate you on your announced policy as regards news of the Lindbergh family.

W. E. KELLY.
Silver Spring, Md., Jan. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All self respecting Americans and all parents will applaud and approve your stand on the Lindbergh publicity question. Things have come to a horrible pass indeed when outstanding citizens are driven out of the land of the free by racketeers, cheap politicians and even cheaper publicity hounds. Pity that we haven't more Washington Posts! HECTOR LAZO
Washington, Jan. 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You started the new year right by reducing the Lindbergh news to a bare statement of fact in a box, but you spoiled the good impression by giving the best front-page space and a three-column head to a "press agent" handout from the Republican National Committee this morning. Can't you distinguish between news and propaganda? I believe I speak for the wishes of most of the readers of your newspaper when I say that Washingtonians are not interested in political bias. If you must print it, bury it inside, and run the other side of the argument at the same time.

EDWARD WATKINS.
Washington, Jan. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my estimation, The Post has taken several advance steps in the last few years, steps which have made the paper indispensable to the reader and thinker who desires to be well and accurately informed.

Your last advance step is by no means the least, in my judgment. In reality it is second to none. Permit me, as a regular reader of The Post, to congratulate you upon your stand—as per your published statement—regarding the Lindberghs.

God grant that other high class American newspapers shall follow your leadership and thus show respect for the rights of others.

JAMES RONALD GLENN.
Washington, Jan. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I offer my congratulations to you for your notice that hereafter you will give no further publicity to the movements of Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh. There is no point in the newspapers writing editorials on the crime of invading their privacy if on the front page they continue to discuss every detail of their movements.

CHARLOTTE H. MARTIN.
New York City, Jan. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of January 1 you state that in deference to the desire of the Lndberghs for privacy you will give no further publicity to their purely personal affairs. If this is sound, clean journalism, why not apply it to everyone?

WALTER H. SMITH.
Washington, Jan. 2.

The Writers' Project.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Without even a suggestion from anyone that I write what I now ask The Post to print on the much-abused WPA, and particularly the Writers Project, I give facts which the public should know. I have had much experience in different lines of governmental work in Washington, and years of opportunity to study first-hand its methods and results. Speaking for the Writers' Project as I see it daily and know it from within and from observation, it is quite as worthwhile as any other subordinate section of Government work I have seen.

No insinuation is implied when I say that while on the editorial staff in the U. S. Bureau of Education during World War days I assisted in editing manuscript after manuscript which all of us knew would never see printed life. Bulletin after bulletin, here as elsewhere in Government bureaus, were carefully written and printed which are now lying dust-covered, if not entirely eaten by worms, in the morgues of the various Government buildings.

The workers on this project, with small pay, face cold and rain in outdoor contact labor, to bring in accurate, first-hand information which has never been gathered by any set of Government workers, and never would be. These writers are not swivel-chair men and women, but industrious outdoor-contact folks. It would be asking too much to demand that there be no incompetents and no deadbeats found in the first "catch," when the organization began its work. Some of us know, however, that if elimination went on in the regular Government service as drastically as it goes on in the WPA work, the relief rolls of our city would be mobbing Commissioner Allen and his cohorts by this time.

As for personnel, I say without fear of challenge that no higher type of men and women on any staff in any department of the Government can be found than one now sees in the McLean Building at 1500 I street northwest. With small pay, but working congenially and conscientiously, these high-type men and women are doing a good job.

J. O. KNOTT.

Street Car Rerouting.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It must be plain to everyone that street cars which formerly ran on Seventh street had plenty to do in collecting the considerable passenger traffic already existing on that street and the cars on Ninth street were fully occupied in collecting the equally heavy amount of traffic on Ninth street. The present system leaves Ninth street practically abandoned and crowds into the cars running on Seventh street all the vast numbers of passengers that were formerly carried on the two lines.

I have been riding the street cars for 20 years and have never had a complaint to make. But this rerouting is a little too much for me. The people who ride on this route have a right to better service than this. In the name of fairness and common sense the Georgia avenue cars should be routed down Ninth street again. OBSERVER.

The Post Impressionist

Farthest West

Post Office, Saturday.

NOW that the Eastern half of the country has recovered from the Mark Twain centennial celebration, California, with its accustomed promptness, is preparing—three years ahead of time—to celebrate the centennial of the author who best celebrated California. There is talk of memorial meetings, new editions, tablets, statues.

And, what is by far best, there is an awakening of interest in this author among the California colleges' English departments.

* * *

That's all as it should be.

* * *

Though born in New York, Bret Harte went as a lad to California before the Gold Rush had ascended from reality to tradition. Though the son of softly bred parents, he spent his early years among the mines, from the time he tramped to them out of San Francisco until his literary reputation was made.

He was by turns a miner, a mounted-express agent, a compositor "setting up" his own stories, a reporter, editor, employe of the mint, school teacher, college instructor and a member of the consular service. He lived for years in England. But he belonged to California.

* * *

His serious artistic career began with the publication, in the Atlantic Monthly, of "The Legend of Mont Diable," when he was 24 years old. He was barely 30 when "The Luck of Roaring Camp" made him famous and "Plain Language From Truthful James" rolled between every pair of lips between the oceans. . . .

* * *

During more than a decade, he has been best remembered for the latter production. But now not only in those California colleges are there tokens of a revival of interest in other phases of his work. It will probably not be for his verse, either light or serious, that he is assigned a place by critics of the ultimate sort.

The talent manifested in "The Society Upon the Stanislaus," "Flynn of Virginia" or "How Are You, Sanitary?" will never do for his ultimate esteem what was done before, and will be done again, by the fact that he was a splendid story teller.

* * *

Of the short story he was, indeed, a master. There, when at his best, he is perfect—that is, a perfect exemplar of this art as it existed in his own era.

The keen satire of the "Condensed Novels" has been forgotten. Even the sympathetic appreciation of child-life in tales like "The Queen of the Pirate Isle" has not availed him at the tribunal of time. But the severe outlines of such stories as "The Outcasts of Poker Flat," the intense dramatic power of "Mrs. Skagg's Husbands" and all the vitality of that group of tales to which belong "Thankful Blossom," "Two Men of Sandy Bar," "The Story of a Mine" and "The Twins of Table Mountain" are too strong to remain abed.

* * *

Nor is this all.

If there were no other virtue in his work than his character-creation, Tennessee, Miggles, John Oakhurst, Tommy Simpkins, Col. Starbottle and the inimitable Jack Hamlin would still be destined to share more than a breath of the immortality inherent in the elect creatures of the greatest dreams.

* * *

Early in his twenties, Harte expressed the desire to start "a peculiarly characteristic Western literature."

He both began and ended one.

* * *

Considered in his day the best and most original writer in his class, he is now seen, as one looks backward, to have been really a class in himself. His work is strangely uneven; it is often slipshod, frequently artificially sentimental. But his distinct and prevailing note is one of vigorous, veracious, uninfluenced originality.

His stories are necessarily crude, yet they are inevitably compelling The impediments of extraneous detail are often ruthlessly cast aside, yet the descriptive touch, the humor and—when sincere—the pathos with which he realizes his Western landscapes and his Western people are unrivalled.

* * *

About the time of the World War there came a second "Wild West" vogue. It created best sellers. It declined to the "pulp magazines," many of which devoted their whole existences to it. It still lingers on the motion picture screen.

But it was no more Bret Harte than it was Dante Alighieri. It was not even the ghost of Bret Harte.

* * *

For Bret Harte has a truly historical value. His landscape is a landscape that, like Troy, "was." His refugees from the East, miners, prospectors, stage coach robbers, gamblers, horse thieves and fortune seekers of all sorts: they live, in spite of any artistic fault. Your keen modern eye has but to pierce their thin veils of sentiment and it will discover almost the only faithful pictures ever painted of a phase highly important and absolutely unique in the history of American civilization.

Bret Harte will live because the West of his day died with him.

Work Started On $12,783,000 Slum Clearance

Ickes Condemns Critics in Speech at Brooklyn Ceremonies.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 3.—Secretary of the Interior Ickes started construction today of the Public Works Administration's largest low-rent housing project, at the same time swinging a verbal spade at "the old order of special privilege" and the "harsh cacklings of its senile prophets."

The scene was in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, where 12 blocks of slums were razed so that better homes for 1,625 families might be built at a cost of $12,783,000.

At ceremonies initiating the new housing construction, Ickes, as PWA administrator, defended the Government's slum-clearance program and challenged cities to become its successor in carrying on such work.

"Somewhere along the line," he said, "a tapering off in the flow of public housing from Washington must begin, and I hope to see the incoming Congress provide for this while accepting responsibility for continuing the Government's attack on this grave social problem."

He said Senator Wagner (Republican), New York, was preparing a bill to fix the Government policy that will, if adopted, "be one of the great landmarks in social legislation in this country for all time to come."

Saying "there is no agony equal to the birth-pangs of a new idea," Ickes declared: "Reactionists usually shout that enlightened progress is unconstitutional. They would have us believe that the founding fathers deliberately saw to it that millions of their descendants should live like animals."

He called slums "a tribute to the coupon-clipping gentry who affect to believe that, unaided, private enterprise can properly house the people of our Nation."

"Local initiative must be fully exercised if we are to take care of this load," he said. "A matching basis, with loans and grants to be extended by the Federal Government, would place responsibility for the amelioration of housing conditions on the respective localities."

Carter Glass, 78 Today, Says: 'Pshaw! I Want to Forget It'

Oldest Member of U. S. Senate Pleased But Modest as Upper House Halts Proceedings to Pay Him Signal Tribute.

Senator Carter Glass, grand old man of American public life, today will observe his seventy-eighth birthday. He is the oldest member of the Senate, which yesterday did the unusual thing of interrupting its routine opening session to pay tribute to the Virginian.

Apparently secretly pleased and choked-up with emotion by the felicitations heaped on him a day in advance of his anniversary Senator Glass insisted too much furore was being made about his birthday. He waved aside interviewers, asserting he had no advice to give to the country.

"How am I going to celebrate my birthday?" he repeated after an inquirer and then added: "Oh pshaw! I'm not going to celebrate it. I want to forget it."

Still Vigorous and Witty.

Vigorous in his movements and still possessed of a sharp and witty tongue, as well as a keen mind, the Virginian does not show his 78 years. His face glows when someone guesses his age at fewer years. Oblivious to his own age, Senator Glass when irritated by actions of some of his colleagues a few years younger, frequently has exclaimed about "these old men."

As a demonstration of his youthfulness, Senator Glass several days ago on leaving the White House scooped up a handful of snow from the running board of a parked automobile and tossed it playfully at a reporter.

The Virginian, who greatly dislikes demonstrations in his behalf, was caught completely off guard yesterday when Democratic Floor Leader Joseph T. Robinson arose and started an eulogy of him. At the first reference to him Senator Glass made a wry face and moved as if to leave the chamber but he found his way blocked by those seated next to him. He leaned back and shaded his face with a hand.

Senator Robinson's Tribute.

"I deem it appropriate," asserted the Democratic leader, "to state that tomorrow the senior Senator from Virginia, Mr. Glass, will commemorate the anniversary of his birth. Some controversy has arisen as to the number of the anniversary. Some have insisted that it is the one hundred and seventy-eighth anniversary. Others, including the Senator from Virginia, think that the correct record should be reflected by 38. I have examined the authentic record and find that it will be the seventy-eighth anniversary.

"I am sure that we all rejoice in the vigor of mind and body which the senior Senator from Virginia demonstrates. He has had a long and honorable service in the government of our country. As a member of the House of Representatives he demonstrated brilliancy of intellect and thorough grasp of public issues.

"As Secretary of the Treasury he served efficiently during a period of great anxiety and responsibility. By his labors in this body he has earned the affection of all his associates.

"I am happy to have the opportunity of taking note and making remarks on these facts today, since the Senate is not expected to be in session tomorrow."

Senator Borah Also Speaks.

Immediately Senator William E. Borah, the dean of the Senate, arose as the spokesman for the Republican side of the chamber.

"The anniversary of the birth of the distinguished Senator from Virginia, Mr. Glass, makes the day one of felicitation and pride to all his colleagues, the Idahoan said. "I am unwilling to pass it by without an expression of congratulations and esteem.

"He has had a long and notable public career. It is rich with words and deeds which will have a permanent and highly honorable place in the history of his State and of the Nation.

"Endowed with uncommon ability, gifted with a power of expression which belongs to few men, aggressive and courageous in any cause which engages his attention, he enjoys the confidence and the profound respect of his colleagues and of the people, not only of his own State and the Nation, but of a vast number far beyond the borders of his own country.

"We are all delighted that this anniversary finds him, as has been true for many years, engaged in constructive legislation, giving to the country the benefit of his trained mind, his firm grasp of public questions, his mature judgment, and his sound and exceptional understanding of the public good."

Italians Resent

American neutrality act in event of an European war.

Complete isolation of the United States in case of a European conflict is unthinkable to France, which fully appreciates its great transatlantic reservoir of raw materials, money and munitions.

Tonight's interest in American politics, unprecedented since the World War, was centered on these issues:

Whether Congress will vote complete neutrality.

Whether Congress will pass legislation enforcing United States respect of a possible anti-Italian oil embargo.

France is concerned greatly with the possibility that America will abandon completely the doctrine of freedom of the seas, which involved America in war with Great Britain in 1812 and helped to force her entrance into the World War.

Still Expects Friendship.

However, despite ill-feeling aroused in America over nonpayment of the war debt, France believes that in an emergency she again will be able to depend upon America's generosity and forgetfulness to come to her aid.

French official circles are skeptical that any neutrality law, however air-tight, will enable America to avoid a world conflict. They argued that rapid extension of a European conflict into one of world-wide proportions would suck America into the holocaust.

Many French observers believe that granting discretionary powers to the President might help matters, but that automatic application of iron-clad neutrality would be a staggering blow to France at war.

English Much Impressed.

London (Saturday), Jan. 4 (U.P.).—President Roosevelt's warning of the threat to world peace profoundly impressed the English public and government quarters. His address was regarded as aligning the United States more firmly than since the World War against militant expansionist countries.

Comment generally ascribed his remarks on the international situation to Germany, Japan and Italy.

A responsible government spokesman characterized the speech as "avoiding entanglements, but making clear that the vast authority of the United States would be exerted against those either momentarily seeking fresh conquests or contemplating them."

Seen Strong Influence.

The speech was expected to exercise a firm diplomatic influence strengthening the stand of such countries as Great Britain, France and Russia and the weaker countries facing danger of possible attack, government circles felt.

The speech was held psychologically to encourage nonaggressive powers, and the section implicity admitting the possibility of peaceful revision of treaties and frontiers was studied closely.

President Roosevelt's reference to nations seeking to rectify injustices springing from former wars, or seeking outlets for their race, was considered to leave the door open to revision and forestall a charge that the United States merely was pleading immunity for satiated countries. The allusion that the United States needs a well-ordered neutrality program, coupled with the admonition to militaristic countries, was expected to have an immediate effect stimulating sanctions against Italy, extending them to oil and, in a broader sense, stiffening defensive co-operation by countries devoted to peace.

Tokyo, Saturday, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—President Roosevelt, in the section of his message to Congress dealing with foreign affairs, "showed that same lack of knowledge of the affairs of the Orient which so long has been a regrettable characteristic of American statesmen," a war office spokesman said today.

"Mr. Roosevelt's opinions about the necessary 'patience' on the part of nations who have no outlet for their excess population, no source of raw materials, and which are discriminated against in world markets, will have no influence on Japanese policy," the spokesman said.

Nichols Favors Federal Funds As Airport Aid

Indorses Plan of Draper for WPA or PWA Help on Two Fields.

Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who took a leading role in the District airport legislation efforts last session, yesterday indorsed in part the proposal of Assistant Secretary of Commerce Draper to establish two airports for the National Capital with WPA or PWA funds.

"If any Government department takes the initiative of getting money for one or more District airports, it will be doing the Nation, as well as the National Capital, a great favor," he said, "for the District is in dire need of an up-to-date airport."

Nichols, who is one of the House conferees on the airport bill, was optimistic over prospects for an agreement between the Senate and House. Yet he reiterated his demand that the War, Commerce and Postoffice departments be represented on any commission authorized to select a site. The Senate last session wanted to leave the personnel entirely to the Prsident.

"I am not so sure it would be a good thing, from the point of view of safety and national defense, to concentrate the National Capital's airports," Nichols said.

"It seems to me that there are other sites that would not make it necessary to have all the airports, including the Army's and Navy's, bunched together."

Nichols said that his position last session had been misunderstood in some quarters.

"I am not working for any other site," he said. "The Washington Airport seemed to offer the best possibilities of any of the sites I inspected, but that doesn't mean that there may not be others just as good.

"I am still convinced that Gravelly Point is not feasible."

German Firm to Build Boats for Yugoslavia

Bremen, Germany, Jan. 3 (AP).—Germany appeared as a builder of naval craft for a foreign power today for the first time since the World War.

The Friedrich Luerssen Co. of Vegesack, announced receipt of a "big order for speedy motorboats for the Yugoslavian navy." No details were given, except that the boats will be equipped with Zimler-Benz motors. Completion of the order is expected to require two years.

MacDonald's Daughter Becomes an Innkeeper

Speen, Buckinghamshire, England, Jan. 3 (AP).—Isabel MacDonald official hostess at No. 10 Downing street, while her father, Ramsay MacDonald, was prime minister, started a new job as innkeeper today.

She took possession of "Ye Olde Plow Inn" and proceeded to staff it with some of the servants who were with her at No. 10.

Scarlet Fever Scare Closes Alaska School

Fairbanks, Alaska, Jan. 3 (AP).—A scarlet fever outbreak here caused territorial health officials today to close the University of Alaska, public schools, theaters and places of assemblage.

Dr. F. B. Gillespie, district deputy territorial health officer, wirelessed Juneau for a supply of serum to be sent by airplane. The amount of serum on hand is sufficient only for the six current cases.

Levy's Deadline Past, but Few Coal Firms Pay

Companies Delay on Tax Pending High Court Rule on Guffey Act.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 3.—Old Man Coal shook his head groggily tonight and trampled along through the maze of tangles surrounding the Guffey bituminous control act.

First in the many twists is the by-path of processing taxes. Scores of producers have obtained restraining orders against collection of the levy—15 per cent on the price of coal at the mine.

They include many operators complying with the act's general provisions, but determined that noncompliers should not obtain marketing advantages.

Their argument is this: Companies challenging the constitutionality of the act escape payment of the tax pending disposition of their court contests, and if they win, automatically would be in a better marketing position because they retained control of the tax funds.

Consequently the cash drawers of the coal commission echoed hollowly today, 24 hours after the "zero hour" for payment of the tax. Only a comparative handful of producers have made their payments. The others say in effect, "We'll wait until the courts rule finally."

Scores of attacks upon the act's constitutionality have been made in Federal courts and generally coal men agree a Supreme Court decision is the only hope of clarifying the situation.

Latest of the court actions came today in Chicago. There Federal District Judge John P. Barnes termed the Guffey bill levy "not a tax, but a penalty," and awarded a temporary injunction restraining collection from the Truax-Traer Co.

Judge Barnes added an opinion the act could be upheld only under the Interstate Commerce clause, taxing provisions of the Constitution or general Congressional authority to legislate for general welfare, and declared:

"In my opinion, this act is not authorized by any of these. Mining is not an interstate commerce. While the sale of coal from Illinois mines to persons out of the State may be interstate commerce, the mixing of such small items with the mass of intrastate commerce does not warrant this legislation."

Housing Project Suit Is Dismissed

The Federal Government's plans for establishment of a model community of low-cost homes at Franklin, N. J., went forward in the District Supreme Court yesterday when Chief Justice A. A. Wheat dismissed a suit brought by the township of Franklin and four property owners which sought to halt the project.

The township and the four property owners alleged their tax burdens would be unduly increased if the low-cost homes were built. They asserted the city's fire and police protection would have to be increased with no additional recompense from taxation because of the low cost of the properties to be erected.

Both arguments were swept aside by the chief justice, who held that neither was entitled to recognition by him. Moreover, the decision stated, the suit was in the nature of a legal proceeding against the Government, which had not consented to being sued.

Shun 'World War,' Butler Warns U. S.

Cleveland, Jan. 3.—Maj. Gen. Smedley Darlington Butler, the "belligerent pacifist" and retired Marine, tonight exhorted America to shun all foreign entanglements and to adhere strictly to neutrality in "thought, sympathy and fact."

The fiery general warned a mass meeting at Public Hall, where the first sessions of the three-day Congress of the American League against war and fascism are being held, against an impending "second world war."

Although Butler was sharp in denouncing agents and conditions which might draw the United States into conflict, he soft-pedaled discussion of the Italo-Ethiopian situation. Butler's derogatory blast at Premier Mussolini several years ago brought international repercussions and resulted in an official apology to Italy by the United States.

2 Boys Steal Dynamite To Blast Munition Train

Toulon, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—Police today arrested two boys, aged 14, charged with stealing 100 dynamite cartridges from a quarry. Police said the lads confessed they intended blowing up a munitions train as it left Dardennes Arsenal, loaded with arms for the French frontier forts and the navy.

$20,000 Added To Age Pension Under New Bill

Third Deficiency Measure, Filibustered by Long, to Be Revised.

District estimates carried in the third deficiency bill, blocked last session by Senator Huey Long's filibuster, were cut $5,417 by the Budget Bureau in revised figures submitted yesterday to the House.

The estimate for old-age pensions was raised $20,000, to $120,000, however, while the request for needy blind pensions was reduced $2,500 to $22,500.

The only other major change in the original estimates was the elimination of an item of $10,000 to help finance the colored Elks and Shriners' conventions held last August.

The estimate for fees for jurors was left at $3,292.92, expenses for the United Sttaes Court of Appeals were slashed from $9,375 to $5,208, while the amount asked for administration of the smoke regulation act enacted at last session was cut from $15,000 to $6,250.

Estimates of $1,001.94 for settlement of claims and $23 for payment of judgments were left intact. The final total was $158,275.86.

Jobless Total Is 11,627,000, Green Declares

Business 50% Improved, Employment Only 30%, Says Labor Chief.

Declaring that "11,627,000 still have no place in the normal industrial and agricultural work of our country," President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday declared there is "more than enough work to do in this country" if workers' buying power is increased and work hours shortened.

The A. F. of L. president complained that, since 1929, 4,000,000 men have joined the army of jobseekers, while at the same time manufacturers have increased production per man per hour by 25 per cent, making it possible for them to produce their 1929 volume with 1,800,000 fewer workers than they had before.

This, Green continued, accounts for the fact that "although business has now recovered half of its depression loss, only 30 per cent of the unemployed have been put to work. He saw hope in the fact, however, that employment declined less than usual in November, 1935.

"The total laid off from October 15 to November 15 was only 174,000, compared to 320,000 in 1934," Green pointed out. "In the years from 1929 through 1933, November lay-offs have always exceeded 450,000, and have sometimes reached a million."

Improved conditions last fall Green ascribed to the fact "that in manufacturing industries and on railroads, lay-offs have been less, and farmers have given more employment to hired laborers. Trade union reports for the first half of December indicate that employment gains are still holding better than in previous winter seasons."

The unemployment figure cited by Green was the A. F. of L's official report for November, 1935, which showed a decrease of only 909,000 in the army of unemployed since 1934. "While the Government is now providing emergency work through Works Progress and other administrations for 3,500,000 of those who are without industrial employment," said Green, "more than 8,000,000 are entirely without means of livelihood."

According to the unemployment estimate released with the Green statement, there were in January, 1929, 3,059,000 unemployed. This sank to a low for the year of 613,000 in October. The peak of 1930 unemployment was 6,840,000 in December. In 1931 the December peak was 10,888,000. By 1932 it had risen to 14,239,000, and the peak for the depression of 15,625,000 was reached, according to A. F. of L. figures, in February, 1933.

French Company Buys 3 Clipper Planes Here

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 3 (AP).—Officials of the United Aircraft Corporation announced today that the Chargeurs Reunis Co., of Paris, France, has ordered three-hornet-powered Sikorsky S43 baby clipper ships, regarded as the fastest amphibians in the world.

They will be equipped with two motors and will carry 16 passengers each. The French company plans to use the ships on the Paris-Azores run.

Colorful Crowd Sees President, But Tails and Toppers Are Few

ered at the door of the Capitol to see the celebrities arrive.

Attorney General Cummings and Secretary of Commerce Roper were good examples of the wide difference in choice of attire. Cummings wore a top hat, white tie and tails; Roper wore a slouch hat and baggy gray trousers.

Not since President Wilson appeared before Congress to ask that this country join the World War had there been a nocturnal session such as that of last night. Consequently, there was considerable confusion.

Chief William H. Moran, of the Secret Service, who is charged with guarding the life of President Roosevelt, attempted to enter the Capitol without a card of admittance. A guard stopped him, but Moran finally talked his way in.

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Rexford Guy Tugwell, resettlement administrator, both were barred from the galleries when they failed to produce cards. Many other celebrities had the same experience.

A Hollywood director would have been thrilled as the kleig lights were turned on in the huge chamber. Women in the diplomatic gallery and in other galleries focused their lorgnettes on Mrs. Roosevelt and the ladies of the Cabinet.

A few moments later all eyes were on the Speaker's dais as the President, amid a hurricane of cheers, appeared on the scene, assisted by his son, James.

Out in the chamber sat Senator William E. Borah; shaggy "Lion of the Rockies," now at last a contender for the Presidency; Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, he of the faded "pink" whiskers, recently returned from Russia and the shadow of death; Senator Royal Copeland, of New York, with the inevitable red carnation in his lapel, and Senator Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania, focal point of his three sisters in the gallery—Miss Ida Guffey, Miss Pauletta Guffey and Mrs. Carroll Miller.

Senator Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, only woman member of the Upper House, sat in a front row. As usual she was garbed in severe black. The women members of the House were scattered among the men—Representative Mary Norton, of New Jersey; Representative Virginia Jenckes, wearing talisman roses and a brown gown; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, wearing black with orchids, and Representative Florence P. Kahn, plainly dressed as always, but bristling with scintillating remarks.

Senatorial Brides Attend.

The senatorial brides, Mrs. William G. McAdoo, who was married to the tall Californian here a few months ago, and Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington, were present, but Mrs. Millard Tydings was still away on her honeymoon.

The House has two brides, Mrs. Harry Coffee, of Nebraska, and Mrs. R. A. Green, of Florida. Mrs. Coffee wore an afternoon ensemble of black figured crepe with a small black hat, while Mrs. Green wore a black skirt with a bright blue blouse and tiny hat to match.

Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona, was the only woman member of the House to miss the President's speech. A close friend of the Roosevelts, she certainly would have been present, but an infected tooth delayed her return to Washington.

Ickes Out of Town.

Members of the Cabinet were there to a man with the exception of Secretary of the Interior Ickes. He was out of town.

With Mrs. Roosevelt sat her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, the latter wearing a black frock, her blonde head uncovered. The three of them followed the President's speech with the manuscript, scarcely raising their eyes from the typewritten pages.

In the same gallery with the First Lady were the ladies of the Cabinet; Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, in a black gown with her customary corsage of fresh gardenias and a small black hat. Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, in black with a hat to match; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, in brown with a hat of mink and a coat of the same fur; tiny Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, in black with a scarf of ermine knotted at her throat; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, also in black, as was Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce. Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, was below on the House floor with her masculine colleagues. She was ten minutes late in arriving.

Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President, was there, hatless and in black, and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Justice Roberts, was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts.

Mrs. William E. Borah was not present last evening, for although on the preceding evening she had dined with the President and promised to be on hand to hear his message, she said yesterday when asked if she would attend, "I have never yet heard a President deliver his message to Congress except on the radio, for at the last minute, some constituent always turns up, and mine is the only ticket to be had." So the wife of the candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination remained at home.

British Ambassador There.

In the diplomatic gallery, Sir Ronald Lindsay, tall British Ambassador, took his place early, and soon the entire gallery was filled. Present were the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, the latter wearing a Cossack hat of Persian lamb with a black coat trimmed with the same fur; the Minister of Venezuela and Senora de Arcaya, the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, the Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Sokolowska, the latter wearing an evening wrap furred with sable; the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph Close, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the latter wearing black with a huge cape of silver fox, and the Minister of Norway, Mr. Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne.

Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, wife of the Senator from Michigan, was there in black with a jaunty hat trimmed with green; Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, widow of Senator Hitchcock; Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst, wife of Senator Ashurst, in wine-red crepe with a hat to match; the United States Ambassador to Mexico and Mrs. Josephus Daniels, who are visiting in the Capital for several days; Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom; Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of the Senator from Alabama, in maroon tweed trimmed with gray fur and a maroon felt hat; Mrs. Wallace White, jr., wife of Senator White, of Maine; Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, wife of Senator Coolidge, and nearby her son-in-law and daughter, the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring.

Gen. Hines Brings Wife.

Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of the Veterans' Bureau, with Mrs. Hines, who wore a beige coat trimmed with brown fur and a brown hat; Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Solicitor General, wearing a velvet wrap of deep red; Mrs. Henry D. Flood, widow of Representative Flood, with her debutante daughter, Miss Eleanor Flood; Mrs. George Radcliffe, wife of the Senator from Maryland, in Lanvin green.

The United States Ambassador to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Mr. William Bullitt, in this country for the Christmas holidays, was present accompanied by his young daughter, Anne.

Earlier in the week there was a report that the members of Congress would appear last evening in "white tie and tails," with the ladies in full evening regalia, but not so with this country's leaders. They got back to work in their everyday clothes, and only members of the Cabinet, like the President, appeared in formal attire. With exception of a few members of the Diplomatic Corps, all were in "mufti."

Sixteen Microphones Used.

Sixteen microphones were in place to carry President Roosevelt's voice to a potential audience of 75,000,000 Americans, and five movie cameras captured the scene and the speech for posterity.

The President was cheered for three minutes as he strode to the Speaker's dais. In the course of his speech, rebel yells and applause interrupted him 26 times.

As he ended his speech with an emotional quotation from his old teacher of philosophy at Harvard, there was a mild burst of applause, and then a sort of awed silence. The audience, it was apparent, was conscious of the fact that it had looked upon an historic event.

Railroad Income Gaining Sharply

The net operating income of class 1 railways is sharply on the upgrade, according to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Most recent figures included in the report are for October, 1935, when the 149 class 1 railways reported $75,425,093 operating income, as opposed to only $49,336,305 for the same month 1934.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's graph, issued with the report, shows railways struck a low point for the depression early in 1933. The climb after that was rapid, reaching its maximum in July, 1933. Thereafter the course of railway net income continued gradually downward for about a year and a half. The trend began to reverse, however, early in 1935, and the rate of increase picked up sharply in midsummer, with the result November's total approximates the previous depression peak reached in July, 1933.

Two British Seamen Sentenced for Mutiny

Havana, Jan. 3 (AP).—Two British seamen charged with mutiny aboard the British freighter Baron Graham were sentenced to 31 days in jail today and ordered deported to England after completion of the sentences. They were William Morris and Robert M. Jones.

The captain of the vessel, who returned to harbor last night, said shortly after the ship sailed yesterday Morris and Jones appeared on the bridge and tried to take over the vessel. He declared the two were intoxicated.

Federal Board To Open Drive For Sea Safety

Ship Inspection Unit to Begin 1936 Studies at Hearing Jan. 15.

With a view of preventing or reducing sea disasters in 1936, the Federal board of supervising inspectors of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection will hold its first hearing of the new year here January 15, according to Joseph B. Weaver, its director.

The board will discuss life preservers, maritime fire-alarm systems and life-saving and safety devices. The year 1935 was a busy one for both the bureau and the board, which inquired into two major sea disasters.

When the Mohawk was in collision with a freighter a year ago, Federal inspectors of the bureau assigned blame to frozen fluid in the Mohawk's hydraulic steering gear. The Mohawk was being steered by an emergency wheel under telephonic instructions from the bridge when the collision occurred last January off the Jersey coast.

As a result of the Federal investigation, new rules were issued requiring steering guides on all such emergency wheels to be labeled "left" and "right," instead of "port" and "starboard," and ordering that they be placed in view of the bridge, rather than in a separate room below, as was the case on the Mohawk.

Following the grounding of the Dixie on a reef off Florida last fall, the Federal investigating board cleared her master and crew of all blame and commended their bravery. When the accident occurred, the technical division of the bureau was working on calculations for all American ships as to their stability in case of damage by collision, and a naval architect had completed five week's study of the plans of the Dixie.

These reports were made available to the Dixie's owners and to the salvage company, with the result that salvagers knew which holds to pump and which to fill, in order to float the vessel quickly.

Supervising inspectors of the board are: William Fisher, San Francisco; Capt. George Fried, New York City; Eugene Carlson, Norfolk, Va.; Harry Layfield, St. Louis; Eugene Maurer, Louisville; Francis W. J. Buchner, Pittsburgh; Alvin A. Croppers Urged To Picket Farm

Little Rock, Ark., Jan 3 (AP).—Southern share-croppers today were urged to meet a "challenge" from landowners by peaceable mass-picketing of an Arkansas cotton plantation to prevent the planting of a crop.

In a speech for delivery before the annual convention of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, H. L. Mitchell, executive secretary of the union from Memphis, Tenn., called for action against the C. H. Dibble plantation, near Earle, Ark.

He also said the union had "enough evidence to send scores planters to Federal prison" for violations of the AAA crop control contracts, and asserted these facts would be sent to Washington for action.

Len Small to Run Again.

Chicago, Jan. 3 (AP).—Len Small, of Kankakee, Governor of Illinois for two terms, notified members of the Cook County Republican committee today he will shortly announce himself as a candidate again for his old office in the 1936 primaries.

Reaction to Message

sary and expedient." It was a political harrangue; it was a challenge to a straw man to submit to a subservient and gagged Congress the favorite socialistic features of the New Deal.

Former Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels: If it be given to those who have gone before us to know what has transpired on this sphere, they would say the mantle of Andrew Jackson has fallen on Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Col. Frank Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher and avowed G. O. P. Presidential candidate: It was essentially a political address and the opening of his campaign for re-election. I will be explicit and affirmative, and I offer planks in the Democratic platform of 1932 on which this man received his mandates.

Farley Praises It.

Postmaster General James A. Farley: It was one of the best speeches the President ever made.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan Republican: It's not the opening of Congress; it is the opening of a political campaign which will be hot, rabble-rousing and intolerant.

House Majority Whip Patrick J. Boland (Democrat), Pennsylvania: I was pleased with the speech for three reasons. He admonished Congress to adhere to strict neutrality, he took a stand for national defense, and he pointed out the danger of returning to the old order.

Assistant House Republican Leader Joseph Martin:—It was a defensive speech, designed to stop the rising tide of public sentiment against the New Deal.

'Showed Fight.'

Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat) Texas:—It was one hell of a good speech. It was good because he showed fight. That's all he has to do to win.

Representative Carl E. Mapes (Republican) Michigan:—It was too much of an appeal to class prejudice, protesting too much his own virtues and assailing the motives of others.

House Appropriations Chairman James P. Buchanan—A great speech.

Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon—It wasn't on the "State of the Union." Most of it was a bid for re-election.

Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan—A grand speech. I liked best his statement that he didn't believe in retreat.

Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa—Not a constructive thing there. Think of the bravery of a fellow perfectly willing to submit a thing to a Congress controlled by a 3-to-1 vote. It was cheap, political claptrap.

Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson: I commend it highly.

Representative John Taber (Republican), New York: Entirely on the defensive. It shows he's on the run.

Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama: It suited me just fine. The President let the people know that the executive is still for the people.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), Massachusetts: If he wasn't afraid, he would not have come here.

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi: It brought vividly to life what the American people know is true.

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas: The first part of the speech regarding the world peace situation was very fine. The last part had a lot of politics in it.

"Breathing Spell" Hailed.

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—President Roosevelt's message tonight to Congress was regarded in certain financial quarters as both challenging and reassuring.

Challenging, because it demanded a statement of purpose from opponents of the New Deal.

Reassuring, because it opened the vista of an extension of the famed "breathing spell" for business.

Definition of the opposition to the New Deal—"entrenched greed" and "unscrupulous money changers" and "discredited special interests"—made it difficult for candid observers to pin an identification tag on the enemies of the new Roosevelt economic order.

Agree Advances Made.

Authorities of whatever political faith agree with Roosevelt that the Nation's business and industry have advanced since the fear-ridden days of the bank moratorium.

At the same time, numerous associations, business organizations and individuals have stated flatly the progress would have been greater without the "hindrance" of the New Deal.

It was felt that a great bloc of business would be reassured by the absence of any proposals for new legislation in the Roosevelt speech and the statement that no new taxes are advisable, a tacit acknowledgment that present laws are strong enough to gain the New Deal goal.

There remained, however, the abrupt Roosevelt challenge that Congress "is ready to wage increasing warfare" in the interests of the present order.

Don't Mention It.

Deep Yellows In Egg Yolks Believed Best

None Need to Be Wasted; Thin Water Layer Is a Preserver.

MANY a simple everyday dish is made regal by a crown of snowy meringue. Angel-food cake is the epicure's delight. But the golden yolks, deserted by their whites, sometimes become a problem. So many interesting things may be done with egg yolks that not a single yolk need ever be wasted. A really good cook finds a place for every yolk that makes its appearance in her kitchen.

From the point of food value the yolk is the most important part of the egg. One egg yolk yields only 54 calories, yet in that small sunny globe is concentrated a rich supply of the sunshine vitamin D, the growth promoting vitamin A, and the mineral iron. Other vitamins are there too, as well as phosphorus and efficient proteins, and flavor, that most important yet most unmeasurable of all food qualities.

Yolks vary in color from palest yellow to deep orange, depending on the feed the hen has had. The color of the yolk has nothing whatever to do with the color of the shell. The more of the vitamin—rich green feeds the hen has eaten—the deeper is the color of her egg yolks. There appears to be some reason to believe that the deeper orange yolks may actually be richer in vitamin A than the paler ones. Certainly the former make most attractive sauces and custards and cakes.

Difference in Yolks.

Egg yolk cannot do all the things egg white does in cookery, but it can do some others that egg white cannot do. For one thing, it can take the place of whole eggs in a number of dishes.

Egg yolk, when beaten, makes a good foam, entrapping air to give lightness and delicacy to cakes and cookies. It does not become quite so fluffy as beaten egg white, nor does it increase its volume to the same degre. But egg yolk is much better than egg white for making mayonnaise and Hollandaise sauce, and it gives rich smoothness to custards and cream fillings.

Egg yolk whips up to the best foam for cake making if the yolks are slightly warm. An easy way to warm them is to set the bowl in which the yolks are beaten into a smaller bowl which contains hot water. The yolks must not be allowed to become so warm that they cook. This warming of the yolk is particularly desirable when sugar is beaten into them, for sugar dissolves much more quickly in warm than in cold yolks,

Use Thin Layer of Water.

Covering the uncooked yolks with a thin layer of cold water before putting them, in a covered container, into the refrigerator is a good way to keep them in uncooked form. It is difficult to prevent a slight drying out of the surface when egg yolk is stored uncooked. Hard-cooked left-over egg yolks is a good way to prevent them from drying out.

An easy way to hard-cook egg yolks is this: Bring water to a boil in a covered saucepan. As soon as the water boils, drop in the yolks, one by one, reduce the heat and let the water simmer for 15 minutes. Cool. Hard-cooked egg yolks may be used at once or they may be stored in a covered container in the refrigerator. They make excellent sandwiches, colorful and nutritious salad ingredients or garnish, and they may be used as the foundation of a large number of unusual and delightful entrees.

Convenient measures to remember about egg yolks are these:

1 egg yolk emulsifies 1 cup of oil for mayonnaise.

2 egg yolks thicken 1 cup of milk for custard.

7 to 8 egg yolks measure one-half cup.

14 to 16 egg yolks measure 1 cup.

One left-over egg yolk scarcely presents a problem. Stirred into a glass of milk, it contributes its supply of iron to that already excellent food beverage. Or it may be added to a little milk to make the "dip" for French toast. A few of the many other uses for one egg yolk are:

1. Add to white sauce or cream soup for rich, creamy flavor and color.
2. Add to pancake batter.
3. Make chocolate frosting for cake or cookies.
4. Make butter cream icing to fill between graham cracker sandwiches.

The following recipes provide interesting ways of using left-over egg yolks:

Hollandaise Sauce.

½ cup butter
2 egg yolks
⅓ cup hot water
⅛ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons lemon juice or 1 tablespoon vinegar.

Beat egg yolks, adding gradually the softened butter, hot water and seasonings. Cook in double boiler until mixture coats spoon. Remove from fire and add gradually the lemon juice or vinegar, stirring constantly. The secret of making Hollandaise sauce lies in beating the egg yolks thoroughly at first, and in adding the lemon juice after the sauce has been removed from the fire.

German Potato Soup.

4 large potatoes
2 large onions
3 bay leaves
1 quart milk
2 egg yolks, beaten
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon butter
Minced parsley

Cook potatoes, onion and bay leaves in boiling salted water until done. Remove bay leaves. Mash potatoes and onions. Add milk, beaten egg yolks and salt and pepper. When soup is served in bowls, sprinkle a little minced parsley over each serving. Accompany with toasted bread cubes or crisp wafers. Celery may be used as flavoring instead of onion. Serves 6.

Chess Pie.

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
¼ cup flour
⅛ teaspoon salt
3 egg yolks
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter and sugar together until sugar is dissolved. Add flour, salt and beaten egg yolks. Mix thoroughly, add milk and vanilla. Pour into unbaked shell and bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) 30-35 minutes.

Inexpensive Roasts and Great Variety of Winter Vegetables Make Delicious and Attractive Meals

Inexpensive roasts and winter vegetables—potatoes, cauliflower, beans, carrots, onions, turnips or beets—cooked as illustrated in the electric thrift cooker or in a large covered pan in any type of oven make delicious as well as easily prepared and economical dinners for stormy January days. Other seasonal fresh vegetables, canned or dried ones, may be used without meat to form attractive vegetable platters.

Kraut Is Fine When Cooked With Onions

Dish Also Prepared With Egg Plant and Crumbs Offered for Variety.

A GOOD many housewives still think of sauerkraut exclusively in connection with meat, especially spareribs or roast pork. As a matter of fact, sauerkraut is just as delicious and satisfying with a great variety of non-meat companions.

For centuries this healthful product has enjoyed great popularity, either in itself or in combination with vegetables, eggs, nuts, etc.

Here are four meatless, low-cost recipes:

Smothered Sauerkraut.

4 cups sauerkraut
4 medium-sized onions
4 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon sirup
½ tablespoon mustard
¼ teaspoon paprika
½ cup water
¼ cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons meat drippings or other fat

Slice onions very thin and add to sauerkraut. Add flour, mustard and paprika to fat, brown well. Add water and sirup and cook until thickened. Remove from fire and add lemon juice. Pour over sauerkraut and let stand one-half hour before serving.

Eggplant a la Sauerkraut.

1 eggplant
1 cup sauerkraut
½ cup bread crumbs
1 tablespoon onion
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons fat

Cook the eggplant in boiling water 15 minutes. Cut a slice from the top, remove the pulp carefully and to it add the sauerkraut, bread crumbs, onion, salt and pepper. Melt the fat, add the sauerkraut and bread-crumb mixture, stir well and refill the eggplant shell. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) 10 minutes.

Escalloped Sauerkraut With Cheese.

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon paprika
2 cups sauerkraut
1 cup grated cheese
½ cup buttered crumbs

Make a white sauce by melting butter, adding flour and then milk. Allow to boil and then add seasoning. Spread a layer of half the sauerkraut on the bottom of a buttered baking dish, cover it with half the white sauce, and then a layer of half the grated cheese. Make a second layer of sauerkraut, sauce and cheese; cover the top with a layer of buttered crumbs and place in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit). When the sauce bubbles through the crumbs it is done. Serve hot in the baking dish.

Sauerkraut Sausage.

Cook one pound of sauerkraut with a little water for about half an hour until quite dry. Take a finely cut onion which has been browned in fat and add to the sauerkraut, steaming the entire mixture to dryness. Let it stand until it cools. Beat two eggs with a tablespoon of flour and half a teaspoon salt and add two to three large grated potatoes. Roll this and the sauerkraut into small sausages about finger length and then sprinkle with or roll in flour. Saute the sausages to a golden brown in a little butter. The mixture before it is rolled should be almost the consistency of meat-loaf mixture.

Cold Bacon and Cheese Good for Sandwiches

Leftover bacon strips have many uses. If the bacon has not been fried too crisp it can be reheated in a frying pan. The fat that still remains in the bacon will be released by the heat to keep the bacon from burning.

If the cold bacon is very crisp it will be delicious if crumbled and added to cheese or peanut butter sandwich spreads, omelet, waffle or biscuit mixtures.

Hot Vegetable Platter Has Unlimited Possibilities During Stormy January and February Days; Many Delightful Combinations Available.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE WOMAN who knows her vegetable cookery will be able to serve many attractive, as well as inexpensive menus, during January and February. Though many of the winter vegetables, especially the root varieties—carrots, onions, turnips, potatoes, etc.—are delicious when cooked with meats, there are many other varieties that lend themselves to an attractive combination for the hot vegetable platter.

The seasonal vegetables will naturally be the less expensive and in many cases they will also be of the best quality. This group includes cauliflower, carrots, beets, Brussels sprouts, onions, turnips, broccoli, potatoes—both white and sweet—parsnips, Hubbard squash, string beans and cabbage.

D. DUNCAN.

Then there are the dried legumes—peas (black-eyed and green), many varieties of beans—red kidney, black, lima and navy—and lentils, the dark brownish German ones and the reddish orange Egyptian ones.

Of course, there are all kinds of canned vegetables, and these are delicious when attractively cooked and are inexpensive. Of the canned vegetables, sauerkraut is one that is particularly popular during the colder months of the year. Excellent kraut is also obtainable in bulk at many of the various markets.

Thrift Cooker.

The woman who has an electric stove with a thrift cooker may use this bit of equipment for many delightful meat and vegetable meals, for the one pan is large enough to permit the cooking of a roast and two or three vegetables at one time. This type of meal can also be cooked in a gas or oil stove in the oven, the only other requirement being a large covered roasting pan.

Any of the pot roasts—rump, chuck, three-corner—combine well with carrots, turnips, onions and potatoes. Roast pork, though it is somewhat more expensive, also can be used occasionally with the above-mentioned vegetables.

The hot vegetable platter has unlimited possibilities for meals which must be inexpensive as well as attractive. Choosing vegetabes for color contrast as well as flavor contrast is important. If, for sxample, you find that white potatoes, cauliflower and celery are the three vegetables that must be served at the same time because they are the least expensive, all well and good, for they will provide enough flavor contrast if properly served and can be made to be attractive to the eye as well by colorful sauces or garnishes. The potatoes might be baked and then mashed and returned to the shell. Topped with a light coating of butter and browned under the broiler and touched up with a dash of paprika they become a colorful vegetable.

The cauliflower will need a colored sauce to make it an effective contrast for the potatoes. Hollandaise, which is of a rich yellow, will be the wisest choice. If real hollandaise is too expensive make a mock hollandaise which is really a white sauce that has been tinted with the yolks of eggs and flavored with a little lemon juice.

Instead of cooking the celery as you might do on first thought, serve it raw and stuff it with a rich-hued, soft pimiento cheese. As a final touch garnish the platter with sprigs of crisp green parsley or watercress.

Color, Flavor Contrast.

Usually you will have no trouble in selecting vegetables whose colors as well as flavors will give contrast. Remember that the best combination as far as flavor is concerned will be one where a green vegetable, a starchy one and a crisp succulent one is included. Then if the green vegetable happens to be Brussles sprouts or broccoli and has a strong flavor, the milder flavor of the starchy one and the freshness of the succulent one will blend to form a perfect contrast.

The dried legumes are especially attractive when served without a meat, for they are rich in protein. They are quite mealy, too, and contain enough starch so that it is not necessary to have potatoes or macaroni or rice when they are served. Most of the dried vegetables should be soaked overnight in cold water before cooking. After soaking drain the vegetable and cover with more cold water. Bring to the boiling point and then simmer until tender. Season with salt while cooking. Left-over bits of ham, a ham bone or salt pork or chopped bacon may be used as seasonings for the legumes, the meat being placed in the kettle when the vegetables begin to cook, or, if the flavor is preferred less pronounced, the meat may be added when the vegetables are almost tender.

The liquid in which the vegetables have been cooked can be thickened slightly by adding a little flour which has been mixed to a smooth running paste with cold water.

You will find that the legumes make an excellent piece de resistance for the meatless dinner. They may be served with one fresh vegetable, preferably a green one, and a crisp salad and a light dessert to form a well-balanced and tempting meal.

A delightful meal with a German flavor uses lentils flavored with bacon as the main dish. Tomato juice may be served first, then the lentils, buttered spinach flavored with lemon juice and garnished with served with a tart mustard dress-hard-cooked egg slices, cole slaw ing and stewed prunes.

Oysters Found Rich in Iodine To Curb Goiter

SEAFOOD, particularly the oyster, was pronounced a satisfactory source of the iodine needed to prevent goiter by Dr. Roe E. Remington, eminent bio-chemist and director of the South Carolina Food Research Commission, in a recent report to the South Carolina section of the American Chemical Society.

Dr. Remington's statement was hailed as particularly significant in view of recent experiments with iodized milk and eggs at Cornell University.

The bio-chemist based the report on four years' research with laboratory animals in which he induced a goiter condition by a diet lacking in iodine. He was able thereby to determine the least quantity of iodine needed to prevent the disorder.

A crystal of pure iodine weighing no more than a dime would protect more than a million white rats, the laboratory animals used in the experiments, from goiter for one day, he discovered. He found that a drop of ordinary tincture of iodine would safeguard animals for a year.

"In testing the value of iodine-rich foods," Dr. Remington said, "it has been found that in oysters the iodine is fully available and used by the animals to prevent the enlargement of the thyroid gland, which we call simple goiter. It has previously been pointed out by E. J. Coulson, of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, that oysters are richer in this element than most other forms of sea life and much richer than any foods produced on land. It has not been shown that the iodine of vegetable food is of equal value to that of seafood to prevent goiter."

Ammonia, Chalk Will Clean Silver

Cleaning silver, whether flat sterling heavily decorated, is a simple matter if you will follow the directions of a reliable jeweler.

Buy some powdered chalk and household ammonia and a stiff bristled brush. Place a small amount of the chalk, about two inches, in the bottom of a screw top jar. Add an equal amount of ammonia and shake well. Rub this mixture and the brush for cleaning the heavily decorated pieces. Wipe all with a clean soft cloth, wash with warm, soapy water, rinse well and dry thoroughly.

Your silver will sparkle like new after this treatment.

Tin Can Chef Is Suggested On Sundays

Long Hours in the Kitchen Saved by Preparing Simple Meals.

SUNDAY is always a day that calls for at least one important meal, so for the housewife that has been very busy with culinary activities during the week, or the business woman who likes to have dinner at home, we suggest that the meal be prepared as simply as possible.

It is no disgrace these days to be smart and use the simple methods of doing things. Maybe your great-grandmother would be shocked, but not your husband or friends. In fact, if you prepare a delightful dinner with very little effort your husband will be so much the prouder and you will be the envy of all your friends who do not know how to make the most of the modern inventions in cookery.

Rest on Sunday.

Instead of spending long hours in the kitchen getting ready for the Sunday dinner, let the tin can be your chef and then you can have the pleasure of more time with your friends you have invited in to enjoy your hospitality. You will feel fresh and rested instead of tired and worn, and Sunday will be a day to which you can look forward every week.

Anyway, many of the following suggestions are from the tin can. Others are dishes that include fresh foods, but all easily and quickly prepared. The meal may be started with any one of the following foods, such as oysters on the half shell, clam broth topped with a dash of whipped cream which has been seasoned lightly with a bit of finely chopped red pimiento, fruit cocktail or piping hot onion soup in which floats a crust of toasted Vienna or French bread topped with grated cheese.

Baked Ham.

For the main course you might have a baked ham (the kind purchasable in a can). The ham can be coated with brown sugar and dotted with cloves and garnished with pineapple slices, then heated in the oven until the surface is beautifully glazed. Serve this with mashed or candied sweet potatoes, buttered whole kernel corn, green string beans, pickled peaches or pears, and ripe olives.

If this does not touch the spot, how about chicken? For the small household it would be fine creamed and served in patty shells, or made into a chicken pot pie, the good old family style. With it serve onions (from the can, too) and some peas with chopped mushrooms added to them, and cranberry jelly.

The dessert can be in keeping with the cold weather, for both plum and fig puddings come in cans. Heat the pudding by immersing the can in boiling water for an hour or two, until steaming hot, and serve with hard sauce or a hot liquid sauce, if you prefer, and then, if you really want to do a little playing in the kitchen, remember mince pie is one which warms the cockles of the heart, and it is simple to do with the mince meat ready to put between the thinly rolled layers of tender pastry. If you are not an expert at making pastry, order a box of the already prepared pie-mix from your grocer.

Entertaining can be made simple and a real pleasure by taking advantage of the delicious prepared foods. Save the home kitchen-prepared foods for a time when you have no extra curricular activities to which to look forward.

Capon Stuffing.

Capons are large, plump young roosters, especially fattened for the table. They are prepared for cooking in the same way as chickens. For stuffing, choose a delicate flavoring such as oysters or chestnuts. Mushrooms or truffles are especially good with capons.

Goose or Duck, Baked Apples Please Palates

Rich Dark Meat Is Tempting Fare to Epicures; Hints for Cooking Listed.

THOUGH the recent holiday season featured many a turkey and chicken, there are women who still find it more satisfactory to serve a roasted bird for a company or Sunday dinner. If you have wearied of turkey and chicken and you still wish to serve a roasted bird of some kind, why not try duck or goose?

Either of these two birds will appeal to the persons who enjoy dark meat. The meat of the goose and duck is quite a bit richer than that of either the turkey or chicken.

There are any number of interesting ways in which to prepare duck and goose. They are usually roasted and baked apples or apple sauce are the favorite accompaniments.

If you have definitely decided upon goose and you wish to prepare your dinner with as little effort and as few pains as possible the following method of preparation is suggested:

Roast Goose with Baked Apple.

1 eight-pound goose
2 cups bread crumbs
1 chopped onion
2 tablespoons fat
¼ teaspoon sage
1 teaspoon salt
Pinch of pepper
6 to 8 apples
¼ cup brown sugar
3 sweet potatoes

Cook the giblets until tender, chop and add to stuffing made by mixing bread crumbs, onion, fat, sage, salt and pepper. After cleaning and washing the goose thoroughly, stuff and sew the neck and back. Roast for 15 minutes at 500 degrees F. (very hot oven), then reduce the heat to 350 degrees F. (moderate) and cook about 3 hours. Wash and core six to eight apples; sprinkle with brown sugar, stuff with mashed potatoes; bake until tender and serve hot with the goose.

Other suggested accompaniments for the roast goose with sweet potato-stuffed apples are cranberry juice cocktail, a green vegetable, celery hearts and plum or fig pudding.

Deviled goose with potato stuffing is also excellent. Prepare it by the following recipe:

Deviled Goose.

1 goose
Potato stuffing
¼ cup vinegar
1 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 tablespoon salt

After cleaning the goose and wiping it well with a damp cloth, plunge it into a kettle of boiling water and simmer for one hour. Take it from the kettle, drain well and wipe it dry. Partly fill the body and neck with potato stuffing, sew up and truss, and roast in a moderately hot oven (350 to 400 degrees F.), allowing 15 minutes to the pound. Pour over it a mixture of the vinegar, pepper and prepared mustard and baste frequently. Serve with giblet gravy.

An old goose that can not be made eatable in any other way may be cooked in this manner, two hours instead of one hour being allowed for the simmering.

Potato Stuffing.

2 cups hot mashed potatoes
1 cup bread crumbs
½ teaspoon pepper
½ tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon sage
4 tablespoons melted butter or other fat
2 tablespoons onion juice

Mix the ingredients in order given.

Roast Duck.

Epicures prefer young ducks rare, and without stuffing. Some persons consider that ducks have too strong a flavor, and to absorb this flavor lay cored and quartered apples inside the body. These apples are removed before the duck is sent to the table. Celery and onions also may be placed inside the duck to season it and improve the flavor, two tablespoons of chopped onion being used to every cup of chopped celery, which may consist of the green stalks that are not desired for the table. This stuffing is also removed from the bird before it is sent to the table. Should filling be preferred, use potato stuffing, putting it in very hot.

Truss the duck, sprinkle it with salt, pepper and flour, and roast in a very hot oven (500 degrees Fahrenheit) 15 to 30 minutes, provided the duck is young and is desired rare.

Full-grown domestic ducks should be roasted at least one hour (500 degrees Fahrenheit for 15 minutes; 350 degrees Fahrenheit the rest of the time) and should be basted every 10 minutes. Serve duck with giblet gravy and applesauce or grape or currant jelly. Green peas may also be served with duck.

To truss poultry or game for roasting, clean, dress and stuff. Tie a piece of twine to the end of the neck skin and pull the neck skin over the back. Slip the ends of the wings over the back and press the wings closely to the body. Press the thighs closely to the body, draw the ends of the twine back on each side and up over the thighs. Cross the twine between the legs and tie it down under the tail.

Bacon Strips Aid Roast.

If poultry or game has little fat it should be larded with thin strips of sale pork or bacon laid across the breast. To prevent the burning of the legs wind them with strips of cloth which have been dipped in melted fat.

Hawaiian Sausage Cakes a New Dish

For the Sunday morning breakfast is offered Hawaiian sausage cakes served with waffles and maple sirup and plenty of piping hot coffee. You'll like the spiciness of the sausage combined with the tangy freshness of the pineapple.

You will need as ingredients 1 No. 2½ can sliced pineapple and ground sausage meat, about 1 pound.

Arrange drained pineapple slices in covered baking dish. Top with sausage cakes made just the same size. Bake covered for 30 minutes in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.). Remove cover to brown and serve at once. This recipe will provide for eight servings.

Broiled Turkey.

Young turkeys may be broiled or panned, like chickens. A young turkey is easily distinguished by its smooth, black legs and white skin.

Maxwell Case Helps Women Jailed at Wise

They'll Be Moved From Cold Basement Soon; Funds Grow.

By Virginia Lee Warren

As a direct result of newspaper publicity, women prisoners now confined in a squalid basement cell at the county jail in Wise, Va., will soon be transferred to quarters on an upper floor, Earl Maxwell said yesterday while in Washington.

Since last July, his sister, Edith Maxwell, has been behind bars in the dark, poorly lighted basement for the alleged slaying of her father.

Reporters who have visited the 21-year-old mountain school teacher in her cell have been shocked by the unhealthful conditions in the underground room.

"The new sheriff, Clyde Bolling, says he's going to change things," said Maxwell yesterday. "One of the first announcements he made after taking office January 1 was that all women will soon be put in a cell on one of the upper floors. He said he was tired of reading about the awful conditions in the basement."

Attorney Consulted.

If the change is made soon Edith undoubtedly will be one of the prisoners transferred. She cannot hope to win her freedom before March.

Yesterday her brother consulted Charles Henry Smith, of Atlandria, outstanding Virginia criminal lawyer, on the probability of presenting a written motion in the Wise County Circuit Court some time this month, asking a new trial for the girl.

Attorney Smith has been retained by The Washington Post to help Edith gain a new trial. He will work with M. J. Fulton, Richmond lawyer, who will handle the constitutional aspects of the case, and with the three Wise County attorneys who defended the young school teacher at her trial in November.

At that time she was convicted of first-degree murder and was sentenced to 25 years in prison.

Judge H. A. W. Skeen, the man who sentenced Edith, agreed when an oral motion was made in his court on December 21, closing day of this term, to continue the court indefinitely. This will give Smith and Fulton time to examine the record of the case and file a written motion before the next term of court opens in March.

Attorney Smith plans to go to Wise next week. Meantime, he will study transcriptions of testimony given at the November trial.

Yesterday Edith, according to her brother, was to be taken from her basement cell long enough for a trip to the dentist. Her general condition, Earl said, is "pretty good considering all she's been through."

The county physician calls upon the inmates of the jail almost daily. He and Edith have become great friends. He usually brings her a bag of apples. And she plays nurse for him when any of the prisoners need attention.

"Dr. Hix says he's going to make her his assistant when she gets out of jail," said Maxwell. Edith has declared several times she hopes to take nurse's training as soon as she "comes free."

Former Cellmate Hurt.

Just now she is greatly concerned over the condition of one of her former cellmates. The girl, who while in jail learned to read and write under Edith's tutelage, was released last Saturday. That night she was critically injured in an automobile accident and is now in the hospital at Clintwood, about 17 miles from Wise.

"Edith keeps asking about her and wants me to run over to Clintwood every ten minutes to find out how she is," said Maxwell.

The young school teacher, in addition to worrying over her former cellmate, has a good many troubles of her own. There is no heat in the jail's basement and it has been mighty cold at Wise.

"Finally the jailer gave me permission to get her an electric heater," said Earl. "But it doesn't go far toward heating that big, cold, dark room."

But while there's a shortage of heat there's an abundance of sweets in the cell. Edith received 500 pounds of candy for Christmas. Daily she supplies all the prisoners with refreshments to vary the monotonous jail fare.

Letters of sympathy are still coming from all over the country to the mountain girl who struck her father with a slipper when he tried to beat her, according to Earl Maxwell.

"We're glad people are interested in the case and their messages mean a lot to Edith," said Maxwell, "but you can be sure of one thing, if she's ever acquitted she's not going to appear in vaudeville or go in the movies or anything like that. We're not going to capitalize on this affair. All we want is to have Edith with us again."

At least one vaudeville offer has already come to his sister, Earl said.

The sympathy aroused by the girl's plight is not confined to the United States.

A reader of The Washington Post, now living in Amsterdam, Holland, has sent a $3 contribution to The Post's defense fund for her. An accompanying letter, signed "Anastasie," said:

"It is surprising that while thousands of dollars were subscribed in aid of a man like Hauptmann, so little is given in defense of a poor girl so evidently the victim of ignorance and intolerance."."

Bad Breaks.

Whenever I hear the familiar wail from the bridge table: "Did you ever see such breaks!" I am reminded of the time some years ago, when that cry drew, instead of the sympathetic murmurs expected, a concert of derisive laughter in which even the waller's partner joined.

A hand had just been played at a six spade contract that had been bid in almost solitaire fashion by the incurable optimist sitting South. This was the hand.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

SOUTH
♥ A 7 2
♦ A 7
♣ 10 9 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	1 no tr'p	Pass
3 spades	Pass	3 no tr'p	Pass
5 spades	Pass	6 spades (final bid)

It will be noted, from the bidding, that North knew he had a slightly demented partner and did his best to apply the brakes, until the five spade bid, following a previous jump, lured him into being gullible "just once more." Needless to say South's second jump was outrageous—even his first was a considerable stretch.

West's opening lead of the diamond king was won by South, who crossed to dummy with a low heart and took the trump finesse to his jack. It held and, luckily, the suit broke 3 and 3. (Approximate odds against this combination of breaks are 7 to 1.)

Taking this much as a matter of course, South now proceeded to break the heart suit 3 and 3 (the odds are approximately 2 to 1 against this) for the discard of his losing diamond. He ruffed a diamond to enter his hand and let the club ten ride through. East's queen won and another diamond was led, which South ruffed. Now the second club finesse was attempted, but it was lost to East's king.

Whereupon South cursed lustily and called on heaven to witness his horrible luck!

Detectives Hint Loring Case Break

A hint of action in the investigation of Corinna Loring's murder came yesterday with the return to Upper Marlboro, Md., of Lieut. Joseph Itzel and Sergt. Leo Vogelsang, Baltimore detectives in charge of the investigation.

The two detectives, who had been in Baltimore for ten days, had a long conference with State's Attorney Alan Bowie, who afterward said:

"I believe we can finish this case."

Corinna Loring, 27-year-old stenographer, was murdered the night of Nov. 4 not far from her home in Mount Rainier, Md., two days before she was to have been married to Richard Tear, 29-year-old attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Town Publicity Urged.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 3.—W. W. Gibbs, president of the Clifton Forge-Waynesboro Telephone Co., yesterday in an address before the Rotary Club urged the promotion of an extensive publicity campaign for the town during the year in view of the increasing tourist traffic that will come into Virginia over the Skyline Drive. Gibbs also urged active support of the project of the Chamber of Commerce seeking the erection of a hotel for the town.

Social League In Montgomery Meets Jan. 14

Means to Finance Work for 1936 Principal Discussion Topic.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

The annual meeting of the Social Service League of Montgomery County, Md., will be held January 14 at 8:15 p. m., in the courthouse at Rockville, Md.

The meeting will discuss many important questions, the chief of which is a means of securing finances to carry on the work of the league the next year. All friends of the league have been invited to attend by Miss Ruth Bolton, executive secretary.

Three suits for absolute divorce were filed in the Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville yesterday:

Mrs. Mildred I. Farrow, of Takoma Park, Md., filed suit against Lloyd LeRoy Farrow. She charges she was deserted on December 15, 1932.

Mrs. Margaret M. Freeny, a resident of Montgomery County, filed suit against Nelson L. Freeny, of Perry Point, Md., charging desertion.

Mrs. Myrtle May Downs asked a divorce from Roy Downs, a resident of Washington. The couple was married in Philadelphia on August 10, 1905, and have one child.

Mrs. Marguerite Kline Cantner, 27, of Chevy Chase, Md., was granted a final decree of absolute divorce from Clare Cecil Cantner, 35, in the Circuit Court. The plaintiff charged she was deserted in January, 1932. She was allowed to resume her maiden name of Marguerite Kline.

The allotment committee of the Montgomery County Corn-Hog Production Control Association will meet Wednesday at 9 a. m. at the office of County Agent O. W. Anderson, in the courthouse at Rockville, it was announced yesterday. The committee will go over the contracts on farms found not to be complying, in the final check-up on the 1935 production.

Takoma Park police are searching for a mysterious assailant who struck Miss Mary Hardy, 23, of 7 Westmoreland avenue, Thursday night when she fought off his attempts to snatch her pocketbook.

According to Miss Hardy, she was approached by a young man as she alighted from a street car at Laurel and Carroll avenues. The youth ostensibly sought shelter under her umbrella, but struck her in the face and attempted to seize her pocketbook after they had walked for several blocks. The man fled at her screams and she was treated by a local physician.

Dr. Austin H. Clark will speak on "Butterflies" at a meeting of the Chevy Chase (Md.) Garden Club next Wednesday at 3 p. m., at the home of Mrs. James Dudley Morgan, 1 Quincy street, Chevy Chase, Md.

A six-day mission will be conducted next week at St. Mary's Chapel, Aspen, Md., by the Rev. Clyde Brown, diocesan missioner of Washington. The services will begin tomorrow at 11 a. m. with celebration of holy communion and will be held from Monday until Friday, inclusive, at 8 p. m. The Rev. Mr. Brown will be assisted by the Rev. Richard Aselford, rector of the Silver Spring parish, which comprises Grace Episcopal Church at Woodside and St. Mary's Chapel.

Gov. Nice Calls Parley to Curb Traffic Deaths

His Advisory Council Will Meet With Authorities on Road Safety.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 3.—Members of the Governor's advisory council have been asked to meet with leading automobile safety advisers to devise means of cutting down the highway death toll in Maryland this year.

The call for the meeting was issued by Gov. Harry W. Nice for next Wednesday. Among those invited to discuss the plans with the council are John F. Rostmeyer, of the Baltimore Safety Council; John E. Raine, chairman of the Governor's committee to revise the State automobile laws; Palmer R. Nickerson, counsel to the American Automobile Club; Preston D. Callum and Bernard J. Wells, State's attorney for Baltimore City.

Gov. Nice said the people of the State "are faced with a situation which must be corrected and corrected at once."

"The ending of 1936 must show," he added, "a reduction in deaths and accidents indicative of an earnest desire on the part of officials of Maryland to safeguard human life. The saving on one life is sufficient to recompense all for the efforts we may put forth in this matter."

The Governor expressed the opinion that "probably the most important matter" other than relief "is the serious, terrible and altogether unprecedented toll of human life, personal injuries and property damage."

Gov. Nice said he did not believe new laws were needed as much as "a strengthening of the present law and making more rigid the enforcement of the same."

WATER and coffee

☆ Why is it that the same brand of Coffee made under identical conditions changes flavor in different localities? ☆ Very often the answer is WATER. ☆ Most American cities have splendid water. Yet there's a world of difference in the chemical balance of spring water, river water, and artesian water. ☆ Wilkins is expertly blended for the water in Washington's metropolitan area. No user of nationally distributed Coffee could possibly enjoy this advantage, which helps give Wilkins that matchless flavor.

France Seeking Help of League In Case of War

Help of Turkey, Sweden Sought After Britain Exacts Promise.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 3.—France, which has promised military aid to Great Britain in case of an attack by Italy, was said in reliable quarters tonight to be requesting assurances of similar help from other members of the League of Nations.

An official said these countries—among which he specifically mentioned Sweden and Turkey—have been asked to what extent they would assist France if the Fascists should try to invade France.

Two Paris newspapers also asserted France, fearful of rearmed Germany, has asked Great Britain whether she would send soldiers to the German frontier if some of France's troops were called away to a war with Italy.

Called "Absurd."

This account, printed in the Paris Soir and Intransigeant, was termed "absurd," however, by a foreign office spokesman.

The newspapers indicated the matter was brought forward in talks between the French and British general staffs, which were discussing mutual aid in case Italy attacked British vessels in the Mediterranean.

(Authorities in London would say only that the general staff discussions were limited to the scope of the present situation, declining to comment on whether Britain would give military aid to France on the German border in case of a war with Italy.)

France, said the Paris Soir and Intransigeant, believed it would have to take some of its troops from the German border to strengthen its defenses on the Italian frontier, if it should join Britain in warfare against Premier Mussolini.

Such a shift of soldiers, the newspapers declared, would reduce French strength on the Rhine, and the assistance of British fighting men in that area would be important to France.

No Decision Reached.

The Paris Soir asserted no decision has been reached by the general staff conferees. It said Premier Mussolini of Italy was being kept informed of the talks, "since it depends upon only Italy to keep them entirely theoretical."

The Chamber of Deputies commission of foreign affairs, meanwhile, sent a message of sympathy to the Swedish ambassador at Paris, comparing the Italian bombing of a Swedish ambulance unit in southern Ethiopia to the sinking of the Lusitania during the World War.

Rightist deputies accused Leftists, however, of sending the note during the absence of the president of the commission.

Louisiana Invasion By U. S. Is Attacked

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Jan. 3.—A huge mass meeting of followers of the late Senator Huey P. Long tonight adopted a stinging resolution attacking Federal "invasion" of Louisiana and the attitude of the Roosevelt Administration "almost bordering upon approval" of the killing of Long.

Senator Long was shot and killed in the State House at Baton Rouge last September 8 by Dr. Carl Austin Weiss, Baton Rouge physician.

The resolution scored the Government for seeking to "intimidate" the State's voters and "influence" the course of the January 21 primary through a Congressional investigation "before an election, under the excuse of investigating events not yet occurred, and never to occur."

Published "threats of a 'provisional Federal Government in Louisiana' and the use of 'bayonets of Federal soldiers' against our people" were also scored.

Hotel Is Destroyed By Fire; 10 Injured

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, Jan. 3.—Fire destroyed the 100-room Biltmore Hotel early today. Six firemen and four other persons were injured. More than 40 guests fled to the street.

The owners valued the building at $300,000, and the loss was swelled by the destruction of hotel furnishings and valuables of many of the guests.

The blaze started at the rear of the hotel. Battalion Chief Eben Mathis, one of the injured, said it originated in a garage.

Travis Sprague, night watchman, aroused many of the guests, and with Manuel Malamut, manager, and other employes, aided the guests in escaping. They were provided shelter in nearby hotels.

Most of the injured were overcome by smoke. George Schiff, 35, a kitchen worker, and William Wright, 38, a fireman, were in a serious condition.

Rent Control Bill Sponsor Seeks Aid

While several members of Congress have already complained loudly against high rents and the scarcity of living quarters, the sponsor of the District rent-control bill, Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said yesterday he would have to inquire around a bit before deciding what to do about the measure.

"If the people of the District want the legislation," he said, "I will get behind it. If they don't want it, that will be a different matter."

Ellenbogen, author of the unemployment insurance and needy blind pensions act for the District, said he planned to study the laws with a view to amending them wherever needed.

He said he would also lend his influence to working for an increased United States lump-sum payment at this session.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office

By Morgan Baker.

AN organized movement against uncompensated overtime was launched last night by the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians at a meeting of Government professional men at 810 F street northwest.

BAKER.

"Many of you have recently been asked if you were willing to work overtime," one of the speakers declared. "This question was put to you 'informally' without official sanction, and, furthermore, it was stated that your compliance would be 'voluntary.' A year ago the F. A. E. C. T. pointed to the fact that identical requests for voluntary overtime and the setting of schedules for the speed-up of work had resulted in dismissals at that time."

The F. A. E. C. T. holds to the basic point that overtime work should be compensated.

Other speakers pointed to the alleged illegality of "voluntary" overtime, citing rule No. 43 of Treasury Department regulations that all orders for overtime must be authorized in writing by the Secretary of the Treasury. Following an interview last year with a delegation of the federation, Secretary Morgenthau reaffirmed this order.

Promotion is Reported

John R. Cochran, formerly chief clerk, Bureau of Animal Industry, is reported to have been promoted to the position of business manager of the bureau. The post was taken by Mr. Cochran following a vacancy created last July by the retirement of C. C. Carroll. N. A. Olmstead is reported to have been appointed as assistant business manager.

SENTIMENT is spreading among the Federal guards and their friends on Capitol Hill for corrective measures in the inequities of the guards' status in pay and working conditions. The following is typical of the many letters reaching this desk:

". . . in recent copies of your column I have read with interest some very good words in praise of the Government guards.

"I take this opportunity to thank the party by the name of 'Boos' for his write-up, that I hope will have some effect on the responsible party concerned. I also believe that if this man had his way, that the entire guard force would be a rigid arm of the national law enforcement body of this country.

"I have been a Federal guard for some time, and I believe that we are entitled to equal justice at all times. A more true and exact statement can not be said than the one recently published 'That the guards receive their orders from several different heads.'

"I'd like to add that all guards should receive orders and be responsible to the chief of the department in whose building they are attached. I am a little more fortunate than perhaps most of the guards. They are working for a mere $1,200 a year; I am drawing $1,260 a year. . . ."

New Division Set Up.

The Department of the Interior has set up in the National Park Service a Museum Division, under which are centralized all museum activities of the service, in connection with an enlarged museum program. Carl P. Russell has been made chief of the new division, and he will supervise the activities of the following:

Field Division of Education, Berkeley, Calif. (Western parks).

Field laboratories at Morristown, N. J. (Eastern parks and Interior museum).

Interior Museum curator's office and Eastern parks museum administration, Washington, D. C.

Model laboratories, Fort Hunt, Va.

Studio and laboratory being developed in the Lincoln Museum, Washington, in which preparation work will be done for the Interior Museum and the Eastern park museums.

The National Park Service program for 1936 includes operation of at least 41 museums in 32 parks and monuments. In addition to the museums themselves, the plan includes interpretation of park field features by trailside exhibits, restorations and markers, nature trails, roadside labels and observation stations.

Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan is to be promoted to the position of assistant to the Attorney General, third highest office in the Justice Department. Mr. Keenan has been in charge of the criminal division, which includes responsibility for the work of the Bureau of Investigation.

Justice Shifts Announced.

A shake-up in regional chiefs of the Criminal Investigation Division, Justice, is announced by J. Edgar Hoover, director, as a result of the recent resignation of R. George Harvey, agent of the Philadelphia area.

Reed E. Vetterli, agent at St. Louis, has been transferred to Philadelphia; J. E. Newman has been shifted from San Francisco to St. Louis; W. L. Listerman, from Trenton, N. J., to San Francisco, and E. L. Richmond, of the Washington office, will go to Trenton.

Jones Asserts U. S. To Stay a Lender

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan 3.—Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, declared today "frankly I'd like the Government to get out of the lending business, but I don't see any way to do that until private interests are able to handle the situation."

Addressing 300 Los Angeles Industrial and financial leaders, Jones said, "business can go forward now without running into anything of a serious nature."

"No prudent man should borrow today unless he can get low interest rates and a long-term loan," Jones added, "the little man particularly needs low interest rates. The large, gilt-edged organizations now have no trouble getting cheap money. Interest rates paid by the railroads in particular should be lowered in order to speed recovery."

Fatal Fire Cause Remains Mystery

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued certificates of accidental death in the cases of the three persons who were burned to death early Thursday when fire swept a rooming house at Eleventh and M streets northwest.

Those killed were Mrs. Florence Bevans, 32, and her 13-year-od son, Charles, and Raymond Glines, all of whom were suffocated when they were trapped on the third floor of the structure. Their charred bodies were recovered after firemen had extinguished the blaze.

Before the fire was quenched, three alarms were turned in. The blaze was caused either by defective wiring or spontaneous combustion in a trash heap, Fire Marshal Calvin Lauber said.

Need for Constitutional Reform to Be Debated

Two Bay Staters, one a former Governor and the other a member of the Harvard faculty, will debate the need for constitutional reform in the United States at the weekly Town Hall meeting in the Shoreham Hotel at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

Former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts will take the negative position and William Yandell Elliott the affirmative. The debate marks the first departure of the Town Hall's 1935-36 season from the lecture-panel series. 'Mounties' Rescue Starving Family

By the United Press

Fort William, Ontario, Jan. 3.—A grim tale of death and privation in the wild country along the Ontario-Minnesota border was brought to the Canadian lakehead tonight by a provincial constable who staggered in from Saganana Lake with Lawrence Major, a trapper.

The man was partly demented and was committed for mental examination. Behind him in a lonely snow-bound cabin he had left his wife, suffering from malnutrition, a dead child, and three other children so ill they could not be moved. An airplane will be sent for them.

Carrying aid to the family, the constable, with Dr. J. W. Cook, coroner and K. Sime, sanitary inspector, left the lakehead late yesterday, traveling by car 90 miles to Grand Marais, Minn., and then 40 miles up the Gunflint Trail. From that point the constable and Sime took to snowshoes. Sime will remain with the family until a plane can be sent. The death of the child was attributed to spinal meningitis resulting from malnutrition and pneumonia.

Harar Bombing Reported Reply To Beheading

U. S. News Men Using City as Headquarters; Swedes Risk Air Death.

By the United Press.

Rome (Saturday), Jan. 4.—Italian aviators have avenged the beheading of a captured Italian flier by Ethiopian tribesman by heavily bombing Harar, the second largest Ethiopian city, unconfirmed reports circulating here today said.

The reports said Harar, headquarters for Ethiopian operations in the south, was damaged badly by the aerial bombardment.

Many American correspondents have made headquarters in Harar for months. All Ethiopian troops and war materials were moved from the city weeks ago, Ethiopian authorities said, to lessen the danger of Italian attack by air.

The first reports did not mention casualties.

Addis Ababa, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—The Swedish Red Cross braved a region swarming with Italian war planes tonight to rescue its wounded, trusting Red Crosses painted on the wings of two mercy planes to protect them from attack.

Two planes, one a huge Fokker and one a fast military type plane, took off fo rthe far southern front to bring out the two Swedes wounded in an Italian air bombardment which destroyed a Red Cross Hospital with heavy fatalities. The Fokker was piloted by Baron von Rosen of the Swedish Red Cross. The smaller ship was piloted by a Russian-Ethiopian, Babicheff.

Neither had been heard from.

They planned to land first at Yega Alum, in Sidamo Province, and land a cargo of medical supplies to replace those destroyed in the bombing raid. The planes were presumed to be at Yeerga Alum tonight.

Early tomorrow, the small plane was to take off for the Muggelidolo region, literally blanketed by Italian planes, in search of a safe landing place.

It is near here that Dr. Fride Hylander, head of the bombed hospital, and an aid, await rescue. The doctor is wounded in the side. His helper was struck in the mouth by a bullet or bomb fragment, and his condition was believed critical.

When the small plane locates a safe landing field, the Fokker will follow with Dr. Kurt Hanner, Swedish consul and head of the Swedish Imperial Hospital here.

McDonald Note On Jews Flayed By Reich Press

Report of Former League Commissioner Called 'Hate Pamphlet.'

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 3.—The report of James G. McDonald, former League of Nations high commissioner for refugees from Germany, which attacked "persecution" of Jews in the Reich, was editorially denounced tonight by German newspapers.

The report, ignored for several days by the German press, was seized from its pigeon hole and assailed under headlines such as "The Hate Pamphlet of a Failure" and "McDonald in a Glass House."

The Zwoelf Uhrblatt—"In order to save the former English prime minister of the same name from the curse of this ridicule"—warned its readers that this particular McDonald is an American professor who, "having tried something, failed."

The paper said McDonald then looked for an excuse in Germany to resign from his position.

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt said McDonald's criticism of the treatment of the Jews in Germany sounded strange, coming from an American. It asserted the United States, since 1923, had been trying, through its immigration laws, to throttle the further influx of "Mediterranean Slavs, and, above all, Jewish" immigrants.

The German Official News Agency, in a statement last night, said the League of Nations should look first to the treatment of "minorities and confessions" within League states.

The text of McDonald's statement has not been published in Germany.

200 Officers and Plane Search for Kidnapers

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 3 (AP).—More than 200 officers, aided by a scouting airplane, participated in a search today for two men, who kidnaped a policeman here this afternoon and released him tonight near Sherman, Tex., 75 miles from Dallas.

One of the men was believed to be Jack Bronson, escaped Oklahoma bank robber. The two disarmed and abducted Motorcycle Policeman R. J. Luther, who was on the lookout for two hit-and-run drivers. Luther was not harmed.

* WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 1936 13

Liquor Men Urged to Aid Temperance

A.B.C. Chief Tells 1,000 Repeal Dependent on Sobriety.

Fewer Drunks Here; $1,500,000 Added in Revenues.

Washington's wholesale and retail liquor dealers—more than 1,000 strong—got together in the new Labor Department auditorium yesterday to cheer for repeal.

It started out like a school "pep" rally and ended as one of the largest local temperance meetings (with gestures) in many a moon.

Chairman George W. Offutt, of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, was there to tell the spirit sellers what a boon "demon rum" has been to Washington (financially). And police officials were there to tell how legal drinking has affected the drinkers (illegally).

So everybody sat and listened while the following facts were divulged by Chairman Offutt and invited speakers:

Fewer Arrests.

Arrests for intoxication showed a decrease every month during 1935, as compared with 1934 . . . Washington was enriched by $1,500,000 in liquor taxes and revenues last year . . . this was an increase of $25,000 over the first year of repeal . . . the trend of liquor selling and consumption is in the "right direction" . . . and must remain in the "right direction."

The meeting, it was explained, was called as a "get-together" for local dealers, enforcement officials and members of the A. B. C. board. In citing police figures, Offutt declared:

"The record of arrests for intoxication is the barometer of success for repeal. And Washington's end has been successful.

"Your duty, my duty and the duty of the police department is to see to it that repeal continues a success in the Nation's Capital. Our social welfare must not be harmed—and you, as dealers in alcoholic spirits, can help."

He strongly stressed the harm in selling liquor to intoxicated persons.

Team-Work Urged.

"Let us keep ourselves together in one team," Offutt said, "and see that the drunken man is eliminated from our society. The general public has become educated to drinking and you can further that education by refusing to sell when you see the danger."

M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic, discussed the drunken driver and offered a slogan:

"If you are driving, don't drink. If you are drinking, don't drive."

Capt. Milton D. Smith, new commander of the police traffic division, declared that "there is nothing more dangerous than the drunken driver—he is our greatest problem."

Chairman Offutt lauded the work of Lieut. George Little and members of his special investigating squad. Lieut Little pointed out that prior to prohibition only 300 licensed liquor dealers operated in Washington. With many times that number now, he said, the liquor business is being properly conducted.

It was also revealed that arrests of youths between the ages of 17 and 21 have decreased greatly. The number dropped from 506 in 1934 to 305 in 1935.

Arrests for drunken driving in 1935, however, rose to 379 from 347 in 1934.

Women in Meeting.

Plans for fighting legislation to make Washington a prohibition city again were drawn up yesterday at a meeting yesterday of the Women's Organization for District of Columbia Liquor Control.

With Mrs. Henry Leonard presiding, Miss Elizabeth Harris was named chairman of a special legislative committee. Others named committee chairmen were Mrs. P. D. Hanson, membership; Mrs. John R. Williams, finance, and Mrs. William M. Wright, publicity.

A speaker at the meeting was Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, of New York, who, as president of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, played an important part in the battle for repeal. She reminded the women that "eternal vigilance is the price of freedom."

The executive committee includes Mrs. Leonard, Miss Elizabeth Davis, Mrs. John F. Dryden, Miss Bell Gurnee, Miss Elizabeth Harris, Mrs. Milton W. King, Mrs. Rose Yates Forrester, Mrs. John F. Carter, Mrs. C. Phelps Dodge, Mrs. George Eckels, Mrs. W. W. Galbraith, Mrs. Louis Greene, Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Mrs. P. D. Hanson, Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper, Mrs. James F. Citizens Vote To Oppose Bill For Liquor Ban

Burroughs Association Hits Guyer Measure; Will Make Survey.

Unanimous opposition to the Guyer bill which would restore prohibition to the District was voted last night by the Burroughs Citizens Association, meeting in Burroughs School.

The association instructed its legislative committee, headed by Paul Jamieson, to survey existing liquor control regulations here to make any possible recommendations for improvement.

Increase in District taxes was opposed in another resolution, at least until Congress should make a "fair" contribution to the District budget.

Other action by the group included:

Condemnation of the corporation counsel's opinion that communism might be described in the public schools, with David Babp, associate president, arguing that Congress intended to forbid all mention of the subject.

Urging of appropriations for additional fire-fighting apparatus, with David Jamieson, president of the Fire Fighters Association, describing difficulties the District Fire Department faced in fighting the Postoffice fire.

Appointment of a committee on restrictive covenants, including Paul Jamieson, chairman, and Wilbur S. Finch and L. F. Kreek.

The Chillum Heights Citizens Association met in Keene School, but adjourned as members wished to hear the radio broadcast of President Roosevelt's message to Congress.

Revised Unit Here On Lunacy Planned

A revised lunacy commission bill was agreed on at a conference yesterday in the office of E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel.

Under the proposed new law persons may be committed for mental treatment on the judgment of a commission, sitting in private, composed of a lawyer and two psychiatrists named by the District Supreme Court. Any person who does not want the privacy of such a hearing may have an open hearing in court at his own demand or on the demand of any other person interested in his welfare.

The conference agreed changes should be made to get away from setting up what might become a somewhat inflexible lunacy commission. One lawyer would be appointed by the court to serve continuously. Two psychiatrists would be appointed by the court to serve for not more than three months continuously. But lawyer and psychiatrists would be drawn from a panel. There is to be another conference on details of verbiage of the measure, Mr. Prettyman said.

Among those who participated in the conference were Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; George E. Sullivan, also representing the Federation.

Leg Work

Climbers at Monument Increase, Data Shows.

Are tourists' legs becoming stronger or their ambitions greater?

Figures on Washington Monument released yesterday by the National Park Service might indicate that to be the case. For it was shown that while ascensions by elevator were 30 per cent greater in 1935, compared to 1934, the number who took the stairway route was fully 50 per cent above the corresponding figure for 1934.

Anyway, here are the figures and draw your own conclusions:

Last year 731,121 persons went to the top of the shaft, 625,818 by elevator and 105,303 by the foot-over-foot method. In 1934 there were 539,940 visitors, 470,589 of whom rode and 69,351 of whom walked.

Mark Holder Tells of Record Peak Conquest

Frau Dyhrenfurth Talks of Reaching Lofty Himalaya Height.

The conquest of one of the world's highest mountains, Queen Mary Peak, which towers 24,700 feet in the lofty Himalayas of Asia, was described by Frau Hettie Dyhrenfurth, German woman mountain climber, before the National Geographic Society last night at Constitution Hall.

Frau Dyhrenfurth, who set a new world "altitude record" for women mountain climbers when she scaled this peak, accompanied her husband and other men of seven different nations on the International Himalayan Expedition of 1934. The expedition climbed four other mountains in this region, previously unscaled by man, and also reached the main summit of Queen Mary Peak, about 500 feet higher than the western summit which Frau Dyhrenfurth climbed.

The region explored by the expedition lies in the Karakoram ranges, part of the Himalayas north of India and extending east into Tibet, where many peaks rise higher than the mountains of any other continent in the world.

From the hot lowlands of Kashmir the party trekked to heights where frost bite was a constant peril and blizzards buried their light tents under many feet of snow. They found it difficult to obtain porters to carry equipment up the mountains, for the natives of the region believe that demons dwell on the high peaks, ready to send death and destruction down upon those who invade their precincts.

As they advanced upward their progress was hindered periodically by strikes of the porters for higher pay, by the dread mountain sickness brought on by high altitudes, and by the pain and helplessness of snow blindness. Steps had to be cut in the ice and ropes strung as aids to the porters.

The party crossed one of the world's largest glaciers, the Baltoro Glacier, about 40 miles in length. Besides mountain climbing, the party made studies of geology and of the racial characteristics of the natives.

Grand Jury Drops Bond Loss Inquiry

The District grand jury late yesterday abandoned its investigation of the disappearance of bonds, valued at $7,000, from the possession of Henry O. Hart, former confidential accountant for G. Bryan Pitts, one time head of the F. H. Smith Co.

The grand jury made known its action in an announcement by Charles B. Murray, assistant United States attorney, who was in charge of the investigation into the loss of the bonds. They were believed to have been taken from Hart's pockets while he was ill in a local hotel.

The jury's action was made known after Mrs. Lucille Fuller had been questioned at length. Mrs. Fuller, located in Florida, yesterday appeared before the grand jury voluntarily and made a statement as to the bonds. Within a few minutes of the time she left the stand the grand jury returned an informal report abruptly ending the investigation. No report will be made.

Hart, it was said, had received the bonds as part of a $40,000 fee paid him by the now defunct Smith Co. for services rendered it. Although some of them matured in 1932 and others in 1933, none has ever been presented for redemption.

Mr. Murray's announcement left veiled in mystery the manner in which the bonds left Hart's possession and turned up more than a year later in the possession of a Baltimore attorney, who turned them over to the authorities when he suspected they had been stolen.

Car Motorman Is Exonerated In Boy's Death

First District Fatality From Traffic in 1936 Officially Listed.

The District's first 1936 traffic death was recorded officially yesterday, when Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death in the case of 7-year-old Donald Miller, of 5233 Macomb street, crushed to death when his sled collided with a street car at Manning and Sherrier places northwest Thursday.

The child's father, Clyde Miller, appearing at the chief witness, sobbed as he took the stand and told of his son's death, completely exonerating William N. Moore, of 3415 M street northwest, motorman of the street car.

"Moore did everything possible to stop that car," said Miller. "Only God Almighty could have stopped it."

Paul C. Scott, of 419 Sixth street northwest, conductor on the car, said the tram was going about 18 miles an hour at the time of the accident.

"When I first saw the child he was only 5 feet in front of the car," testified Scott. He described how Donald cut across in front of the car and was struck by the rear truck.

Surviving Donald are his parents and a sister, 5 months old.

Inquest into the death of Miss Nellie Dashiell, 92, who died at Washington Sanitarium December 31, presumably as the result of injuries suffered when she was struck by a taxicab at Fourteenth and F streets last June 14, was postponed until Monday at 11:30 a. m.

Board to Discuss Relief in District

Plans for the continued care of some 10,000 relief cases, among which are 5,000 so-called unemployables, will be made by the District Commissioners next month.

Commissioner George E. Allen, who is local works and relief administrator, has been away from the city during the Christmas holidays. After his return Monday relief plans will be taken up by the full Board of Commissioners.

The sum of $600,000 has been suggested by Commissioner Allen as the minimum additional appropriation the District must seek from Congress to carry forward local relief. Some have suggested as much as $1,000,000 will be needed for the remainder of the current fiscal year, ending June 30, 1936.

School Heads Study Needs For Future

Consider Second Series of Building Work Reports.

New Move Is Planned to End Portable Quarters' Use.

School officials were working yesterday on a second series of reports as bases for the proposed new long-range building program. These will cover needs of elementary, junior high and vocational schools.

Commenting on the first reports received by the Board of Education for study on Thursday, Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, board president, in an interview yesterday, said:

"More facilities for the children should be our primary concern. Schools are overcrowded and that is the thing we must take care of first. If necessary, a new central administration building might be considered secondary."

Crowding Stressed.

At least two replacements strike the first woman chief executive of the local education system as of major and pressing importance.

"Jefferson Junior High School is in such condition that it ought to be put in a museum," she said. "Eastern High School's crowding is a very difficult matter and must be corrected.

"I think we need more facilities. I think also that we ought to have better facilities. We should eliminate portables, for example."

(A check of school records yesterday disclosed that, although elimination of portables constituted a major aim of the building program adopted in 1925, a score of portables are now in use here, 15 of them for classes and the rest for "other purposes.")

"We ought to eliminate every building with bad furnaces, bad toilet facilities and bad ventilation," Mrs. Doyle continued.

Economy Cited.

Her view is that a long-range building program should be adopted for two reasons—efficiency and economy.

"It would be a money-saving plan," she said. "If we planned for the population which is coming, if we made use of data on enrollment and pupil trends, we could get land, for example, before different sections are built up. We could erect buildings without rushing. Everyone would be cared for at the right time.

"It is something every taxpayer in the District ought to support."

Citing a board discussion on proposed limitation of kindergarten classes, Mrs. Doyle emphasized her own belief that the school system should seek to accomodate every child who wanted an education. Teachers might be overburdened, she said, and personnel increase was undoubtedly needed, but:

"We don't want to turn any child away."

Public School Association.

A drive for immediate installation of another portable in the District school system, this one to be located in Bradbury Heights, in Southeast Washington, was planned last night by the District of Columbia Public School Association.

Association officers agreed to seek the portable at once. Ultimately, a permanent elementary school will be sought for the area by the East Washington Heights Citizens Association, its delegate, William D. Willis, told the group at the District Building.

Delegates to the association submitted three other building requests which will be scrutinized by a school-expansion committee, headed by John T. Thomas, of Petworth Citizens Association. A rounded program will then be submitted to the Board of Education, probably on January 15, for consideration with the proposed new long-range school-building program.

The association heard its president, Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired, renew his attacks on alleged communist tendencies in the local schools, and adopted a resolution he suggested "expressing thanks and appreciation to the Federation of Citizens Associations and particularly George E. Sullivan for the fine work done in reviewing textbooks and showing in detail the things that are objectionable."

Suicide Verdict Issued In Prisoner's Hanging

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday in the death of Leon C. Wellons, 35, of the 200 block of G street northwest, who hanged himself earlier in the day while being held at the First Precinct on a charge of intoxication.

Wellons, police said, fashioned a noose from his shirt and tied it to the bars at the top of his cell. Policeman F. B. Knapp found him dead. His body was sent to the Morgue.

Mother, 2 Children Rescued From Gas Fumes by Neighbor

The lives of Mrs. Mary C. King, 32, and her two children, Joyce, 4, and Thomas, 15 months, of 3625 Eighteenth street northeast, were saved yesterday, by a quick-witted neighbor, Mrs. H. R. Trittipoe, of 3623 Eighteenth street.

While on the back porch of her home, Mrs. Trittipoe smelled gas coming from the King home. She hurriedly summoned Mrs. Charles E. Boggs, of 3627 Eighteenth street, who rushed next door. Unable to gain entrance through a locked kitchen door, Mrs. Trittipoe broke the glass in a dining room door and ran to the second floor.

Mrs. Boggs entered the kitchen and turned off several gas jets on a kitchen range from which the gas was escaping and then joined Mrs. Trittipoe on the second floor. Mrs. King, was found lying unconscious in bed in a front room. The children were found in bed in a rear room, also unconscious.

Dr. J. E. Bowman, of 2600 Eighteenth street northeast, and the fire rescue squad treated the victims.

The two children were revived in a few minutes by the rescue squad and did not require hospital treatment. Mrs. King, after being revived, was sent to Sibley Hospital for further treatment, and later removed to Gallinger Hospital. Her condition is undetermined.

Italy Is Not Bluffing, Signor Vare Says Here

No Longer Caretakers of Ancient Glories, Says Historian.

The Italian people are no longer a nation of museum-caretakers among the ruins of the glory that was once Rome. Instead, Italy is a young nation going forward with the same spirit and the same conviction, which made Ancient Rome. Such was the assertion, of Signor Daniels Vare, Italian diplomat, historian and novelist in an interview yesterday. Only those who fail to understand this young Italy can believe that Mussolini is bluffing when he says further sanctions will precipitate and Anglo-Italian war, Signor Vare added.

Not less interesting were the Italian diplomat's comments on the repercussions of the European situation upon the Far East. Having lived in China for 12 years and having been the Italian minister there for a part of this time, he felt that a war in the Mediterranean would play into the hands of Japan and threaten the British Empire with destruction.

"They say that we are bluffing when Mussolini warns the world that Italy will not go down on her knees. Yet, during the recent tension, all shore leave in the Italian fleet was cancelled and the ships were ready to sail and to fight at a moment's notice. If we had been going to back down we should have done so at the time that the British home fleet was sent to the Mediterranean. Instead, our troops have quietly and continuously been going to Africa, passing the British ships anchored off Alexandria and quarantined because of measles," he said.

Resist Geneva's Attitude.

"It is not the threat of war," Signor Vare continued, "which makes every Italian in the world feel outraged and betrayed. It is rather the sanctimonious cloak of Geneva beneath which the imperialistic policies of England are hidden which arouses our indignation. If the English would only come out in the open and say that our position on the Red Sea is a threat to the lifeline of their empire, then we would understand and, not impossibly some compromise might be arrived at.

"As it is, however, assumption of moral superiority on the part of the British constitutes in our eyes a form of hypocrisy which we cannot endure. It is because of our alleged moral inferiority, and not because we threaten British imperial interests, that they justify depriving us of those antiseptics which we need for our sons and brothers who are dying somewhere in Abyssinia from their infected wounds. Geneva justifies this by pronouncing us aggressors and proclaiming that as such we have no right to live.

"If Great Britain pushes us too far," Signor Vare continued, "You may be sure that we shall prefer to fight rather than to sacrifice our national honor. Nor will it be so one-sided a struggle as the people in this country seem to believe. Beaten in the end we probably shall be, but before the end comes the British will have lost enough ships so that they will be unable to defend their Asiatic possessions. Then Japan will take over Signapore, Australia and perhaps even India as well, unless the British are able to persuade you Americans to come to their aid.

Sees Threat in Hitler.

"As to the European situation, there, also, England will be so weakened that the rapidly growing fleet of Hitler's Germany can dictate its own terms. France, to be sure, will probably be forced by political pressure to follow the British lead. She will do so only in a half-hearted manner, for, like us, the French are Latins and share our feelings toward hypocrisy."

In talking of Germany Signor Vare mentioned one interesting detail. "All our coal is coming from Germany instead of England as before sanctions were imposed," he said. "Again and again, now, we are finding in the cars laden with coal messages which say, "Hold out until April and then we shall come in on your side."

In addition to having served as Italian Minister to China, Signor Vare for 25 years was in the Italian diplomatic service. Having begun his career in Vienna, he later served in the political department of the foreign service in Rome and with many Italian delegations to the League of Nations. Among his best known books are a "History of England" and "The Dowager Empress of China." This latter volume is to be published in England shortly. His novel, "The Celestial Trousers," which has already been published in Italy and England, is to be brought out in this country shortly.

Gunman Gets Dope In Holdup of Store

Entering a drug store at Fourteenth street and Thomas circle early yesterday morning, a lone gunmen threatened the clerk with a pistol, then escaped, when given two bottles of narcotics.

Fred Potter, the clerk, of the 1300 block of Girard street, was standing behind the drug counter at the time.

"I won't hurt you. I only want dope," said the gunman.

Given one bottle of narcotics, the man demended a second, and got it. Potter was forced to accompany the robber into an alley, where the latter vanished.

Reward Fails to Bring News of Missing Girl

Despite the announcement of a $200 reward for information leading to the safe return of their 15-year-old daughter, Alva Carmen Thyrring, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Thyrring, have had no news of her.

The girl, a Central High School pupil, disappeared without a trace 69 days ago. The Thyrrings live at 417 Oglethorpe street northwest.

Bill Would Ban Trolley Service Around Capitol

House Measure Demands Transit Firm Remove Tracks, Pay Cost.

Removal of all street car tracks on the east and south sides of the Capitol by the Capital Transit Co. at its own expense was demanded yesterday in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Only one other District measure was introduced on the opening day of Congress. Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, placed in the House hopper the bill submitted by the District Commissioners to restrict the sale of drugs and sleeping powders.

The Norton bill seeks to amend the pharmacy act so that drugs may not be sold except upon prescriptions from physicians or dentists.

The purpose of the Snyder measure apparently is to eliminate all common carriers from the streets adjacent to the Capitol. Cars would be rerouted several blocks around the Capitol. Members of the House in past years have complained frequently that the operation of street cars on Independence avenue constitutes a hazard because the cars run between the House Office Buildings and the House.

The Capital Transit Co. would be requested to execute five orders if the bill, which was referred to the House District Committee, becomes a law. They are:

(1) Remove tracks on Independence avenue, from First street southwest to Second street southeast; on Pennsylvania avenue, from Second to Third streets southeast; and from East Capitol street, between First and Third streets.

(2) Extend tracks from First street and Independence avenue southwest, south on First to C street southwest, thence on Canal street southwest to D, from there on D to Third street southeast, thence to Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

(3) Remove tracks on First street from D street southeast to C street northeast.

(4) Extend tracks from First and C streets northeast, east on C to Third northeast, thence south on Third street to Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

(5) Make all necessary street repairs and do the repaving.

Should the Capital Transit Co. fail to obey the mandate of Congress, the District government would be required to do the rerouting and assess the cost against the company.

Genealogies Is Topic.

Stockholders Seek Boosts In Bus Fares

U. S.-Built Garages for Private Autos Are Attacked.

Indignant Protests Feature Hearing Before P. U. C.

Increase in street car and bus fares, opposition to any such "communistic" proposal as construction of government-owned garages for parking privately owned automobiles, adjurations to consider the rights of stockholders of the Capital Transit Co. featured the transit hearing before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

The verbal fireworks were supplied by stockholders, John E. Hanna, president of the company, and W. B. Bennett, assistant to the president, made specific answers to specific complaints.

Thomas J. D. Fuller, 2317 Ashmead place northwest, a stockholder in the Capital Transit Co., said that officers of the company should seek higher car and bus fares. The management had not been sufficiently aggressive in protecting the interests of stockholders, he said.

Garage Idea Flayed.

Mrs. Gardner P. Orme, another stockholder, returned to the stand and issued an indignant blast at criticism against the company. Proposal of William A. Roberts, people's counsel, for construction of downtown parking garages by the Federal or District governments, was denounced as communistic by Mrs. Orme. Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the commission, was to be praised because he did not sponsor the idea, Mrs. Orme said.

Mrs. Orme read from a prepared statement, which began:

"Every once in a while our grand and glorious flag is being hauled down and some radically minded person is jabbing in its place a rag of red."

"The forgotten man," Mrs. Orme went on, "is really the stockholder who has spent his thousands of savings, not only in this business, but in many others, to build up America for Americans and especially in the public utility business which is being so bitterly assailed on every hand at the present time."

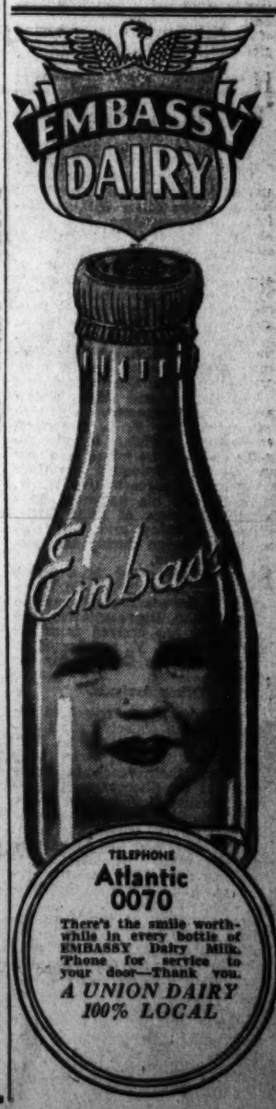
Shelter Is Urged.

Maj. Gen. John A. Johnston, retired, spoke as the representative of the John Dixon Home which held, he said 1,000 shares of the transit company stock. Decline in the dividend payments from those shares and other securities, he said, had reduced the finances of the home to the point where only 18 elderly dependent persons could now be cared for.

W. Adelbert Lee, 2336 Q street southeast, representing the Randle Highlands Citizens' Association, said the company should provide an adequate shelter for its patrons at Barney circle.

Present street car and bus stops at Eighth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, he said, made that street a death trap. He urged that stops be moved nearer to Seventh street.

The hearing will be resumed at 10 a. m. today.



Opening of Congress Starts Social Whirl

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The convening of Congress yesterday brought to Washington some 500 members of the Senate and House of Representatives with their families. Many of them came just before Christmas, but still others preferred to remain at home for the holiday and arrived just in time to answer the roll call.

The return of Congress always increases social activity in Washington. With more than 500 additional families in town, all of them prominent in one set or another, more entertaining is done, and when the session is short, as this one will be in all probability, the entertaining is concentrated within a few weeks.

The Vice President returned with Mrs. Garner to Washington only a short time ago, having been absent since the summer. They spent some time at their home in Uvalde, Tex., and later went with the Congressional delegation for the inauguration of the Philippine President.

Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin will arrive in town before Monday from their home in Vermont, and will again be at the Mayflower. Representative Robert Low Bacon came from his home in New York for the opening of Congress, and will leave today to spend the week-end in New York with Mrs. Bacon, who will not come to the Capital until later next week.

The Gerrys Return.

Senator and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, popular members of the Senatorial set, will return from their home in Providence, R. I., next week, and will be at their home on R street during the remainder of the session. Mrs. Chester C. Bolton, wife of Representative Bolton, will also arrive in the Capital next week.

The Speaker of the House and Mrs. Joseph W. Bryns head the Congressional contingent domiciled at the Mayflower for the second session of the 74th Congress. They returned directly to Washington from the trip to Manila for the inauguration of President Manuel Quezon.

In the group of Senatorial members at the Mayflower are Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, accompanied by Mrs. George, Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, and Senator and Mrs. Warren R. Austin, of Vermont.

Senator and Mrs. Royal S. Copeland have returned to their apartment at the Shoreham for the season. They spent the recent holidays at their country home, Dexter Manor, at Suffern, N. Y.

Senator and Mrs. Byrd.

Senator and Mrs. Harry F. Byrd have closed their home, Rosemont, at Winchester, Va., and are again established at the Shoreham for the season. Their daughter, Miss Westwood W. Byrd, who preceded them to the Capital, and who was presented to Capital society on Monday by Mrs. Henry D. Flood, will pass the winter with them at the hotel.

Senator and Mrs. Daniel O. Hastings, of Wilmington, Del., have returned and are occupying their apartment at the Shoreham. Senator and Mrs. A. Harry Moore have arrived from Jersey City and also are at the Shoreham for the winter.

Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Selbyville, Del., is established at the Shoreham for the season. Senator Robert F. Wagner has also returned to the Shoreham to make his home for the Congressional season.

Senator David I. Walsh has arrived in Washington for the opening of Congress and is again at the Carlton. Senator Walsh will leave shortly for a vacation in the South, after which he will be at the Carlton for the remainder of the session.

Senator Robert D. Carey, of Careyhurst, Wyo., arrived yesterday for the opening of Congress. His son, Mr. J. M. Carey, is with him in his apartment at the Wardman Park for a few days.

Those from the House who have taken apartments at the Mayflower are Representative and Mrs. Adolph J. Sabath and Representative and Mrs. Scott W. Lucas, of Illinois; Representative Isaac Bacharach and Representative and Mrs. Edward A. Kenney, of New Jersey; Representative and Mrs. Harry Clay Ransley, Representative and Mrs. C. Elmer Dietrich and Representative and Mrs. D. J. Driscoll, of Pennsylvania; Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, of Maryland; Representative Lister Hill, of Alabama; Representative and Mrs. Robert A. Green, of Florida; Representative Florence P. Kahn and Representative George Burnham, of California; Representative Clarence E. Hancock, Representative and Mrs. Martin J. Kennedy and Representative and Mrs. Philip A. Goodwin, of New York; Representative Joe L. Smith, of West Virginia; Representative and Mrs. H. P. Koppleman, of Connecticut, and Representative and Mrs. Walter Chandler, of Tennessee.

Representative F. L. Crawford, of Saginaw, Mich., is at the Dodge and will be joined in a few days by Mrs. Crawford and their young son. Representative W. W. Blackney and his daughter, Miss Shirley Blackney, of Flint, Mich., arrived yesterday and will also be at the Dodge during this session of Congress.

Representative and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster have arrived in Washington for the session, and are again at the Carlton. Representative Caroline O'Day has arrived from her home in Rye, N. Y., and leased an apartment at the Carlton for the session.

Other Arrivals.

Others who have arrived in the Capital for the expected short session are Representative and Mrs. Richard M. Kleberg, who have come from their ranch in Texas and are at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Thomas C. Hennings, of the Park Plaza, St. Louis, Mo., has come from New York, where she spent several weeks, and has joined her son, Representative Thomas C. Hennings, jr., at the Shoreham for several days. She is attending the opening session of Congress.

Among others of the Congressional set who have arrived in the Capital and are making their home at the Shoreham for the season are Representative Walter Lambeth, of Thomasville, N. C.; Representative John Taber, of Auburn, N. Y.; Representative George N. Segar, of Passaic, N. J.; Representative Leo Kocialkowski, of Chicago; Representative William F. Granfield, of Springfield, Mass., and Representative Peter A. Gavicchia, of Newark, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gordon preceding the dance, and today, Mrs. Huntington Williams will entertain at a luncheon for Mrs. Tuckerman.

Mrs. Hugh Butler To Speak at Tea

English Court Tradition and Ceremony to Be Topic of Address.

"Pomp and Pageantry at the Court of St. James" is the subject chosen by Mrs. Hugh Butler for the first Friday afternoon tea of the Congressional Women's Club, to be held at 3 p. m. Monday.

Mrs. Butler will tell what presentation at court meant to one American woman. She will give some of the high lights of that interesting piece of Old World pageantry and explain its place in English social and political life.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler lived in England for eight and one-half years while Mr. Butler was Assistant Commercial Attache for the American Embassy. Mrs. Butler was active in the American Women's Club in London and addressed many English audiences on various phases of our national life. Mr. and Mrs. Butler attended political receptions, summer schools for the various political parties, and were presented at court.

Orphanage Group Will See 'Gulliver'

A group of orphans of St. John's Orphanage in Washington will be entertained by the Belasco Theater at a showing of "The New Gulliver," today at 3 p. m.

"The New Gulliver," based on Jonathan Swift's classic, "Gulliver's Travels," employs a cast of 3,000 puppets who portray the tiny inhabitants of Lilliput, and one human actor.

Simple Outfit Keeps Clothes Well Groomed

Small Presser and Midget Iron Ideal for Travel or Around Home.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ONE of the first requisites of grooming is neat and tidy clothes. Wrinkles and creases must be definitely out of the picture. Oftentimes though, when we rush home to make a quick change we find to our dismay that a collar or a sleeve is mussed or a pleat out of line. A quick cure for such little ills lies in the small folding presser, and midget iron now shown in the notions department of a downtown store.

Both these handy gadgets were originally designed for travelers since they're sufficiently lightweight and undersized to pack easily in a suitcase. They're ideal for this purpose but they're also mighty handy to keep around for quick and "small" jobs of pressing sleeves, collars, pleats, and what not.

The presser board which folds into half its normal size is $1.35. The little iron but $1.

Blizzard Costumes.

THE SNOW and cold which visited us over the holidays caught many of us unawares. It was here in a big way, before we'd annexed snow suits to our wardrobe.

Before the next spell comes let's be prepared at least with a pair of snug ski pants and a heavy sweater or jacket. That doesn't mean we have to "a-sking go," but it does mean we can have our fun and frolic in the out of doors with a maximum of comfort.

One downtown store is showing some ski pants that are unbelievably modestly priced at $1.95. They come in dark blue, brown, green and black. A gay sweater or jacket to give a bright touch, a pair of woolen mittens, and heavy socks and shoes and you'll be primed for a real blizzard.

Cruise Outfits.

AND SPEAKING of cruise clothes, you'll want to see those in the new cruise shop in a downtown store. They're breathtakingly suggestive of sand and sea and sun, and romantic tropical moonlight nights.

There are swim suits in pique and angel skin, play suits, slacks, and culottes and everything to go with them.

And then, there are the enchanting evening and dinner frocks in flower-like prints, mousseline de soie, billowy chiffons and cloudy nets.

Deserving honorable mention are the patio fashions, printed crepes, linens, etc., in colors that will intrigue you.

Particularly attractive is a celanese chalk crepe frock which comes in white, sporting pink, shirting blue, yachting yellow, aqua and tangerine, sizes 14 to 42, for $14.95.

That's just one example. You'll find all the clothes here at prices to delight you!

Colored Doeskin Gloves.

THERE WILL BE no difficulty this year buying smart doeskin gloves to match your new spring dresses.

One local store is showing dozens of them in fascinating high tone shades such as orange, blue, purple, pink, green, natural and rust.

They come in one style adapted to any outfit. It's plain, with a button at the wrist and a small cuff, slightly flaring.

The wise woman you know crosses her bridges as soon as she can, so don't put off planning your spring clothes. Take a survey of the shops now and see the first and foremost styles in colorful gloves, slippers, and prints and crepes. It will save you time later.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

WE ALWAYS make a great to-do over bedroom ruffles and frills but the floor is likely to be very much neglected. And yet nothing adds more to the appearance of any room than an appropriate floor covering. Just now there is a wide selection of perfectly lovely bedroom rugs in the stores. For simple types of colonial bedrooms, there are charming hooked rugs—the machine-hooked rugs are excellent in design and color. And the old type of hand-hooked scatter rugs are pretty, too. Then there are plain colored rugs that are especially nice with chintzes and furbelows. Or plaid rugs for simple modern rooms are sometimes effective, although here, too, plain rugs are often even more interesting. For instance, for a bedroom with walls in white, furniture in maple, chintz spread and draperies in a flowered bouquet design on a white ground, white lamps and a white ruffled organdy petticoat for dressing table—what sort of rugs? What accessories? We would have a plain broadloom rug in rose or blue. White and blue would be lovely for accessories.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "How to Buy a Rug."

JUDGE SARAH T. HUGHES.

Jurist Decries Divorce Cases With Children

Texas Woman Judge Hits Alimony; Fixes Meals for Self, Spouse.

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 3.—Judge Sarah T. Hughes, Texas' first and only woman jurist, finds divorce cases involving children "hardest to decide."

She completed her 976th trial just before the Christmas holiday. Gov. James V. Allred interrupted her third term in the Texas Legislature ten months ago to appoint her to fill the unexpired term of Judge W. M. Taylor in the Fourteenth District Court.

"Divorce cases, especially where the custody of children is involved, are the hardest to decide," Judge Hughes says. "Such cases have more human interest than others. But I don't like divorce cases. They bring out too many intimate things in home life and often indicate marriage without much thought to permanency."

Took Marriage Lightly.

She would not venture an opinoin whether divorce was increasing. "But," she added, "in many cases passing through this court I have parties married three days, a week, maybe a few months; all indicating they went into marriage with little thought of its responsibilities."

In principle, Judge Hughes does not believe in alimony and would not approve "heart balm." "Fortunately," she said, "Texas law relieves judges and courts of problems in alimony because it provides for none after the divorce is granted." In most cases, she explained, none is asked.

"No woman working and capable of supporting herself," she added, "would believe in it and in those circumstances I, personally, can see no reason at all for it. In these days and times all ought to be able to make a living. In the older generations when women were untrained economically there was a different situation and support of the woman after the divorce, especially if the injured party, was a just responsibility upon the other party.

"The Texas law provides for equal division of community property in case of divorce, and it also provides for support of the children by either parent.

Either Parent Should Help.

"In the Legislature I was responsible for the amendment to the existing law upon support of dependent children, to provide that either parent should contribute.

"In other words, a father having custody of the children, can make demand upon their mother, if she has property, to contribute to their support if he is unable to do so properly. When the mother has the custody like demand may be made upon the father regardless of any predivorce agreement."

Judge Hughes said one of the hardest cases she has had to decide involved a child given to the care of his grandparents after his mother's death. Four years later the father remarried and asked the custody of the child.

"I denied the application," she said, "because I felt it was in the child's best interest to remain with the grandparents."

Judge Hughes prepares the meals for herself and her husband at their home, she said.

Girl Asks How to Discover Clubs Here in Order to Become a Member.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: My problems is, simply: How does one get into any of the organized groups in Washington; or, rather, how does one learn about them in order to try to join them?

You see, having been very busy the first part of my stay in Washington, I had niether time nor desire to join a club, but now with more leisure at my command I should like to do so. I am particularly interested in the local branch (for I believe there is one) of the Ohio State Society, and in a club I know was active about two years ago—the Ohio State Girls' Club. But neither of these organizations seem to have a permanent meeting place, for they are not listed in the city directory or in the telephone book, and I have no way of locating the officers of either group.

* * * *

My primary purpose in writing to you is to see if you can tell me anything about these two clubs. But I also wonder if there is no list or directory containing information about the clubs in Washington. Certainly in a city such as this, where there is a constant influx of strangers doomed to loneliness unless they can make contacts of some kind, the lack of such a book shows inhospitality to say the least. Yours most sincerely,

AMIGA.

Some Suggestions.

DEAR AMIGA: Senator Robert J. Bulkley, who may be contacted through his secretarial staff in the Senate Office Building, was last year's president of the Ohio State Society; Mr. A. R. Williams, 627 Union Trust Building, is secretary, and Miss S. Irene Neikirk, of the Baltimore & Ohio Ticket Office, 745 Fifteenth street northwest, is treasurer and very active in the organization. Any one of these three should be able to tell you about the social program and membership requirements of the Buckeye State Society.

* * * *

Miss Anna Park, with the stamps division of the Postoffice Department accounting section, is president of the Ohio Girls' Club. Miss Mary Kinney, in the personnel office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, is corresponding secretary. The above information was secured from Mr. Morgan Baker, editor of The Post's Federal Diary, and is but a sample of the staggering amount of information Diarist Baker is prepared to give concerning the social organizations and activities of Government employes in Washington.

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, 125 Baltimore avenue, Takoma Park, Md., telephone SHepherd 2434, is president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and always pleasantly approachable on the subject of women's club work. She would be happy to help you make the right club affiliations. The staff at headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, 1734 N street northwest, would likewise be helpful to you in locating clubs here. I suggest you call DIstrict 3168 and ask for Mrs. Thalia Woods.

Lists of clubs and their officers are not made public property for the reason that clubs and club federations generally have found it necessary to guard against mercenary exploitation of membership lists, so I'm told. M. H.

Small Patterned Silk Print Especially Suited to Matrons

By Laura I. Baldt, A. M.

For Many Years Assistant Professor of Household Arts, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, N. Y.

A PRETTY MODEL especially becoming to matrons is shown for today's simple-to-sew pattern. It is carried out in a small patterned crepe silk print, with weight enough to fall well, and not so shiny that it exaggerates bulk, always a kind friend to women rather heavier than normal build. The deep rever collar and skirt, gored at the front, suggest in a subtle way slenderness and length. Style No. 3319 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50-inches bust. Size 38 requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material with ⅝ yard of 39-inch contrasting.

Send 10 cents (coin is preferred) for pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. Be sure to state size you wish. Fashion Book costs 10 cents. Send for your copy today. Book and Pattern together, 20 cents. Address order to The Post, Pattern Department, 160 Fifth avenue, New York.

Congresswomen Glimpse Definite Goals in Present Session

THE BONUS BILL and the Wabash-White River project will be the chief concerns of Representative Virginia Jenckes (left). Neutrality legislation "that will keep us out of war" interests Representative Caroline O'Day (lower left); while Representative Florence P. Kahn (lower right) wants "the appropriation bills to be passed quickly so we can go home." Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (right) will fight for "a more efficient relief program, strong neutrality legislation and measures to prevent automobile accidents."

Use of Movies Adds Interest To Literature

Teaching of Classics Is Aided by Study of Screen Dramas.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

AN interesting experiment was made within the last couple of years in a group of schools scattered about the country. The literature courses were linked with motion pictures and some hours a week were devoted to the study of screen drama and its technique.

The results were so unexpectedly satisfactory that the experiment promises in some places at least to become permanent. Here was something which the children understood—a part of their everyday life, and one of their chief pastimes—brought into relationship with their school curriculum.

Books which had been looked upon as dry as dust classics suddenly became popular. If an intelligent discussion of the motion picture was to be forthcoming, the original documents on which it was based must be looked into.

The same results can be obtained in the home if the parents are willing to learn something about pictures and to encourage intelligent discussion and criticism of them in the home. If, instead of using the picture house as an extension of the nursery where they can safely park their children, they will go with the children and then talk the pictures over, not as pastimes for an idle moment, but from the same point of view which they would take toward a play or a book, they would soon find a new and valuable point of contact with the children.

Congresswomen Justify Early Feminists' Faith

Women Representatives Carry on Legislative Business in Exemplary Fashion; They Know What They Want and How to Reach Their Goals.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

LADY-LIKE SHUDDERS might rock the frame of the first feminist, could the shade of that long-forgotten figure visit Capitol Hill today and see just how many women are taking an active part in politics.

But the chances are 10 to 1 the first or any other believer in woman's rights would have expanded with pride yesterday had they heard some of the Congresswomen mention a few of the things they would like to see accomplished before the House and Representatives and the Senate ring down the curtain on the Seventy-fourth Congress.

Judging by what they said, it would seem these women—each of whom has been a homemaker—are going about this business of legislative housekeeping in an exemplary fashion; that they not only know what they want, but have laid some pretty definite plans on how to reach their goals.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Republican, of Massachusetts, will devote her attention to a number of projects. She believes "something must be done to keep relief out of politics. Almost any arrangement would be better than the present one and much less expensive."

Favors Neutrality.

A member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, she is very much concerned about neutrality legislation. I want us to stay out of war," she said. "Any law reasonably insuring that will have my support.

"And while there is so much discussion about protecting our country from war, I'm also much concerned with formulating and passing measures to protect persons at home from automobile accidents and theft of automobiles."

Another of her chief interests pertains to strengthening the merit system, which she feels "has suffered much in the New Deal. "Too many persons without training and fitness have been given emergency jobs. This, like relief projects, has been woefully mishandled."

Representative Caroline O'Day (Democrat), of New York, is another who is keenly interested in a strong neutrality bill. "I'm strong for any measure that will keep us out of foreign entanglements," she said. "I want peace at any price," she went on and then qualified her statement by adding, "that is, any price that permits protecting our own shores from invaders. In other words, I'm for adequate defense, but against competing with other countries in definitely militaristic programs."

Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, has spent the past summer in Washington working on three definite projects she hopes will be "favorably finished before the end of this session." One of these is the bonus bill, which she hopes "will pass before the end of this month."

Another of her chief concerns is the Wabash-White River flood control project, in which she was keenly interested before she ever came to Congress. Last year, the project was included in the omnibus bill and passed the House, later losing by only five votes in the Senate. "This year, I'm going to work harder than ever to get it through," she said.

Partial to the Farmers.

A farmer herself, Mrs. Jenckes is also strongly concerned about expanding legislative acts to benefit farmers, and "to correct evils of present legislation regarding them."

On being asked "What would you most like the Seventy-fifth Congress to accomplish?" Representative Florence P. Kahn, of California—the first and only woman on the Appropriations Committee—replied in a single sentence, "I want the appropriation bills to be passed soon, so we can go home!"

Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, could not be reached at her office yesterday but as chairman of the House District Committee, her attention will probably be given largely to Capital City affairs.

Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona, only woman member not present at the joint session of Congress last night, will arrive in Washington early next week.

Styles Feature Smooth Lines And Contours

By the Associated Press.

Paris.—The smartest frocks, coats and hats being turned out in dressmakers' workrooms are as smoothly sophisticated as a monocle and a morning coat. No furbelows, no useless accessories, no nonsense. Instead sleek lines, smooth contours and small heads. It's the kind of assured chic to turn any man's head.

More than half these daytime clothes are black—all black or black heightened by some new shade or metal trim. A pair of strawberry suede gloves, a bouquet of blue cornflowers beaded on the frock or a green taffeta petticoat with pinked edges. Some of the smartest buttons and buckles on them are burnished hammered metal—copper, silver and dull gold—instead of flashing rhinestones or shining gold.

The dresses are slim and sleek, many of them built to mold the figure closely with narrow, slender skirts of normal length. They are made of dull plain or cloque crepes, moire billant satins and faconnne crepes and velvets. Over them many Parisians will wear three-quarter-length coats of mink, seal or Persian lamb.

Hats are going to be small. They may tower in height through a crown or a feather trim, but most of them will mold the heads with the same cool sculptured lines as a statue. More than half of them will have veils—perched in a frivolous fan on top, swathing the crown like a mist or filming the eyes. Feathers will be important, too. They cover entire toques, sweep back from foreheads in two burnished wings or perch in an ostrich frivol on top of a crown.

Paris' Darling—the midnight tailleur—is a big favorite when the late afternoon and evening lights glow, for it can step out for cocktails and go on to dinner. The smartest editions of it are in black—shiny cire satin or dull pebbled crepe—with close-fitting little jacket, a skirt varying in length from 8 inches from the floor to the instep, and a blouse of beaded crepe, white satin or dark lace. Another edition of it combines a long-sleeved, ankle-length, colored velvet frock with a jacket of the same material. In either type, topped by a smart little hat, it carries many a Parisian through a crowded afternoon and evening.

Meeting Celebrities Day's Work to Artist

Miss Betty Kaufman Here to Add to Gallery.

Meeting famous persons is all in a day's work to Miss Betty Kaufman, artist, who carries in her files sketches and silhouettes of more than 500 of the world's celebrities. Miss Kaufman recently arrived in Washington from Hollywood with a brief case filled with her pencil and scissors impressions of movie stars.

Very few of the world's great have escaped Miss Kaufman since she gave up her work as a supervisor of art in the Providence, R. I., schools and started about the country recording the expressions and profiles of celebrities. In her gallery are Presidents and their wives, Cabinet members, statesmen, public leaders, artists and actors. She recently made a chalk portrait of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Gertrude Stein sat for a silhouette by Miss Kaufman on her recent visit to America. Lady Astor was silhouetted on her last visit to this country. Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, has been a recent addition to the silhouette

Gayer Clothes For Men Edict Of Next Season

Bluish-Gray Tweed Is Now Potential Rage for "Those Who Know."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Men's dress is to be gayer!

Whatever the cause, they are talking and showing color along the murky confines of Saville Row and Old Bond street.

"Elephant's breath," the popular name for a bluish-gray tweed, is now being listed as a potential rage for next season.

Checked camel's hair, spicy cheviots and homespuns, with checks and squares and dabs of red, are being picked for overcoats. Suitings ordinarily reserved for sports wear are coming into more general use.

In keeping with this new freedom in color the style of suits and overcoats is to be more loose. Raglan sleeves in overcoats are popular.

Dinner-jackets and tail-coats of midnight blue or raven-blue have a developing appeal, with the double-breasted style of dinner-jacket popular among the younger men. The top hat is going out in favor of the soft black felt with dinner clothes.

Dark green hats, or of a green and brown mixture, with a narrow band, are becoming fashionable. Red ties are finding a quick market, and in the luxurious windows of Bond street shops there are dark red socks and colored handkerchiefs. Shirts are especially gay.

Now and then a military influence can be detected. An overcoat cut on military lines, with pleated back, is being pushed by one designer.

The new rules for correct dress, according to West End standards in London, include the following:

Be sure to have half an inch of shirt cuff showing beyond the coat sleeve.

Neckties must contrast, not blend, with the suit being worn, but the contrast must be soothing and not glaring.

Brown shoes must be worn only with brown or light-gray suits. Otherwise black.

In general the Saville Row artists of apparel insist that no grounded rules can be set down for the cut of men's clothes. Individual and personality, they declare, must be considered first. Only on the matter of more gayety and color do they agree.

Syringing Ear Often Clears Up Deaf Condition

Hardened Wax Sometimes Presses Against Drum, Causing Trouble.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

ONE of the most common physical handicaps is deafness and, unfortunately, with the present state of our knowledge, there are some forms which are impossible of remedy. Should an individual visit his physician because of symptoms of increasing deafness it is a gala day when simple syringing of the ear canal dislodges a plug of hard ear wax with resultant restoration of hearing. This is a curable type. In some persons ear wax forms rapidly and hence may require frequent removal. A patient may complain of deafness and roaring in the ears, and the extraction of hardened ear wax that has been pressing against the ear drum relieves the condition.

Sometimes temporary deafness is brought about by inflammation of the Eustachian tube, which leads from the throat to the middle ear. A sore throat may have occurred and, in consequence, infection has advanced along this tube, producing congestion, so that there is a complete closure of the passageway. Inhalations of steam from hot water in which a teaspoonful of tincture of compound benzoin has been added may help to relieve this throat irritation and cause inflammation to recede more speedily.

Colds Cause Deafness.

Not infrequently, however, the physician will find it necessary to clear the tube by blowing through it with the aid of an air bag. Whenever the tube becomes inflamed it is wise to blow the nose gently, as pressure may force infected material (bacteria) up this important canal, adding to the extent of the infection. All of this means that throat colds, adenoids, or diseased tonsils may open the door to the type of infection that brings on deafness.

If bacteria find their way along the Eustachian tube into the middle ear infection and a chronic discharging ear or even inflammation of the mastoid cells may ensue. Despite skilful handling of these cases partial or total deafness of one or both ears may follow. We know, too, that measles, scarlet fever, or acute tonsilitis may terminate in this distressing complication. Unfortunately, ear symptoms may not appear until recovery has taken place and we assume that the danger is all over. No discharging ear should be neglected. As long as the infection exists there is danger to the hearing.

The most serious type of deafness is that which proceeds from the destruction of the nerve of hearing, called the acoustic nerve. Continuous loud noises are known to be responsible in some cases, and it may well be that much of the increasing deafness today is due to the effect on the internal ear—the delicate nerve mechanism—of the incessant roaring from our city streets.

Furthermore many drugs affect the acoustic nerve, among which are quinine and arsenic. Disease toxins such as those produced by meningitis, mumps, or syphilis produce a similar effect.

Syringe Ear Properly.

As a general hygienic measure nothing should be introduced into the ear canal, such as a bent hairpin or other instrument, by the patient himself. There is danger of causing infection or even of injuring the ear drum. Proper syringing is simple and safe when performed by an expert. For good ear hygiene it is perfectly proper to use a few drops of hydrogen peroxide in each ear two or three times a month, the external portion of the canal later being wiped clean with a small pledget of cotton.

There are numerous artificial aids, but one should not purchase any type of equipment unless the exact character of his disability has been determined by a careful examination. Sound conducting appliances that fit closely to the bone back of the ear are a great boon to certain persons. With younger individuals lip reading is not difficult to learn and is the best artificial aid to hearing.

Repeated emphasis must be placed upon nose and throat infections, not because of the danger they themselves present (great though it is), but because through decreased resistance complications often result.

New Film Features and Stage Bills Continue Gala Spirit of Xmas Holidays

Jack Oakie Is Mainspring of Two Comic Hits

In Front at Fox and Earle; Stepin Fetchit Scores; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE KING OF BURLESQUE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Vina Delmar, adapted to the screen by Gene Markey and Harry Tugend, with music and lyrics by Jimmy McHugh and Ted Koehler; dances directed by Sammy Lee. Warner Baxter is the star, supported by Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, Arline Judge, Mona Barrie, Dixie Dunbar, Gregory Ratoff, Fats Waller, Nick Long, jr., Kenny Baker, the Paxton Sisters, Shaw & Lee, Andrew Tombes, Gareth Joplin and Harry "Zoop" Welch. Directed by Sidney Lanfield. Previewed Monday afternoon.

We have already gone into this matter at some length. The picture is one of the best of the modern musicals and it affords Warner Baxter an opportunity to prove again that he is one of the cinema's most facile mimes.

There is about it all something of the contour and flavor of "Forty-Second Street," but I would not be sure that this is not a better bit of dramaturgy than the one of the Warner Brothers' manufacture that brought back the musical film after a long period of disrepute.

The outline of the Baxter role is the same as that which he played with such skill in the film play that celebrated the week of Franklin D. Roosevelt's inauguration as President of these United States. He once more is the theatrical producer who gets slightly the worst of it for a time, only to recover his old-time form, aided by a band of never-wassers who have been hanging around his office all these years.

Something of the Billy Rose notion of what a night club ought to be like enters into the formulation of the story. As a matter of fact, it all has been done before, but never with quite the finish that is here betrayed.

Songs Are Clever.

The songs are pretty kippy, the dancing right at the top and the skylarking by Mr. Oakie and his associates in the lighter moments of the story's developments not to be discounted by any performance any member of the cast ever has done.

Mr. Oakie, Jack to you and you, sir, has never had a more congenial role than his present assignment as the general manager of the "big shot" Broadwayite whose partner he might have been with a little more gray matter in the noggin. Most of the picture's wisecracks are allotted to him—and judiciously so.

Alice Faye heads the singers in the cast and Dixie Dunbar and Nick Long, jr., the dancers, although there is a little tike of a fellow by the name of Gareth Joplin who does himself up in white tie and tails and shows them all the way to go to town!

Fats Waller comes in for a brief moment—too brief—as a pianist-singer who finds his spot after having run an elevator practically all his life, and Mona Barrie turns in an especially fine performance as the Park avenue young woman who almost wrecks the life of the man she marries in a gesture of self-defense.

On the stage at the Fox this week Leon Navara takes command with his St. Moritz Orchestra and group of specialists who made a considerable impression on last night's audience.

Sunny Dale Comes Through.

Other acts on the living portion of the entertainment included Frank Conville, the only lad who can do an authentic impersonation of Charlie Chaplin, and his gifted blonde teammate, Sunny Dale, a full half of the act, whether Frank gets all of the billing—as he does—or not.

The Lynn Burno Revue is a dancing act—featuring Violet West, Florence Hedges, Dorothy Arden and Teddy Wren—that possesses color and life, and Al Schacht, the old baseball clown, comes through with a bit of buffoonery that is not half bad. In point of fact, it is pretty swell-elegant and earned the hand it so richly deserved.

Al is a funny fellow and assumes the role of orchestra conductor with something more than the casual skill you might expect. He even goes south-paw now and again, just by way of having some fun with Prof. Lampkin, the orchestra pit's habitual forkhander.

Prof. Lampkin's overture, combining popular numbers and classics with rare skill, is a gem.

The Fox Movietone News completes a bill that no sagacious show-shopper will want to miss.

Earle

"COLLEGIATE." Paramount production, featuring Jack Oakie, Frances Langford, Joe Penner, Betty Grable, Lynne Overman, Albert Conti, Julius Tannen, Ned Sparks and scores more in a story by Alice Duer Miller, adapted to the screen by Walter DeLeon and Francis Martin. Music and lyrics by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel. Directed by Ralph Murphy. Reviewed Friday night.

Here is another of those musical things that click.

Jack Oakie already has been considerably celebrated as one of the stars of "The King of Burlesque," playing at an opposition house, but here he must again be acclaimed for a particularly good comedy performance.

Joe Penner, of course, goes without saying. He is one of the mainstays of big-league clowning, although his sense of humor always takes a turn toward underdevelopment. He is habitually the ill-favored lad. But highly hilariously so.

Miss Langford needs no introduction as one of the cinema's better larks. Ned Sparks, too, is known and so are all of the others in the cast.

From every tsandpoint of production and pohtography, "Collegiate" deserves to be ranked among the top hits of the holidays.

Plenty Pretty Girls.

When it comes to pulchritudinous young women this picture need concede nothing to any release ever made. The gals hav eeverythingt Gordon and Revel, furthermore have contributed a set of tunes and lyrics that leave very little indeed to be yearned for in this direction.

Last night's audience practically ate the thing up!

But what they went for even more ravenously was the delightfully lazy interval of in-the-flesh pastiming contributed to the bill by that genius of inertia, as we dubbed him a day or two ago, Stepin Fetchit.

Stepin Fetchit is a law unto himself. He has full claim to the title of laxiest man o nearth, with no contestants close enough to make it a race. His stage act is a well-conceived 15 or 20 minutes of typical lassitudes in which the star of so many Fox films is assisted by a youngster in bellhop uniform who does all of Stepin's hand-waving, coat-donning and whatnot, for him. A very comical quarter-hour or so, if you ask me.

Adds Up to a Hit.

Coupled with the high-spirited singing of a songstress whose name deserves to be a little more clearly enunciated than the charming Miss Audrey Sieber made it last night, the dancing of a clever revue group and the other features of the stage bill Mr. Fetchit—and that name always will slay me—puts the bill over the top for a practically star-bangled wow.

The orchestral features contributed by Freddie Clark and his boys in the pit and the newsreel add up a total of entertainment that it would be difficult to excel.

Take this bill in, if you are one of those in search of a bargain.

"THE LITTLEST REBEL." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the play by Edward Poole, adapted to the screen by Edwin Burke, starring Shirley Temple, with John Boles, Jack Holt, Karen Morley, Bill Robinson, Guinn Williams, Willie Best, Frank McGlynn, sr., and Hannah Washington. Directed by David Butler. Reviewed, second week, by Sally Stroud on Friday morning.

All the little girls who look like Shirley Temple were at the matinee of "The Littlest Rebel." And all the little girls whose fond mothers hope they look like Shirley Temple.

The little girl who sat behind me, wearing a replica of one of the famous Temple frocks, squirmed restlessly throughout the advertisements of forthcoming features, newsreels, etc., impatiently awaiting the appearance of the queen of the kindergartners.

She was hardly more appreciative than the old gentleman with the goatee, who laughed lustily everytime Shirley outwitted the Yankees.

John Boles, Shirley's father in this picture, is scouting for the Confederates. He makes occasional return trips through the enemy lines to see his wife (Karen Morley) and his spirited young offspring.

Bill Dances.

Bill Robinson is the faithful servitor who helps Marse elude capture, and dances for and with Li'l Missy.

Jack Holt is the man-in-blue who has a heart of gold; as a Federal major he assists Boles to escape, following the death of his wife, and lands in an adjoining cell for his trouble.

Shirley has ample opportunity to prove her ability to engage in juvenile repartee, and she sings and dances with facile simplicity. It is well that she is surrounded by sympathetic adults in this story, or else it would have seemed too utterly trite to suppose one little girl could have done all the things she does do, with the usual Temple dispatch. Boles and Holt are freed by her intervention, and all ends swell.

I believe her scene with President Lincoln is her best; they share alternate bites on an apple, this one's yours, and that one's mine. Whilst all the mothers in the audience gurgle "Ador-a-ble!" Shirley gets the pardon . . . "We don't fight children—" Hurray!

Just what effect the battle scenes, which are rather incoherently tossed in, will have on the minds of the young Temple addicts, I dunno. Mebbe they will grow up with Shirley's idea of basting Yankees with slingshot stones.

Addenda.

The lazy, good-f'-nuthin slave, who wants to know why a shoe is called a shoe, is good. Karen Morley's make-up is excellent. Shirley's "Polly-Wally-Doodle" song is engaging and Bill Robinson dances like a barn afire.

If you have to be dragged to see children's pictures, and frantically gnaw your cuticle whilst Shirley is being cute, do wait till you see the Fitzpatrick Traveltalk. There is a possibility you might like the pictorial description of Honolulu.

There are shots of ice skating (of which you have probably seen too many lately) in the Pathe Newsreel, and Charlie Chase appears in a definitely good comedy as a house-haunter.

The animated cartoon is of Christmas vintage, but it is entertaining, nevertheless, being about a cat-vandal who yearns to set his tusks in a luscious little mouse.

Teams With Chaplin's Double

This would be a very excellent likeness of Sunny Dale, the blonde young beauty who is paired with Frank Conville in one of the most engaging acts on the stage portion of the entertainment at Loew's Fox Theater this week. Mr. Conville does a thoroughly believable impersonation of Charles Spencer Chaplin and Miss Dale does a fine foil for Mr. Conville. Nothing much better could be contrived in the way of a vaudeville act—as last night's applause enthusiastically attested.

Virginia Crash Kills Bride, 19; First '36 Victim

Auto Collides With Truck; Driver to Face Charge in Road Death.

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 3.—A Tennessee bride, Mrs. Robert Preston Barry, 19, today became the first auto accident victim in Virginia in 1936.

Her death in Kings Daughters Hospital here at 4:25 a. m. resulted from injuries suffered last night in a collision on Lee highway near here. Her skull was fractured and both arms broken.

The condition of her 25-year-old husband, who is believed to have suffered several broken ribs, was pronounced "satisfactory."

Involuntary Manslaughter.

State Policeman Robert A. Lynn, who investigated, said Charles Rinehart, of Burlington, N. C., driver of the truck that collided with the Barry coupe, would be charged with involuntary manslaughter.

The Barry car caught fire, but the flames were smothered with an extinguisher from the truck.

Another out-of-State couple, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Leach, of Mount Vernon, Ohio., were injured when their automobile plunged over a 100-foot drop on North Mountain 18 miles east of Clifton Forge today. The accident was attributed to skidding on icy roads while Mr. and Mrs. Leach were en route to visit relatives in Lynchburg.

Collision With Truck.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 3.—John H. Armentrout, 30, of near Keezletown, was killed instantly this afternoon when the automobile in which he was riding collided with a truck on the Kratzer road 2½ miles north of Harrisonburg.

Theodore Faught, 30, Armentrout's brother-in-law, who was riding with him, is in the hospital with a broken leg and a scalp wound.

Faught told Coroner Leroy Hyers that Armentrout was driving the car. William Reid, driver of the truck, and his three companions were injured slightly. Reid said he pulled to the side of the road as far as he could and the car crashed into him. The automobile was wrecked.

Martins Win Contest.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 3.—The illuminated Christmas decorations adorning the front of the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Martin were awarded first prize in the first chamber of commerce contest. Second prize went to C. W. Kilbourn, of the Winderwald section, and third to D. B. Shipe. The prize for the best decorated Christmas tree, offered by the garden department of Woman's Club, was awarded to C. J. Scarlett.

Locher Predicts Big Year Ahead For D. C. Labor

Union Head Cites Building Plans, Foresees Record Work Since 1929.

The most prosperous year for Washington building tradesmen since 1929 was forecast for 1936 by John Locher, secretary of the Washington Building Trades Council, yesterday. Locher is president of the Central Labor Union.

He cited the increasing value of construction, both Government and private, to support his prediction that unemployment among bricklayers, ironworkers and more than a score of other organized building trades in the Capital will be reduced materially by spring. This year will see a large increase in construction over 1935, which was a bigger year than 1934, Locher said.

Foremost among major projects now under way or about ready to be started and which will give work to thousands of skilled mechanics and laborers are the $10,000,000 Interior Building, $1,500,000 Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Building, $4,500,000 Government Printing Office addition, $5,000,000 Bureau of Engraving and Printing annex, Library of Congress annex, District sewage disposal plant, Archives Building extension and the $1,600,000 Langston Terrace housing development.

Other jobs which are scheduled include the remodeling of the General Accounting Office Building, erection of the new Federal Reserve Board Building, three animal houses and a mechanical shop at the Zoo, a $150,000 addition to Elliott Junior High School, completion of the south building of the Department of Agriculture, air conditioning of the Capitol and both Congressional office buildings and construction of two archways connecting the Agriculture Departments administration and south buildings.

Future projects, said Locher, include the proposed Apex Building and the Municipal Center. PWA funds for the former have been allotted by Secretary Ickes. Withholding of money by both Congress and the Public Works Administration has delayed a start on the Municipal Center.

The council secretary pointed out that private construction and remodeling is keeping pace with governmental expansion. New store fronts, interior decoration, home building, plans for erection of six new motion-picture houses and installation of cooling systems in department stores—all indicate a banner year for Washington workmen, Locher asserted.

$534,000 Allotted Architect Survey

Hiring of 1,400 unemployed architects and technicians for a survey of historic buildings in 31 states and the District is ready to go forward as the result of Comptroller General McCarl's release of $534,000 in WPA funds, the National Park Service announced yesterday.

The allocation covers a six-month period during which a daily average of 800 workers is expected to be maintained. The project calls for exact measured drawings of important examples of American architecture. When completed, they will be placed in the Library of Congress alongside similar material collected when the Historic American Buildings Survey was begun two years ago.

Fuelless Steamer Towed to Norfolk

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 3.—The Coast Guard cutter Acushnet arrived in Hampton Roads this afternoon towing the fuelless steamer Vamar, owned by Robert Hasler, of Norfolk. The Vamar was picked up about 8 a. m. off Winter Quarter.

The Vamar, formerly the Eleanor Bolling, one of the ships in the first Byrd Antarctic expedition, sent a wireless to Coast Guard headquarters at 1:30 a. m., stating she had just sufficient coal aboard to last until 8 a. m.

The Vamar left Bicksport, Me., last Sunday with a cargo of potatoes, and ran into rough weather almost from the start of the voyage. She was due here Wednesday, but strong head winds and heavy seas retarded her progress.

Class 1 Roads Report Deficit for 10 Months

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission reported today that net income of 149 Class I steam railways for the first ten months of 1935 showed a deficit of $35,408,693. This compared with a $27,645,202 deficit in the same 1934 months.

Net railway operating income rose from $393,922,009 in the 1934 period to $397,458,302 this year, but railway expenses also increased.

N. Y. Telephone Co. Gains 5,603 Stations

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—The New York Telephone Co. today reported a gain in stations during December of 5,603 compared with a loss of 34 in December, last year. In the same month in 1933 the loss was 16 stations.

For 1935, the company reported a station gain of 23,905 against a gain of 630 in 1934 and a loss of 119,342 in 1933.

Razing Job Approved.

The office of National Capital Parks yesterday approved the award of a contract to demolish a brick building, formerly a colored orphanage, in connection with development of the Banneker recreation center. The State Contracting & Landscaping Co., Baltimore, which offered to pay the Government $130, will raze the structure.

Epidemic Kills 26.

Copenhagen, Jan. 3 (AP).—Twenty-six seal hunters have died in an epidemic of influenza on Angmagssalik Island, a trading post on the east coast of Greenland, reports received here from Greenland said today.

The 1935 Tops

New York, Jan. 3.

ETHEL MERMAN warbling "You're the Top" in the Gaxton-Moore show, the first musical smash of the year penned by a pretty good tunesmith, Cole Porter. The first act finale of Billy Rose's "Jumbo," the Irving Berlin score of Fred Astaire's "Top Hat," and Astaire's machine gun dance in that flicker, a terpsichorean highlight in a year that stressed dancing. Burgess Meredith in "Winterset" (ditto Richard Bennett), Judith Anderson and Helen Menken in "The Old Maid," Richard Whorf as the heckler in the Lunt-Fontanne show; Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina," and Grace Moore and Tullo Carminati in "One Night of Love," record-smasher. Marjorie Main, who brought down the house the night "Dead End" opened with her lines as the mother of the hoodlum. It was only a short performance, but it stampeded the audience by its sheer artistry.

• • • •

Daniel Frohman's decision, after reading the suggestion here yesterday, to have Lily Pons and other Met. stars warble "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round" at the January 26 Actors' Fund benefit (it should be san-sational.) "The Informer," a box office flop, although it was the finest flicker of the entire year, with Victor McLaglen, Arthur Sinclair and others in the cast turning in striking performances that glorified Director John Ford for all time. George Arliss, for his marvelous performance in "House of Rothschild," which had that breathless quality to it. Madge Evans' grand make-believing in "Transatlantic Tunnel," her sensitive touch turning a long, dreary flicker into something worth while. Tip, Tap and Toe, a dancing team that bobbed up in the Lou Holtz show and then went on to greater fame in "Scandals" . . . the center fellow in this trio is the greatest natural hoofer these wearied eyes ever have seen.

• • • •

"Three Men on a Horse," first abdomen-shaker of the season, but I'm sorry that Sam Goldwyn didn't buy it as a starring vehicle for Eddie Cantor. It would have been a new formula and dynamite in Cantor's hands. The costumes in Noel Coward's "Conversation Piece," which hit a new high in decorativeness and subtle coloring. Elisabeth Bergner's emoting in the stage play, "Escape Me Never," one of the most thrilling First Nights a New York audience ever has applauded. Charles Laughton's recital of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address in "Ruggles of Red Gap," with a low curtsy to Chic Sale for his excellent follow-up on it. Bert Lahr's soup scene in the G. White show, a remarkable tribute to Lahr's comic improvement, because in it he tops his material and freshens old situations into bursts of hilarity.

• • • •

The managers of Joe Louis, for the rigid rules which they set down for him, and which he has obeyed to the letter. Reginald Owen, the former Stemmer, because he's never turned in a bad performance in a supporting role in the talkies. His villain in "Call of the Wild" was the only worthwhile thing in one of the year's very bad ones. Haile Selassie, because he hasn't cracked a smile in any photograph and refuses to change his makeup or costume. March of Time newsreels, which did more to pep up the newsreel-makers than anything else. Max Gordon's production of "Great Waltz" at Radio City, a new high in backstage magic, although Europe said that no American could fittingly stage the Strauss operetta, because of mechanical problems.

• • • •

Katharine Cornell's rich interpretation of Juliet in the famous classic, warmly colored and so appealingly feminine that you could understand the headstrong reaction of Romeo to her Elinor Glynnitis. Clifford Odets' dialogue in "Awake and Sing," dialogue that was brought to vivid life by Luther and Stella Adler and J. Edward Bromberg as Uncle Mortie. Leslie Howard's grand job in "Petrified Forest," which every actor should have seen as a lesson in stage restraint, though it's hard to restrain a ham. Grace Barry, because this youngster stepped in overnight and filled the shoes of Lyda Roberti with distinction. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Bring 'Em Back Alive

SAYS MRS. ETHYL VOIT

Last Saturday little Wimpy was dressed up in his warm sweater and apparently found some place to go. He didn't return on Sunday so Mrs. Thomas Reilley, 923 E Street, southeast, advertised Wimpy's description on Monday in two evening papers. When this didn't bring Wimpy back, Mrs. Reilley advertised in The Post's Lost And Found Columns on Tuesday. At 9:15 a. m. the same day her ad appeared in The Post, Mrs. Reilley's daughter, Mrs. Ethyl Voit (shown holding Wimpy, who is wearing his new sweater), received a call from Mrs. Helen Gaylor, a Post reader, of 417½ Fifteenth Street, southeast, that she found a dog answering the description in The Post's Lost and Found Column. It cost Mrs. Reilley only 54c for this Post Classified Ad which brought Wimpy back home:

TOY FOX TERRIER, m., white with brown spots. One brown eye; name "Wimpy." Sat. from 923 E st. se. AT. 1052.

Said Mrs. Gaylor: "I never would have discovered the owner of this cute little dog if I hadn't seen the description in The Post."

Canadian's 67 Tops Miami Golf Field

Jules Huot, of Quebec, Leading Paul Runyan by One Stroke.

Cruickshank Shoots 71; Barnett, of Capital, Registers 73.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI SPRINGS, Fla., Jan. 3.—A stocky Canadian, Jules Huot, Quebec, gave top-ranking American money golfers something to ponder upon today as he breezed through the first 18 holes of the twelfth annual $2,500 Miami Open in 67, 3 under par, to lead the opening day.

Only Paul Runyan, the White Plains, N. Y., professional, came anywhere near equaling the Canadian pro's scintillating first round. Runyan, by virtue of his 3 under par 32 for the last nine, finished with 68.

Denny Shute, Chicago; George Smith, Chicago, and Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., managed to equal it, with 70s, but other noted golfers in the field, described as the best save one in the history of the oldest Florida money events, slipped one or many strokes over.

Cruickshank Cards 71.

At 71 were Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va., and John Revolta, Milwaukee, P. G. A. champion, at 72, Gene Sarazen, Brookfield Center, Conn.; Frank Walsh, Chicago; Willie Klein, Miami Beach; Dick Metz, Chicago; Joe Turnesa, Hartford, Conn., and Leonard Dodson, Pembine, Wis.; at 73, Tommy Armour, Boca Raton, Fla., the defending champion.

Six strokes back of the leader was the 3 over par 73 turned in by Bob Barnett, Washington, D. C.

Leading the field of 33 amateur starters was T. D. Boardman, Manchester, Mass., who finished with 73 to go 1 stroke ahead of Al Andereggen, Chicago.

Winds Sweep Course.

Par stood up well as winds varying from 20 to 25 miles swept the dry sandy course under other assaults.

C. U. Alumni Set Grid Fete Jan. 16

Alumni of Catholic University, meeting last night at the university, arranged to hold the annual alumni-sponsored football banquet in the nature of a civic dinner in honor of the football squad, January 16, at the Willard Hotel.

At the same time, it was announced the C. U. football squad will arrive from Miami at 10 a. m. tomorrow instead of 8 a. m. An effort will be made to have the team, fresh from its 20-19 Orange Bowl triumph over Mississippi, given an official greeting by Commissioner George Allan.

Invitations to the football dinner were sent to Gov. Dave Scholtz, of Florida, Coach Ed Walker, of Mississippi, and the president of the University of Mississippi. The reception committee to meet the team at the train will consist of James E. Colliflower, president of the Board of Trade, chairman; William McClellan, John H. Hanna, John Saul, and Charles M. Wallingsford.

Blue Ribbons Are Beaten In Rosslyn

Bow to Davis All-Stars' Rally in Final Game, 1,779 to 1,768.

THE famous Connecticut Blue Ribbons, of Willimantic, Conn., stopped over at the Rosslyn, Va., alleys last night for a special match prior to their participation in the United States Sweepstakes here today and were given a three-game lacing by Galt Davis' Rosslyn All-Stars, bowing by 11 pins. Rosslyn rolled 1,779 to the visitors, 1,768.

Trailing by 15 pins at the end of the second game, the Virginians rallied in their last effort, chalking up a 607 game to the Blue Ribbons' 579. Joe Freschi furnished the winning margin with a 151 game. Bozo Dente's 396 set was tops for the match, while Russ Spilman's 366 was best for the victors.

The Nutmeggers reversed the tables in the doubles and singles matches, Tronsky, Bogino, White and Pipp staggering their games in the former to beat Litchfield, Spilman and Freschi by 59 pins, and Tronsky winning easily from Freschi in the singles, shooting a five-game total of 691 to Freschi's 569.

Crouch Downs Flynn.

Gene Flynn, leader in the current District three-cushion billiard championships, was defeated last night by Everett Crouch, 35 to 33, in 77 innings at the Lewis and Krause billiard parlors. Gene Ruark defeated Warren Hoeke, 35 to 20, in 54 innings in the only other match. The next day of play will be Monday night, when John L. Gay will play Ed Brin and Charles Goodacre will meet Everett Lamson.

Nation's Aces Bowl Here Tonight

White Will Defend U. S. Sweepstakes Title Against Field.

Capital's Best Compete Against Invaders at Convention Hall.

WASHINGTON will fairly bristle with duckpin talent today, with the Nation's foremost bowling stars congregating here to participate in the fifth annual rolling of the United States Sweepstakes championship at the Convention Hall alleys.

With 25 entries expected and the individual entrance fee set at $50, the purse money will total approximately $1,250. Victory in the sweepstakes will net the winner approximately $750, with the bowlers finishing second, third and fourth also sharing in the awards.

Heading the invasion from the north are the Connecticut Blue Ribbons, of Willimantic, Conn., one of the most formidable teams in the country, composed of such nationally known duckpin figures as Nick Tronsky, twice selected as the No. 1 bowler of the United States as well as holder of the No. 1 honorary crown twice; Jack White, last year's winner and also a former No. 1 ranking bowler; Mike Bogino, Bozo Dente and Wally Pipp. Tronsky is the leading money winner of the stakes, having collected $1,400 for his five years' rolling, and leading Ray Barnes, of Baltimore, his nearest competitor, by more than 200 pins.

Others to Compete.

Bowlers from Bridgeport and Hartford, Conn., are expected to take part, the former city being represented by "Doc" Williams, Gus Kimberly, Jimmie Sheridan, Tony Iannarone and Joe Mastra and the latter city by Fido O'Brien.

Baltimore, always to be reckoned with in any bowling championship, will be well supported by such stars as Ray Von Dreele, Doc Pickus, Ray Felter, Johnny Miller and Ray Barnes. Bill Arnold will carry the banner for Annapolis and Richmond will be strongly represented by Gordon Caldwell and Steve "Sugar" Kane.

The Washington entry is one of the strongest to be represented, with such local stars rolling as Astor Clarke and Joe Harrison, No. 1 and No. 2 ranking bowlers, respectively, and former No. 1 ranking stars, Joe Freschi, winner of the Dixie Sweepstakes, and a contender for high average in the Southern Intercity League, Ollie Pacini, Perce Wolfe, "Hokie" Smith and Bill Krauss.

Fifteen games will be rolled with the first block scheduled to get under way at 1 p. m. The second block starts at 3 p. m. and the final block at 8 p. m.

Astor Clarke was the last local bowler to win the richly prized crown, topping the field in 1934.

Following their participation in the United States Sweepstakes, the Connecticut Blue Ribbons will engage Earl Stocking's Silver Spring All-Stars at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the Silver Spring alleys in a five-game special match, doubles and singles.

Stocking will have a picked team of stars from Baltimore and Washington to be captained by Howard Parsons.

Thursday Leaves For Santa Anita

D.C.-Owned Horse to Compete in $115,000 Race.

Thursday, lone Washington-owned entry in the $115,000 Santa Anita Handicap, will entrain Monday for the California scene of the classic race scheduled on February 22. The gelded son of Mars and Pretty Day will be shipped by way of New Orleans and will be given a gradual trip. He has been in light training at Benning since the close of the Maryland fall season and the fact that he is going West indicates that Selby Burch, Capital owner and trainer, thinks a lot of his chances in the country's richest race.

After running in cheap claiming company in his third year, Thursday, now 6 years old, became a stake horse almost overnight and has several important fixtures to his credit. He won three races last year. His best effort was a sensational decision over Only One, Firethorn, Purple Knight and others in the Riggs Handicap at Pimlico.

600 Trackmen to Vie Tonight In New York's Season Opener

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Led by Glenn Cunningham, the durable Kansas miler, a half-dozen leading aspirants for the American Olympic track and field team open their tune-up campaign on the flat boards of the 106th Infantry Armory tomorrow night in the initial indoor meet of the season.

The annual opening of the metropolitan season, held under the auspices of the Columbus Council, Knights of Columbus, has attracted some 600 athletes. For the most part, however, the stars will be concentrated in the sprint series, the 500, 60 and 3,000-meter runs and the high jump.

Cunningham, holder of both the world indoor and outdoor records for 1 mile, will toe the mark in the 800-meter run, the event he won last year in a close finish with Gene Venzke, University of Pennsylvania's great middle-distance star.

Venzke again is entered in the event, but the burly Kansan's chief opposition is expected to come from Charles (Chuck) Hornbostel, former Indiana ace, now a graduate student at Harvard. Both Cunningham and Hornbostel showed they were near top form last week when the Kansan turned in a creditable 4:16-mile in the Sugar Bowl meet at New Orleans and the lanky Hoosier stepped off a half-mile in 1:54.6.

In their only clash last year, Cunningham took the measure of Hornbostel in the 1,000-yard run over the banked Madison Square Garden track, establishing a world record of 2:10.1. Bill Ray, Manhattan College miler, and Joe Mangan, former Cornell act, complete the field.

Eulace Peacock, national 100-meters champion, heads the field named for the spring series. The Temple Negro, conqueror of Jesse Owens, is a strong favorite over Sam Maniaci, of Newark, former Columbia star; Manny Krosney, of N. Y. U.; Sol Menaker, of Pittsburgh, and Willard Allen, a newcomer from Rutgers.

The high jump has attracted three stars—George Spitz, of New York Athletic Club; Harold Osborn, former Illinois A. C. ace, and Al Threadgill, of Temple.

Joe McCluskey, national 5,000-meter champion, tops the field in the 3,000-meter special, in which John Wall, national junior champion at 5,000-meters, figures to be the runner-up. Milton Sandler, former N. Y. U. quarter-miler, is the choice to repeat in the 500-meter run.

Three relays and numerous handicap events complete the program.

Celtics to Open Series Here Tonight

New Yorkers Face Heurich After Winning 23 of 24 Road Games.

BASKETBALL'S greatest attraction, the original New York Celtics, will reach Washington early today for a two-game series with the Heurich Brewers, able defenders of the Capital's professional basketball prestige. The Celtics will take their first crack at the Brewers at 8:30 tonight at the Heurich gymnasium.

Great names of basketball grace the Celtics line-up, names such as Joe Lopchick, Dutch Dehnert, Dave Banks, Nat Hickey and Pete Barry. Aged on the wood, so to speak, this combination has not only mellowed into a virtually unbeatable team but actually defies the inroads of Father Time.

Won 23 of 24 Games.

The Celtics are putting the finishing touches on a road trip which has swept through the Middle West with 23 victories in 24 starts. One of the Midwest's super pro teams, the Duffy Floral, of Fort Wayne, Ind., tacked a 40-38 defeat on the New York team, but the Celtics wiped out some of the effects of this let-down by trouncing the Florals twice, soundly.

In the meantime, Heurich's Brewers have been experiencing a fairly successful campaign which saw them reach fast form last Sunday when they administered a sound drubbing to the Detroit Clowns. Anything the Brewers can do to the Celtics will be a tribute to Washington basketball, the team being entirely Washington bred and most of it Washington born.

The other game of the series will be played tomorrow afternoon. A couple of blue-ribbon preliminaries will precede tonight's main event. Eastern High School's inter-high champions, who defeated the Heurich Senate Beer five last week, will give the latter team a chance to make it an even break.

This game will start at 6:45 with the Delaware and Hudson and Rinaldi Tailors meeting in a second prelim at 7:45. Dancing will follow the Celtic-Brewer game. Reserved seats are $1 and general admission 75 cents.

Gallaudet Downs Maryland Normal

After a cautious start, the Gallaudet basketball team went on to rout Maryland State Normal, 36 to 21, last night in the Kendall Green gym. Scoring honors were taken by Hoffmeister and Ellerhorst, of the locals, who tallied 15 and 12 points, respectively.

Leading 14 to 8 at half time the Kendall Greeners were never fewer than 5 points ahead.

In a preliminary game the Gallaudet Jayvees drubbed the Eckington Juniors 46 to 11.

Tonight the Gallaudet varsity meets Loyola of Baltimore, at Kendall Green.

Tropical Bars Horse, Turns Down Another

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 3 (AP).—The stewards today took action against two horses, Mrs. Ethel D. Jacob's Kawagoe and M. B. Cohen's Bonanza.

The officials ordered the further entry of Kawagoe refused for the balance of the meeting for inconsistency in form. Bonanza's entry will be refused until his condition has been passed upon by the track veterinarian. Bonanza, a bad-legged animal, finished well back as favorite in Thursday's third race, while Kawagoe, a winner here December 30, ran last throughout the running in today's third event.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

QUOTING from deep down in the heart of Al Schacht, the most overpaid performer on a Washington stage this week is Al Schacht, who is currently clowning at the Fox. His are the wages of joy. The stage and stage folk are his passion—the theater is his idea of life. If the management but knew it, Al Schacht would work for nothing if he were assured the footlights, the drum-roll and the applause. The guy loves to be "out in front."

POVICH.

During all those years on the ball field, where he became recognized as the diamond's prince of pantomime, Schacht was secretly nursing his ambition to go on the stage. To him the stage was art—not his slapstick stuff with ball and glove. But he knew if he could make 'em laugh out on the ball field, he could make 'em laugh at him on the stage. That was tough out there in the open spaces on the dust of the diamond with no stage effects, no spot light, no acoustics, no wise-cracks to help put his act over. It had to be funny or his stuff would fall flatter than a steam-rollered pancake.

But yesterday as I caught his show from the wings, Al was in his element. Upstairs in his cubby-hole dressing room he had wielded the grease paint and the powder puff as if to the manner born, manifestly reveling in his place in what he, like a true trouper, is already calling "show business." The jargon of the theater fell from his lips as if he had known no other world. He had arrived and he was happy.

They gave him a dinner at the Friars Club in New York a couple of weeks ago. He was proud about that. He'd rather be a member of the Friars Club than own a pennant-winning ball team. He may be the highest paid coach in baseball (which, in fact, he is), but baseball to Schacht was just a stepping stone to show business. That's the life he worshiped from afar. As I was saying, he'd act for nothing, if the show people only knew it.

AFTER his act, Schacht went native and talked baseball. He's all excited about the prospects of a pennant for the Red Sox now that they have Jimmy Foxx and Johnny Marcum with the team. Lefty Grove and Wes Ferrell have only to pitch as well as they did last season and the Sox are in, Schacht thinks. Jimmy Foxx's presence alone will account for 15 more victories than the team won last year, he says.

Like Joe Cronin, who prevailed upon Tom Yawkey to obtain Heinie Manush in the trade with Washington, Schacht doesn't think Manush is through. He anticipates a big year for Heinie in Boston and personally gives the lie to reports that Manush was "laying down" during the past season in Washington. Schacht traveled through Mexico on a barnstorming trip with Manush, who admitted that he simply couldn't hit in 1935; that the harder he bore down, the less he hit.

Manush's trade to the Red Sox came as a joyous surprise to Heinie, according to Schacht. Manush, eager to play again under Joe Cronin, was convinced that he would be traded by the Nats to either Cleveland or the Yankees. The Washington club needed pitchers he knew, and he could not conceive of Griffith letting him go in any trade that did not involve a pitcher, and, with Boston not overstocked with hurling talent, Manush had given up hope of a trade that would send him to the Red Sox.

Getting closer to home. Schacht, like everybody else, blames the collapse of the Washington club on its poor pitching. Throw the pitching out of consideration and it's as good as any club in the league, Al thinks. If Bucky Harris has any luck with his young pitchers in the South, Washington will not only be a first-division club, but will have something to say about the disposition of the pennant, Schacht was saying.

New Club Owners Scrap Name Of 'Braves,' Used Since 1912

By the United Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—The name "Braves," by which the Boston National League baseball team has been known for the last 24 years, was assigned to the scrap heap late today.

With the "Braves" also went all other Indian connotations, including the "Wigwam," name of the team's playing field.

The debunking action was taken at a reorganization meeting at which J. Robert (Bob) Quinn, former general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers and one-time owner of the Boston Red Sox, was named president of the club, which seeks a charter under the name of the Boston National Sports, Inc.

Scrapping of the team's name was in line with the "new deal" promised the Hub's National League baseball fans.

Under a plan promulgated by president, Leopold M. Goulston, of Boston; treasurer, Oscar L. Horton, Athol shoe manufacturer; assistant Quinn, a contest will be conducted among New England baseball fans to determine what the 1936 Boston National League club will be called.

The team has been known as the "Braves" since 1912. Owner John M. Ward christened the club accordingly for James E. Gaffney, friend of Charles V. Murphy, then leader of New York's Tammany club.

Besides Quinn, other officers were elected as follows: Vice treasurer, Ralph E. Deloid, of Wollaston.

Stanford Is Rated Above Princeton

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 3.—Pop Warner, former Stanford coach and now boss of the grid works at Temple University, believes the Indians from Palo Alto could defeat Princeton.

As for the mighty Minnesota team—

"Minnesota has more raw power than Stanford, but even so I'd figure a game between these two teams would be a great battle."

The venerable mentor was more direct about Stanford's chances against Princeton.

"Stanford," he said today, "would be too strong for the Tigers. The Stanford line would stop the Princeton running plays, and you couldn't ask for a better pass defense than the boys put up against Southern Methodist."

Ambers Victor Over Klick On Points

New Yorker Beats Coast Lightweight in Ten Rounds at Garden.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Lou Ambers, the Herkimer, N. Y., hurricane, stepped back into the anteroom to the lightweight championship tonight by trouncing Frankie Klick, vetrean California contender, in a ten-round bout in Madison Square Garden. Ambers weighed 134½ and Klick 133¾.

Ambers, making his first Garden appearance since he broke his jaw in a fight with Fritzi Zivic, of Pittsburgh, six months ago, won the unanimous decision of the referee and two judges. It was Klick's first defeat in seven Garden starts.

Tame Performance.

Only 8,266 customers turned out to pay $18,203 to see a rather tame performance by two of the outstanding lightweight contenders. Tony Canzoneri would have murdered either of them tonight.

The Associated Press scorecard gave Ambers 8 rounds, Klick 1 and called 1 even.

There was only one knockdown and it was not clean. After losing the first 2 minutes of the seventh round, Ambers rallied to chase Klick around the ring. The Californian slipped and a short right toppled him. He remained on the canvas for a count of eight.

Ambers didn't do much punching, but he showed he can take it. Flushed with his success in the sixth, Klick opened the seventh with four hard rights to Lou's jaw. Each carried dynamite, but Ambers laughed them off.

Louis May Battle Feldman on Feb. 3

Jacobs Off to Talk Plans for Detroit Fight.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 3.—Abie Feldman probably will be Joe Louis' opponent in Detroit on February 3. Promoter Mike Jacobs departed today for Chicago to discuss the match with John Roxborough and Julian Black, managers of Louis. However, as terms have been agreed on between Jacobs and Hymie Caplin, manager of Feldman, the match is considered as good as closed. This bout, which will be set for 10 rounds, will come sixteen days after the meeting of Louis and Charley Retzlaff in Chicago.

In these two contests Louis will be meeting opponents of widely different styles. Retzlaff is a dangerous puncher, while Feldman is of the clever mauler type. Though he does not compare in punching power with Retzlaff, Feldman figures to give the Ring Robot the more trouble. The $6,000 expense incurred by Jacobs as a result of the Havana fiasco will come off the top of the Detroit venture.

Stanford, S. M. U. Get $70,000 Each

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 3.—Stanford's single winning touchdown over Southern Methodist in the New Year's Rose Bowl football game cost approximately $33,500 a point to about 85,000 spectators.

Al Masters, Stanford graduate manager, said today a preliminary check showed a gross of $235,000.

The $210,000 net will be divided $70,000 each to Stanford, Southern Methodist, and the Tournament of Roses.

From this must be deducted expenses of about $25,000.

Mack to Get More Cash In Deal

Yawkey to Talk Terms With Foxx, Marcum in Philadelphia.

Phils' Trade Also Looms With Klein Due Back From Cubs.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—Connie Mack, baseball's master auctioneer, was reported today as about ready to let the public officially in on the second half of the player deal which will about wreck his Athletics and may make pennant caliber of the Boston Red Sox.

Next Tuesday was said to be the day he will formally announce that Doc Cramer, outfielder extraordinary, and Infielder Eric McNair will follow Jimmy Foxx and Johnny Marcum to the Sox, in return for which the A.'s will get some players and a young fortune in Tom Yawkey's cash.

Phils' Deal Also Looms.

Along with this report came the rumor that the Phillies—the other local major league club—is about ready to announce its winter trading, and is only waiting until the fanfare of the A's doings has died down.

The Phils are represented as swapping Pitcher Curt Davis to the Chicago Cubs to get back their former heavy-hitting outfielder, Chuck Klein, who liked the local National League Park so much he led the Loop in batting while he performed in it.

Impetus at the moment is being given to the Cramer-McNair-to-Boston sale announcement by the Athletics because of the impending visit of Yawkey to Philadelphia. He is expected here this week-end to talk over contract terms with Foxx and Lefty Grove, the rifle-ball pitcher his cash bought from the Athletics two years ago.

Athletics' 1936 Prospects Dark.

With Foxx, McNair, Cramer and Marcum, the only winning Athletics pitcher in 1935, all gone, American League fans are mourning over the wreckage. Not a performer is left of the once proud club that ruled the American loop three years and the world for two years at the turn of the decade, and the prospects for 1936 are anything but bright.

Just who Boston is sending here is not known, although it is expected there will be considerable young material coming under the wing of the veteran Mack. But more important to the Athletics right now is the fact that along with these players also will come a sum variously estimated at between $300,000 and $500,000

Welsh Is Upset In Tourney, 6–0, 6–0

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 3.—One upset marked first-round matches in the annual Sugar Bowl tennis tournament here today. Barney Welsh, National Public Parks champion of Washington, D. C. was eliminated in love sets by Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla.

While Welsh was bowing, 6—0, 6—0, Wilmer Allison, National champion, was advancing with a 6—3, 7—5 win over Jack Mooney, of Atlanta, former Southern champion. Allison is the defending champion.

Bob Lake, of Birmingham, Ala., defeated Guy Cheng, of Shanghai, Chinese Davis Cup player, 5—7, 6—0, 6—4. Mal Surface, of Kansas City, No. 3 seeded player, eliminated Bob Little, of Birmingham, 6—4, 2—6, 6—0.

J. Gilbert Hall, of East Orange, N. J., seeded No. 2, won from Ed Sutter, of New Orleans, 6—3, 6—1.

Welsh's defeat came as a distinct surprise to local observers who had seen the Washington played sweep to the National Parks title without the loss of a set last year. His performance here then justified expectations that he would be among the top-flight players of the tournament.

Lack of condition was given by his associates as the reason for the defeat. Welsh has not been playing tennis for several months and was obviously in need of seasoning. He never found his shots clicking as they did last year when he dominated the Public Parks championships, outclassing all opposition.

U. S. Athletes Leave For Games in Germany

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—Coming as an aftermath to the bitter, unsuccessful fight to keep the United States from participating in the Olympic games in Germany this year, 45 athletes, wearing the Olympic shield, sailed in the United States liner Manhattan today to take part in the international winter sports program at Garmisch-Partenkirchen.

The departure of the speed skating, skiing, hockey and bobsled squads was without untoward incident. Reports of possible demonstration by anti-Nazi and Olympic-boycott groups failed to materialize.

Don Creole, 9-10 Choice, Scores by Four Lengths at Tropical

Gelding Wins His 3d Race Out of 4

Rosselli Runs Second; Play Chance Fails in Late Bid.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan. 3. Bon Creole, consistent son of Crac Brigade, representing the Detroit-owned Odessa Farms, defeated seven other three-year-olds over the one mile distance of the San Blas Purse here this afternoon. The gelding, making his local record three victories and a second in four starts, skipped home by four lengths to give favorite players their first score in five races.

J. V. Palmer's Rosselli, hard ridden all the way by Herb Lindberg, saved second money by a head from the sluggish starting G. D. Widener colt, Play Chance. Don Creole, well handled by Eddie Arcaro, closed at 9 to 10. He completed the eight furlongs in 1:39 flat under top weight of 113 pounds.

Rosselli offered contention from the start. Arcaro swung Don Creole into the lead around the first turn. He nursed his mount along and the combination gradually drew away, Don Creole running as if much the best. Rosselli held on gamely when Play Chance, away from the races since a winning effort at Empire City last October, offered a closing bid. Trebor rushed up around the home turn only to flatten out and finish fourth.

Sentry Wins Opener.

Sentry, a good second in his last appearance and a $7.60 for $2 second choice to The Gong, survived one of the closest finishes of the meeting to graduate from the maiden ranks in the initial contest. A half dozen of the 12 starters could have been covered with a blanket passing the judges, with Sentry holding on to his slight advantage to head Trujillo. Senator D. edged out The Gong, which broke on the wrong foot and finished with a belated rush.

Tiny Georgie Watson, who has been in the background at the meeting while brother Bobby has been riding so many winners, finally broke through with a bang in the second event. The little fellow scored his initial success here astride the $46.10 shot, Balmacan.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CROWNED HEAD, $5.60, $3.50, $2.60; MATHIAS, $5.20, $3.50; DARK MISSION, $4.70.

CROWNED HEAD sent to the front soon after the start, was rated along and easily held race safe. MATHIAS followed pace gamely and ran good race. DARK MISSION finished very fast. PASS SHOT closed a big gap. CELIBA quit badly.

G. W. High Five Winner Over Mt. Rainier

Wins Its Fifth Game in Six Starts, Defeating Foe by 26-14 Score.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 3.—The fast-stepping George Washington High School basketball team today picked up where it left off before the Christmas holidays by winning its fifth game in six starts, defeating Mount Rainier High, 26 to 14, in the local gymnasium.

George Washington was off to an early lead on Ben Burrell's field goal. Tillie Scott, Mount Rainier guard, matched this score, however, and the two teams batted on even terms throughout the opening quarter. At the half the Presidents were in possession of a 12-to-7 lead. Scott was the only invading performer to score during the first two quarters, counting three field goals and a foul for all of his team's points.

During the last half, with Scott covered by Tom Ennis, Mount Rainier was badly outclassed and outscored. With Burrell and Nugent leading the way, the Presidents were out in front by an 1-to-12 count at the end of the third quarter, and lengthened this to the final score of 26 to 14.

Autos in Lead As Steel Buyer For 4th Year

Building Industry Is Next in Rank Followed by Containers.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 3—The automotive industry was the principal consumer of finished steel in 1935 for the fourth consecutive year, states the magazine Steel in its annual statistical number.

Automobile, parts and allied manufacturers took 24.04 per cent of the steel industry's output last year, compared with 20.87 per cent in 1934, 20.95 per cent in 1933, and 18.05 per cent in 1932.

Second leading consuming outlet for finished steel in 1935 was the building industry, at 13.01 per cent. It also was second in 1934, at 12.70 per cent.

Due largely to the trend toward merchandising beer, oil and other products in cans, the container industry went into third place last year at 9.30 per cent, against 8.68 per cent in 1934.

Railroads Fourth.

This broader market for steel containers pushed the railroads down into fourth place, at 7.75 per cent. In 1934 the railroads took 12.96 per cent of all finished steel. This is the lowest proportion consumed by the railroads in the 14 years that Steel has been compiling consumption figures.

Other principal outlets for steel in 1935 were agriculture, 4.74 per cent; machinery, 4.37 per cent; oil gas and water, 4.29 per cent, and exports, 3.85 per cent. Jobbers took 14.43 per cent, and all other classifications a total of 14.22 per cent.

Finished rolled steel output in 1935 is estimated by the magazine Steel at 24,142,320 gross tons, after giving effect to about a 30 per cent loss in the conversion process from ingots to finished products.

Advertising Volume Expands in November

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—The November gain in general advertising activity was the largest of the first 11 months of the year in contrast with 1934 periods, Printer's Ink reported today in its advertising index.

For November the index stood at 83.2 against 79.0 for October and 74.9 for November, 1934.

Phillips Petroleum Raises Wages of 6,000

Bartlesville, Okla., Jan. 3 (AP).—A wage increase averaging $5 monthly and affecting 6,000 employes was announced today by Frank Phillips, president of the Phillips Petroleum Co.

The raises become effective for the January 9 pay roll, distributed among workers drawing $135 monthly and less.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

The houses are fabricated at the Middletown, Ohio, plant of the American Rolling Mills.

Bombay Bars Importation of Foreign Silver

Move Is Believed to Be an Effort to Prevent Increase in Stocks.

By the Associated Press.

Bombay, Jan. 3.—The Bombay bullion board today adopted a resolution prohibiting members from importing silver from foreign countries.

The resolution permits the squaring of standard forward transactions in silver commencing tomorrow.

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—Silver brokers in New York interpreted the Bombay prohibition today on the importation of foreign silver as a means for preventing an increase in the possibly over-large metal stocks and to stop arbitraging with London.

London Price Lower.

It was pointed out by one authority that the London price fell ⅜ of a penny today and that with the Bombay attempts to hold a stable Indian silver price the London decline opened the way to a possible profit in arbitraging buying low in London and selling higher in Bombay.

In a free market such action would tend to depress the Indian price and at the same time add to the Eastern stocks which are believed here to be too large already for easy control.

The price for imported bar silver was set today at 49¾ cents an ounce by Handy & Harman, New York silver brokers, unchanged from the previous day. The steadiness of New York silver came in the face of a drop of ⅜ of a penny in the London price to 21½ pence an ounce, equivalent to 47.73 cents a fine ounce in New York. In Montreal, silver futures dropped about 2 cents following the posting of the London price.

New Rail Equipment Will Cost $6,000,000

Pittsburgh, Jan. 3 (AP).—The Bessemer & Lake Erie and Union Railroads announce that they will send out inquiries immediately regarding construction of 3,000 steel cars and 25 locomotives, involving approximately $6,000,000. The companies will ask for early delivery in 1936. There will be 1,000 90-ton and 1,000 70-ton hopper cars and 1,000 70-ton mill-type gondolas.

The two railroads are subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation and haul practically all the iron ore from the huge Lake terminal docks at Conneaut, Ohio, to this district.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance in More Active Trading; Government Bonds Are Strong.

New York, Jan. 3.—With a turnover of 2,846,000 shares, the largest in a month, stocks advanced on most fronts, in spite of mild losses in a few groups during part of the day. Bonds also continued strong, particularly in the Treasury group. Commodities were mixed, grains and silver weakening, and cotton sagging a trifle. May wheat closed a half cent lower at 101⅞ cents a bushel.

Bankers, brokers and other businessmen too, for that matter, while gathering up the loose ends of the new year, were absorbed in speculation over what President Roosevelt might say in his address to Congress. Interest was keen on the point as to whether any indication might be given of a possible new shift in course, to right or left, and whether the old animosity against bankers in particular, and profitable business enterprise in general, was still nourished.

Bonus Expected.

On specific subjects it was not supposed that the President would go far into detail, but that rather he would leave such subjects as a bonus, appropriations, budget balancing, currency, silver, and the like for further discussion in special messages. More politics than usual was expected for tonight's address, and in a sense Wall Street hoped that would be the case, so that it might get some inkling of what to expect from Congress and the Administration in the next few months.

Meanwhile, the confidence shown by leaders in the Senate and the House over the quick passage of a soldiers' bonus bill had, strangely enough, a mildly stimulating effect on stocks without stopping the strong advance of bonds. Perhaps the bond market was too much under the influence of reinvestment demand and cheap money to worry much about the essential inflationary nature of a bonus payment, even of a billion dollars; but most stock traders are under no illusions on that score. They believe a bonus will not only mean the quick spending of the money for, in the main, nonessentials (industries which already are prosperous enough), but that also it will help to promote inflation of credit.

Banking Troubles.

The suspension of a well known Swiss banking firm yesterday recalled that the Swiss banking difficulties, brought about by too much faith in German investments and by too generous mortgage lending, were still latent forces of unsettlement for the gold standard countries. The Swiss franc was weak and the French franc, as the kingpin of the gold bloc arch, got the full force of the blow from the Alps, sinking almost to the gold point. Sterling was nicely balanced all day and barely moved.

An interesting light is thrown on the stock market by today's publication of the reports to SEC for corporation officers, directors and large stockholders, covering changes in stock ownership during November. There was a period when industrial and utility stocks (about the middle of the month) reached a peak, since which they have lost a little ground, although the railroad shares kept on going until early in December.

On the face of the reports, the large holders and directors, usually referred to as insiders—sold a good deal of stock, much more than has been reported in any one month for some time. Under the heading of gift transfers the change in ownership increased considerably. Probably the approach of the holiday season had something to do with it, but in any event that was merely a stronger set of a current that has been making for some time.

Picking the Top.

It is not clear just how much gift sales entered into transactions reported merely as sales. Some cases of large transfers are known to have been intended as gifts; they kept the stock in the family and do not justify the conclusion that insiders considered the time had come to sell. On the other hand certain other sales by no means were gifts, nor were they, it may be assumed, made for the purpose of establishing profits or losses for income tax purposes. They were the taking of profits or the shifting of accounts because of belief that prices were high enough, at least for the stocks in question; or that better opportunities were available. That is particularly true of some of the investment trust sales.

If stocks reached a peak in November, justifying sales made by some large holders, they also made a good recovery by the end of the month from their prices at the beginning. It is that fact which is helping to sustain good feeling toward the immediate future of the market. The Sun's compilation of prices for 225 representative issues last month shows, for the ninth consecutive month, an expansion of prices. The rise amounted to 3.7 per cent. Of 24 groups used, only 4 (tobacco, leather, chain store and miscellaneous) declined. So-called commodity groups—rubbers, oils and paper products—led the advance, lending some color to the talk of inflationary sentiment as a market factor.

Sold.

Liquidation of large blocks of stock in two companies in November, reported by SEC today, attracted some attention (although one already had been reported), in view of the fact that both stocks have been under the surveillance of the authorities. They were sales of Atlas Tack and Beech-Nut, both by the same holder. It was also noted with interest that Edward G. Budd had sold 44,225 shares of Budd Wheel, a stock which some time back flashed into the speculative spotlight.

Beating the Gun.

Investment bankers and security dealers in general hope it is true as reported from Washington, that the SEC intends to proceed against any who beat the gun on new offerings. In issuing the so-called red-herring prospectus to dealers three days in advance of the official offering, bankers have been giving an advantage to the less scrupulous dealers without intending so to do.

Freight Traffic In 1935 Attains Four-Year Peak

466,679 Total for Week of Dec. 28 Reflects Holiday Dip.

By the Associated Press.

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 31,518,372 cars were loaded with revenue freight in 1935, indicating the greatest freight traffic since 1931. The 12-month figure was an increase of 672,412 cars or 2.2 per cent, over 1934 and an increase of 2,298,320, or 7.9 per cent, over 1933. The 1935 figures, however, still were 5,632,877 cars, or 15.2 per cent, under 1931.

Loadings for the week ended December 28 totaled 466,679 cars, a decrease of 132,855 below the preceding week, an increase of 41,275 over 1934 and an increase of 11,914 over 1933. The reduction under the preceding week was attributed to the Christmas holiday.

Cotton Belt Road Gets Sole Trustee

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Jan. 3.—Berryman Henwood, Jefferson City, Mo., lawyer and former judge of the State supreme court, was appointed sole trustee in bankruptcy for the St. Louis Southwestern (Cotton Belt) Railway by United States District Judge Charles B. Davis today.

The railroad filed a petition for reorganzation under the bankruptcy law December 12, admitting inability to pay $24,958,992 in matured and maturing obligations.

In announcing his selection of Henwood, Judge Davis said it appeared "advisable" that the trustee "have no connection with the management of the road, no financial interest in the property and no affiliation with an individual, corporation or group that is interested in the debtor's estate.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

A sharp break in the French franc incident to renewed political and economic tension in France was the principal feature of foreign exchange markets yesterday.

In New York, the French currency was offered liberally and fell .01⅛ of a cent to 6.59⅛ cents, and Holland guilders moved sympathetically lower to 67.87 cents, off .11 of a cent on balance. The British pound sterling held unchanged at $4.92⅞.

In London the dollar was steady at 4.92⅛ to the pound and in Paris it was higher at 6.595 cents to the franc.

Railway Buys Mine In Order to Close It

London, Jan. 3.—The London, Midland & Scottish Railway has bought a coal mine, one of whose principal veins passed beneath its tracks between Nuneaton and Tamworth in Staffordshire. Mining operations caused the railroad management to limit train speeds through the area to 30 miles per hour, which led to a two minutes' delay of every train on the line. Now the mining will be stopped, the mine filled up and trains will return to their normal speed of 65 to 75 miles per hour.

U. S. Wheat Firm; Liverpool Weak

Fifth Federal Reserve Bank Reports Gains

November Failures Are Fewest for Month Since 1919.

The monthly review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reports that between November 13 and December 11, last year, total loans and discounts rose by $5,238,000, of which $2,967,000 was in loans on securities and $2,271,000 was in all other loans, the latter being chiefly commercial loans at this season. On the other hand, the 41 reporting banks in 12 leading cities of the Fifth Federal Reserve District decreased their investments in securities by $15,595,000 during the month, but added $9,500,000 to their aggregate reserve at the reserve banks.

Cash in vault rose by $1,061,000 between November 13 and December 11, a seasonal rise due to increased use of cash in holiday trade. Demand deposits in the reporting banks rose $4,705,000 during the past month, but time deposits declined by $914,000, the latter a normal development in December.

In comparison with condition figures for December 12, 1934, those for December 11, 1935, show a decline in total loans amounting to $10,270,000. Loans on stocks and bonds dropped $6,550,000 during the year, and all other loans decreased by $3,720,000. The reporting banks increased their investments by $10,589,000 during the year, and added $46,304,000 to their reserve balance at the Federal Reserve Bank.

Deposits Rise.

Cash in vault on the 1935 date showed an increase of $518,000 over the 1934 figure. Deposits rose by $54,616,000 between the middle of December last year and this, demand deposits accounting for $50,445,000 of the increase and time deposits for $4,171,000. None of the 41 banks was borrowing at the reserve bank on either the 1934 or 1935 date.

Figures on business failures in November in the United States numbered 927, with liabilities totaling $20,023,172, compared with 923 failures and liabilities totaling $18,349,791 in November, 1934, according to Dun & Bradstreet Monthly Review for December.

In the Fifth Federal Reserve District the November record was much better than the National record. Failures in the district in November 1935 numbering 34 were fewer than 39 failures in November, 1934, and liabilities totaling $546,640 last month compared with $550,802 in November last year, decreases in the district in both number of failures and aggregate liabilities in contrast with increases reported for the United States. Both the number of failures and aggregate liabilities involved were the lowest in the Fifth district for any November since 1919.

Packard Motor Votes Ten-Cent Dividend

Detroit, Jan. 3 (AP).—The Packard Motor Car Co. announced a dividend today of 10 cents per share on its outstanding common no-par value shares, payable February 11 to stockholders of record at the close of business January 15. Merlin A. Cudlip, secretary of the company, said the books would not be closed.

Henry Schroder Banking Corporation, special agents, announced today.

A. & P. Chain May Lop Stores In Tax States

Company Is Weighing 2 Plans to Segregate Units Affected.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 3.—John A. Hartford, president of the 15,000-store chain of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., disclosed today that the Nation-wide grocery chain was considering divorcing itself from its stores in States with heavy chain-store taxes.

In a letter to William T. Dewart, president of the Sun, he said consideration had been given to converting part of the Atlantic & Pacific chain into a co-operative organization and also to plans for selling stores to local managers. He said:

"Although we have made no definite decision about what we are going to do if the present deluge of antichain-store tax bills continues unabated in certain States, we have naturally given this subject a great deal of thought and study. In the event that we receive no relief from discriminatory legislation in the courts, there are two courses open to us," Hartford continued.

"We have, of course, made an exhaustive study of the so-called voluntary and co-operative chains. We have discussed the possibility of turning over our stores to our managers in States where taxation is excessive, on a lease or agency basis.

New Tax Expected.

"However, there are objections to this plan, and I am convinced that the voluntary groups will be the next class of retail stores to be burdened with special taxes.

"The simplest and most workable plan would be to sell our stores to our managers in the States where discriminatory taxes are passed, and enter the wholesale food business. Our warehouses, equipment, supervisory and buying staffs, would enable us, I believe, to service manager-owned and other good independent retailers, much more efficiently than most wholesalers."

Hartford wrote that "any plan we adopt to meet adverse legislation will give first consideration to the security of our employes."

Farm Machine Sales Increase 75% in Year

New York, Jan. 3.—Sales of agricultural machinery manufacturers during 1935 are currently estimated to have exceeded 1934 by about 75 per cent, according to the Standard Statistics Co., which also states that leading tractor and farm equipment producers are now making plans to take care of additional sales in 1936 of around 25 per cent.

Recent reports indicate that these expectations are reasonable. Tractors are still selling well despite the fact that the current period is seasonably slow. Thus, although dealers are still buying in fair volume, stocks in the hands of selling outlets are low. Meanwhile, manufacturers are maintaining a high rate of production to build up supplies for the spring selling season and to prevent a recurrence of their experience in the early months of 1935, when stocks proved inadequate.

In the final analysis, however, sales of farm machinery vary directly with aggregate farm income. With 1935 cash farm income estimated to exceed by at least 8.5 per cent the 1934 total, good spring business in tractors and implements, as well as satisfactory collections on existing accounts, is indicated.

Continuance of the AAA is not assured, and an adverse Supreme Court decision would undoubtedly have unsettling repercussions. The longer outlook for farm equipment companies, nevertheless, would remain promising because of essential need for new modern equipment following a long period of inadequate purchases. Moreover, this country is definitely committed to a program of farm aid, whether under Democratic or Republican rule, and it is believed that another farm aid administration to accomplish legally the same purposes, would be substituted for the AAA should the latter be ruled unconstitutional.

'Big Four' Banks Expand Resources

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 3.—The four largest New York banks reported today an increase of more than $896,000,000 in total resources during the year ended December 31, 1935.

Cab Collision Victim To Be Buried Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 3.—Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Robert S. McCoy, 48, who was killed as a result of an accident Wednesday at Williamsport, Pa. Services will be conducted by the Rev. H. R. Hoover, at the Grove Funeral home. Burial will be in Green Hill cemetery.

McCoy, a native of Waynesboro, died in the Williamsport Hospital where he was taken following the collision of a taxi cab, in which he was riding as a passenger, with another car at a Williamsport street intersection. He is survived by the widow, four children, his parents and two sisters, all of whom live in Waynesboro.

Icy Roads Close Schools.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., Jan. 3.—The public schools of Northumberland County will not open until Monday, W. S. Brent, superintendent of schools in Northumberland and Lancaster Counties, announced today, owing to the icy conditions of the roads and danger of pupils traveling in school buses. The schools in the county were to have reopened Thursday. Lancaster County schools opened yesterday.

Wide Variety of Topics to Mark Pastors' Sermons in the Capital Tomorrow

Mid-Winter's Rites Planned By Lutherans

Holy Communion Services to Be Held Tomorrow Morning at 11.

The congregation at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation will observe its midwinter service of holy communion at 11 a. m. worship tomorrow. The Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, D. D., will speak on "What He Hath Touched."

Communion will be observed at the close of the 8 p. m. service, when a New Year program will be presented. Dr. Blackwelder will speak on "When Dreams Come True."

The Women's Missionary Society will visit the Washington Hebrew Congregation Temple Tuesday night. They will hear a talk by Rabbi Abram Simon on the significance of the sanctuary.

Luther Place Memorial Church. The Rev. Carl C. Rasmussen, D. D., pastor. "Before God Was Known Through Christ" is the theme Dr. Rasmussen will discuss at his morning service tomorrow. Harry E. Yeide will be vocal soloist.

Dr. C. C. Hung, pastor of the recently organized Chinese church of Washington, will deliver a lecture on his work among the Chinese, at the meeting of the Men's Brotherhood Thursday night.

'God' to Be Subject In Christ Churches

"God" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 86: 8, 10:

"Among the gods there is none like unto Thee, O Lord; . . . For Thou art great, and doest wondrous things: Thou art God alone."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible:

"And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward."—Matthew 10:42.

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"Millions of unprejudiced minds—simple seekers for Truth, weary wanderers athirst in the desert—are waiting and watching for rest and drink. Give them a cup of cold water in Christ's name, and never fear the consequences."—(Page 570.)
